Ports Struck From Maine to Texas

TOO COLD TO GO OUTSIDE—IN ALASKA — Two youngsters in Fairbanks, Alaska, prepare to go out into the cold from the comfort of a nice warm home as Alaska went into its second month of a severe cold snap, with temperatures dipping down to a minus 75 degrees in some areas. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — The 60,000-member longshoremen's union struck ports from Maine to Texas at 12:01 a.m. today.

Objections among rank-and-file union members in New York to a clause in a proposed new contract providing for a gradual reduction in work gangs apparently triggered the strike.

The walkout, in effect, is a resumption of the one-day walkout last Oct. 1 when the work contract expired. At that time, President Johnson invoked the Taft-Hartley Act and a federal court injunction sent the men back to work during an 80-day cooling-off period. The government's injunctive power now is exhausted.

The White House gave no indication of any presidential action in the new strike. Informed sources in Washington said President Johnson probably would act only if it appeared there would be an immediate crippling of the national economy.

Extra longshoremen were employed in New York and several other ports at weekend overtime pay rates to speed passenger and cargo ships to sea before the strike deadline. More than 20 ships left the port of New York Sunday.

Scores of ships were stranded in various ports, however.

The strike resulted primarily from the action of New York members of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association in rejecting the proposed contract with the New York Shipping Association. Agreements reached between the ILA and the association, which represents 145 shipping and stevedoring companies, traditionally set the pattern for contracts in other ports. There also were contract disputes on local issues in several South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Union President Thomas W. Gleason said he was "shocked" by the contract rejection in the port of New York in a union membership vote last Friday. He had called the contract the best in the 72-year history of the union.

Asst. Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds said Sunday that the New York stalemate was caused by failure of the union membership to understand the contract terms. Reynolds said he thought the strike would fail.

Associates of Gleason said the union president would seek meetings of all the union's locals here today or Tuesday to try to "sell" the contract and get another vote on it.

Reynolds went to Washington Sunday night to report to Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz but he was due back in New York today for a scheduled meeting with the ILA's 23-men executive council. Gleason called in the officials from the affected ports for what he described as a strategy meeting.

Invaders From Indonesia Are Beaten Back

By TONY ESCODA

KUALA LUMPUR, Maaysia (AP) — The remnants of the latest Indonesian invaders of Malaysia were believed trying to get back home as security forces continued to search for them on the beaches of the southern mainland.

Four fishing boats were reported stolen at the seaside town of Pontian Kechil in Jhore State, near the spot where the party of 24 landed Friday. Eleven were still at large.

Thirteen of the invaders, incuding a major who led them, have been captured. Indonesian guerrillas have been landing on the Malaysian mainland in small groups since last August.

The British military buildup against a major Indonesian attack continued on Malaysian Borneo. British Army Minister Fred Mulley flew to the area today.

Britain's 500-man 2nd Parachute Battalion, flown to Singapore from England last week, started jungle training at Ulu Triam camp on the Malaysian mainland.

The Royal Navy and Royal Air Force in the area have been reinforced in recent weeks.

Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman made a new appeal for U.S. help.

"If the Americans want to help us, now is the time. It is useless to give help when it is already late," he said in an interview.

Malaysia has rejected a U.S. defense loan because it considered the terms too harsh. They called for repayment of the loan over seven years at 5 per cent interest.

Indonesia's chief delegate to the United Nations, L. N. Palar, returned to Jakarta to report to his government. Antara, the Indonesia news agency, said he conferred Sunday night with Foreign Minister Subandrio and Subandrio approved the "attitude and policy" followed by Palar's delegation.

Ethel Kennedy Gives Birth to Her Ninth Child

NEW YORK (AP) — Ethel Kennedy, wife of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., gave birth by Caesarian section early today to an eight-pound son at Roosevelt Hospital.

The hospital said mother and baby were fine.

It is the Kennedys' ninth child. They have six boys and three girls.

The senator accompanied his wife to the hospital Sunday. Mrs. Kennedy, who will be 37 in April, had a previous child by Caesarian section in Boston July 4, 1963.

The oldest child, Kathleen, 13, also was born on July 4.

The senator and his wife are the only members of the Kennedy clan to match Joseph P. Kennedy and Rose Kennedy, child for child. The grandparents had four sons and five daughters.

Bulldozers Try To Dent Huge Mountain Slide

HOPE, B.C. (AP) — Bulldozers tried today to dent a 100-foot wall of broken mountain that buried a highway and became a graveyard for four persons over the weekend.

Two bodies still were missing as searchers probed the devastation, where tons of earth crashed down into a valley, rumbled across its half-mile width and swept up the other side early Saturday.

Volunteer rescuers, who uncovered two victims Sunday, worked with one eye on the mountainside above them. Tiny clusters of rock tumbled intermittently down the slope.

The victims were killed as they tried to extract a convertible trapped in a small slide that preceded the main one.

They were identified as Vance Beck of Penticton, B.C.; Thomas Starchuk of Aldergrove, B.C.; Dennis Arlitt, 23, also of Penticton, and Mary Kalmakoff, 21, of Shoreacres, B.C. The bodies of Arlitt and Miss Kalmakoff still are missing.

The mountainside sheared off under the weight of deep snows and the effect of a sudden thaw. It came down 10 miles east of Hope, 110 miles east of Vancouver.

A truck driver who warned the victims to move out of the area said he knew more of the mountain was going to come down.

"I could hear it working and rumbling up there," said Norman Stephanishin, 42.

Maestas Pleads Guilty to Two Charges

Henry Eddie Maestas pleaded guilty in District Court this morning to simple robbery and conspiracy. The charges carry a combined possible maximum sentence of 24 years in the state penitentiary.

Maestas, 28, 513 Walnut St. was first charged with aggravated robbery and conspiracy and had pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity. He withdrew the pleas this morning after the district attorney's office represented by Montell Dunn amended the charges to the lesser offense.

The defendant has had approximately five trial dates set in the past and five continuances. On one occasion he appeared in court for trial but was under the influence of narcotics to such an extent that the trial had to be postponed.

He is a self confessed drug addict and today his attorney

Petitions Again Seek Recall of Fountain Council

Carriers of petitions to recall the entire Fountain Town Council and mayor plan to present them tonight to Town Clerk Michael Rasher, they said this morning.

Petitions reportedly had 183 signatures.

Approximately 140 signatures of qualified voters would be needed for a successful recall to have a new election of town officials.

Organizers said they planned to check the 183 names against registration lists to be sure that signers were registered voters.

The seven petitions name for recall Mayor Dee J. Hankins, Councilwoman Elva Orcutt and Councilmen Rufus Marshall, Henry Dan Kelling, John Bryant, Walter Fortman and Wilmer Foreman.

Petitions would be presented at the regular Council (Trustee) meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the municipal building.

Acceptance of the petitions is up to Clerk Rasher.

An earlier recall petition, circulated last year, named the seven officials and was later ruled invalid by town officials.

Officials said the earlier petition did not comply with state statutes governing the recall process for several reasons. They included: signing of the petition before the Council was in office six months; and one, instead of seven petitions for recalling the seven officials.

The latest petition lists some of the earlier reasons for recalling the Council and mayor, in addition to dismissal of Police Chief William Soltwedel and Patrolmen William Miller and Guy Nugent Dec. 22.

The Council has set Jan. 21 as the date for a public hearing on Soltwedel's dismissal.

Defector Says Nasser Police Use Torture

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Egyptian who claims he defected from the United Arab Republic's secret police told a news conference today the people of the U.A.R. are tired of President Gamal Abdel Nasser and are "terribly annoyed at the U.S. backing of his regime."

Abdul Ghadir Owdeh entered Iran Jan. 2 and said he was assigned to agitate against Iran's pro-Western government in the Persian Gulf area.

He told newsmen he had found living conditions under Nasser's "police state" impossible.

He said his father, a leader of the Moslem brotherhood, was executed by the Nasser regime in 1954.

After serving in the army, Owdeh said he joined the secret police, which he said was a force of 100,000 men.

Owdeh claimed that Nasser's regime spends $1.5 million a day on the "torturing police force."

He asked that Iranian authorities use their influence to prevent Nasser torturing his six brothers and his ailing mother who still are in Cairo. Owdeh was granted political asylum in Iran.

Polio Almost Vanishes From United States

By DON McKEE

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Polio has almost vanished from the United States within a scant decade in one of medicine's most dramatic triumphs over an ancient scourge of mankind.

"It is apparent that with a continued effort to vaccinate the yet unreached young people and the newborn babies, we can eliminate poliomyelitis as a public health problem in this country in the near future," a government agencies reports.

That is a statement from the Communicable Disease Center of the U.S. Public Health Service. It comes only 10 years after Salk vaccine opened the way to conquer polio.

The statistics behind that statement are even more impressive.

It was in 1952 that crippling polio reached a terrible peak in the United States. That year 57,879 persons fell victim to the disease, 3,145 died and many were left with the crippling effects of polio.

Last year there were only 121

Detroit's Hotel Strike Faces Legal Battle

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's five-day-old hotel strike and lockout moved toward a legal battle today as the city prepared to welcome an estimated 10,000 new guests.

The Detroit regional office of the National Labor Relations Board scheduled a hearing on a union charge that the lockout was an unfair labor practice by the hotels. The union charged coercion of its members.

Local 705 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers, headed by Myra Wolfgang, veteran Detroit labor leader, and the affiliated Bartenders International were the complainants.

Approximately 2,500 hotel service employes are idle in a wage dispute.

Nine major Detroit hotels — two of them struck, the other seven declining to continue employment for members of the union faced up to an invasion of new guests.

The Society of Automotive Engineers was starting its annual convention, a big event for motor-minded Detroit.

Managements promised to do their best despite the crimp in regular staff help, including maids, kitchen workers, and porters.

So far, with guests pitching in to make their beds and meet other needs on their own, no insurmountable problems have come up, hotel officials said.

"We've had a few complaints but nothing serious," said M. G.

Soviets Confirm Launching of New Satellite

Soviet Space officials today confirmed what the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) had known for several hours — that a new Soviet Satellite is now in orbit around the earth. The satellite, named Cosmos 52, was launched early today.

NORAD received its information on orbital objects through the combined facilities of the space nets of the United States and Canadian forces. The data is digested in giant computers at the NORAD headquarters in Colorado Springs. The entire operation is termed The Space Detection and Tracking System (SPADATS), which is now accounting for nearly 500 objects actually in orbit.

For an example of just what SPADATS has in its inventory, today's overall tally is now 488 man-made objects in orbit around the earth. Of these, 129

Solons Urge New Probe of Handling Defectors

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON, (Special) — Two Ohio legislators are quietly setting the stage for Congress to make its own review of the State Department's and Immigration Service's handling of Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President Kennedy.

Representative Michael Feighan, D., and Senator Frank Lausche, D., plan to trigger the congressional inquiry this month by introducing legislation for the establishment of a national commission, made up of representatives from all branches of government and the public, to handle all cases of U. S. and Soviet defectors.

They also are preparing legislation "providing for the loss of nationality in the case of an individual entering a Communist country with the intent to transfer his allegiance from the U.S. to that country."

Working closely with other members of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees, the two Ohio Democrats plan to use the hearings on the legislation to question State Department and Immigration authorities thoroughly on why Oswald, who spent two years in the Soviet Union after defecting from the U. S., was permitted to return to this country.

They will seek a report on what the two agencies have done to prevent another Oswald case, and call for a full accounting and the present whereabouts of all U. S. defector, including those who reportedly have returned to the U. S.

Representative Feighan and Senator Lausche are unhappy with the way the Warren Commission, in investigating the assassination of President Kennedy, brushed this important chapter in Oswald's life under the rug.

The commission, which held the State Department blameless, did not question several important diplomats involved in Oswald's return to the U. S.

One of the officials not called to testify was responsible for

Snowstorm Stops Travel, Schools, in Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy snowstorms swirled through the Northeast Sunday, disrupting air travel and endangering highway traffic. Officials announced schools would be closed today in many areas.

Virginia's first major storm of the season dumped a foot of snow in the northern and western parts of the state, closing schools in five counties.

In West Virginia, three persons were killed on icy U.S. 460 near Princeton and driving conditions throughout much of the state were hazardous. From two to six inches of snow blanketed the western and southern sections of the state and nine inches was recorded in Martinsburg in the Eastern Panhandle.

To the north, special snow plans were put into effect in the Philadelphia area, where a swirling snowstorm left 5 to 12 inches, slowing air traffic at the Philadelphia International Airport. The Harrisburg-York airport was closed all day.

Near Ebensburg, Pa., a Greyhound bus swerved off a snow-covered highway ramp, plunging down a 30-foot embankment into a small stream. Ten persons were hospitalized and nine others were treated and released.

Gov. William W. Scranton was forced by bad weather to cancel a scheduled appearance at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg.

The Washington, D.C., area struggled under 4 to 8 inches of snow and emergency plans were set in motion in nearby Baltimore and 19 Maryland counties.

Heavy snows in the New York City area forced cancellation or diverted more than 300 flights at Kennedy International Airport, although operations were not shut down. Inbound transatlantic flights temporarily were rerouted to Boston and Montreal.

Vehicles without chains or snow tires were banned from major arterial routes in New York. Five inches of snow fell in midtown Manhattan and eight inches covered some suburbs.

New Jersey had up to 8 inches of snow and a 3-year-old boy was killed in a weather-connected accident.

Upstate New York got by with just flurries and bitter cold temperatures.

The northern New England ski areas, suffering, from a lack of snow, also was by-passed but the southern section of the six-

Taxicab Driver Shot by Holdup Man in Springs

A taxicab driver transporting a man from the Continental Bus Station to the Loop Cafe in Manitou was shot in the hand by the man Sunday, police reported.

Neal L. Jackson, 35, 429 N. Franklin St., told police he picked up a man at the Continental Bus Station at approximately 8:45 p.m. Sunday, and the man told him to take him to the Loop Cafe in Manitou Springs. Jackson said he would, and as he was driving along W. Pikes Peak Avenue in the 3400 block, the man pulled a gun and held it against the back of Jackson's head, saying "hold it, this is a real gun, stop."

Jackson said he then fell to his right side into the front seat and reached up with his left hand, at the same time stopping the cab. He said he got hold of the gun and it went off, hitting Jackson in the ring finger on his left hand. At this point the unknown man jumped from the car and fled.

Jackson was taken to Penrose Hospital and treated for the wound. Police said the shot broke Jackson's finger.

Jackson described the man as being a white male, approximately 29 years old, five feet nine inches tall, and wearing a dark cloth coat. He said the man had dark blonde hair, was wearing plain rimmed glasses, and spoke with a southern accent.

Police said no arrests have been made yet in connection with the shooting.

Gunman Held in Probe of Robbery Attempt

A man was being held for investigation of attempted robbery and assault with a deadly weapon today after he exchanged several pistol shots with a liquor store owner early Sunday morning, police reported.

Buford Lee Wyckoff, owner of Lee's Liquor, 512 W. Colorado Ave., told police that he closed his shop and went to his car at approximately 12:40 a.m. Sunday. Wyckoff said when he got in his car he noticed that a mat which he usually has in the back seat was spread out over the front seat. He said he then got out of the car, and at this time a person got out the right rear door of the car and circled around to the front of the car.

Wyckoff said he then pulled a .25 automatic pistol from his pocket, and began to back away, and at this time the person fired a shot at him. Wyckoff said he then backed off to get out of the man's line of fire, and yelled at him to get out of there. He said he then fired his pistol four times at the man, and the man fled down an alley next to the vacant lot where Wyckoff's car was parked.

At this time Wyckoff contacted police, and at 12:45 a.m. Sunday police apprehended a man wearing a top coat and armed with a .22 caliber starting pistol at Bijou Street and Pine Street.

The man, identified as Benjamin Franklin Moore, 29, Ft. Carson, told police he had been hiding in Wyckoff's car to escape from two men who were following him. Moore said he thought Wyckoff was one of the men chasing him, so he fired at him a total of three times with his starter pistol, and then fled when Wyckoff fired back.

Approximately 140 signatures of qualified voters would be needed for a successful recall to have a new election of town officials.

Organizers said they planned to check the 183 names against registration lists to be sure that signers were registered voters.

The seven petitions name for recall Mayor Dee J. Hankins, Councilwoman Elva Orcutt and Councilmen Rufus Marshall, Henry Dan Kelling, John Bryant, Walter Fortman and Wilmer Foreman.

Petitions would be presented at the regular Council (Trustee) meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the municipal building.

Acceptance of the petitions is up to Clerk Rasher.

An earlier recall petition, circulated last year, named the seven officials and was later ruled invalid by town officials.

Officials said the earlier petition did not comply with state statutes governing the recall process for several reasons. They included: signing of the petition before the Council was in office six months; and one, instead of seven petitions for recalling the seven officials.

The latest petition lists some of the earlier reasons for recalling the Council and mayor, in addition to dismissal of Police Chief William Soltwedel and Patrolmen William Miller and Guy Nugent Dec. 22.

The Council has set Jan. 21 as the date for a public hearing on Soltwedel's dismissal.

Symposium Told World Is Facing New Synthesis

This age is seeing the greatest intellectual synthesis in the history of mankind, Dr. Theodore T. Puck, professor and chairman of the Department of Biophysics, University of Colorado, said here Sunday night.

Dr. Puck was the keynote speaker at the opening session of the annual week-long symposium at Colorado College. The topic this year is "The New Science."

Dr. Puck told a crowd which nearly filled Shove Chapel that there was a correlation between the advances made in physics

Defector Says Nasser Police Use Torture

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Egyptian who claims he defected from the United Arab Republic's secret police told a news conference today the people of the U.A.R. are tired of President Gamal Abdel Nasser and are "terribly annoyed at the U.S. backing of his regime."

Abdul Ghadir Owdeh entered Iran Jan. 2 and said he was assigned to agitate against Iran's pro-Western government in the Persian Gulf area.

He told newsmen he had found living conditions under Nasser's "police state" impossible.

He said his father, a leader of the Moslem brotherhood, was executed by the Nasser regime in 1954.

After serving in the army, Owdeh said he joined the secret police, which he said was a force of 100,000 men.

Owdeh claimed that Nasser's regime spends $1.5 million a day on the "torturing police force."

He asked that Iranian authorities use their influence to prevent Nasser torturing his six brothers and his ailing mother who still are in Cairo. Owdeh was granted political asylum in Iran.

Polio Almost Vanishes From United States

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Polio has almost vanished from the United States within a scant decade in one of medicine's most dramatic triumphs over an ancient scourge of mankind.

"It is apparent that with a continued effort to vaccinate the yet unreached young people and the newborn babies, we can eliminate poliomyelitis as a public health problem in this country in the near future," a government agencies reports.

That is a statement from the Communicable Disease Center of the U.S. Public Health Service. It comes only 10 years after Salk vaccine opened the way to conquer polio.

The statistics behind that statement are even more impressive.

It was in 1952 that crippling polio reached a terrible peak in the United States. That year 57,879 persons fell victim to the disease, 3,145 died and many were left with the crippling effects of polio.

Last year there were only 121

Detroit's Hotel Strike Faces Legal Battle

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's five-day-old hotel strike and lockout moved toward a legal battle today as the city prepared to welcome an estimated 10,000 new guests.

The Detroit regional office of the National Labor Relations Board scheduled a hearing on a union charge that the lockout was an unfair labor practice by the hotels. The union charged coercion of its members.

Local 705 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers, headed by Myra Wolfgang, veteran Detroit labor leader, and the affiliated Bartenders International were the complainants.

Approximately 2,500 hotel service employes are idle in a wage dispute.

Nine major Detroit hotels — two of them struck, the other seven declining to continue employment for members of the union faced up to an invasion of new guests.

The Society of Automotive Engineers was starting its annual convention, a big event for motor-minded Detroit.

Managements promised to do their best despite the crimp in regular staff help, including maids, kitchen workers, and porters.

So far, with guests pitching in to make their beds and meet other needs on their own, no insurmountable problems have come up, hotel officials said.

"We've had a few complaints but nothing serious," said M. G.

Soviets Confirm Launching of New Satellite

Soviet Space officials today confirmed what the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) had known for several hours — that a new Soviet Satellite is now in orbit around the earth. The satellite, named Cosmos 52, was launched early today.

NORAD received its information on orbital objects through the combined facilities of the space nets of the United States and Canadian forces. The data is digested in giant computers at the NORAD headquarters in Colorado Springs. The entire operation is termed The Space Detection and Tracking System (SPADATS), which is now accounting for nearly 500 objects actually in orbit.

For an example of just what SPADATS has in its inventory, today's overall tally is now 488 man-made objects in orbit around the earth. Of these, 129

Solons Urge New Probe of Handling Defectors

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON, (Special) — Two Ohio legislators are quietly setting the stage for Congress to make its own review of the State Department's and Immigration Service's handling of Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President Kennedy.

Representative Michael Feighan, D., and Senator Frank Lausche, D., plan to trigger the congressional inquiry this month by introducing legislation for the establishment of a national commission, made up of representatives from all branches of government and the public, to handle all cases of U. S. and Soviet defectors.

They also are preparing legislation "providing for the loss of nationality in the case of an individual entering a Communist country with the intent to transfer his allegiance from the U.S. to that country."

Working closely with other members of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees, the two Ohio Democrats plan to use the hearings on the legislation to question State Department and Immigration authorities thoroughly on why Oswald, who spent two years in the Soviet Union after defecting from the U. S., was permitted to return to this country.

They will seek a report on what the two agencies have done to prevent another Oswald case, and call for a full accounting and the present whereabouts of all U. S. defector, including those who reportedly have returned to the U. S.

Representative Feighan and Senator Lausche are unhappy with the way the Warren Commission, in investigating the assassination of President Kennedy, brushed this important chapter in Oswald's life under the rug.

The commission, which held the State Department blameless, did not question several important diplomats involved in Oswald's return to the U. S.

One of the officials not called to testify was responsible for

Snowstorm Stops Travel, Schools, in Northeast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy snowstorms swirled through the Northeast Sunday, disrupting air travel and endangering highway traffic. Officials announced schools would be closed today in many areas.

Virginia's first major storm of the season dumped a foot of snow in the northern and western parts of the state, closing schools in five counties.

In West Virginia, three persons were killed on icy U.S. 460 near Princeton and driving conditions throughout much of the state were hazardous. From two to six inches of snow blanketed the western and southern sections of the state and nine inches was recorded in Martinsburg in the Eastern Panhandle.

To the north, special snow plans were put into effect in the Philadelphia area, where a swirling snowstorm left 5 to 12 inches, slowing air traffic at the Philadelphia International Airport. The Harrisburg-York airport was closed all day.

Near Ebensburg, Pa., a Greyhound bus swerved off a snow-covered highway ramp, plunging down a 30-foot embankment into a small stream. Ten persons were hospitalized and nine others were treated and released.

Gov. William W. Scranton was forced by bad weather to cancel a scheduled appearance at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg.

The Washington, D.C., area struggled under 4 to 8 inches of snow and emergency plans were set in motion in nearby Baltimore and 19 Maryland counties.

Heavy snows in the New York City area forced cancellation or diverted more than 300 flights at Kennedy International Airport, although operations were not shut down. Inbound transatlantic flights temporarily were rerouted to Boston and Montreal.

Vehicles without chains or snow tires were banned from major arterial routes in New York. Five inches of snow fell in midtown Manhattan and eight inches covered some suburbs.

New Jersey had up to 8 inches of snow and a 3-year-old boy was killed in a weather-connected accident.

Upstate New York got by with just flurries and bitter cold temperatures.

The northern New England ski areas, suffering, from a lack of snow, also was by-passed but the southern section of the six-

Taxicab Driver Shot by Holdup Man in Springs

A taxicab driver transporting a man from the Continental Bus Station to the Loop Cafe in Manitou was shot in the hand by the man Sunday, police reported.

Neal L. Jackson, 35, 420 N. Franklin St., told police he picked up a man at the Continental Bus Station at approximately 8:45 p.m. Sunday, and the man told him to take him to the Loop Cafe in Manitou Springs. Jackson said he would, and as he was driving along W. Pikes Peak Avenue in the 3400 block, the man pulled a gun and held it against the back of Jackson's head, saying "hold it, this is a real gun, stop."

Jackson said he then fell to his right side into the front seat and reached up with his left hand, at the same time stopping the cab. He said he got hold of the gun and it went off, hitting Jackson in the ring finger on his left hand. At this point the unknown man jumped from the car and fled.

Jackson was taken to Penrose Hospital and treated for the wound. Police said the shot broke Jackson's finger.

Jackson described the man as being a white male, approximately 29 years old, five feet nine inches tall, and wearing a dark cloth coat. He said the man had dark blonde hair, was wearing plain rimmed glasses, and spoke with a southern accent.

Police said no arrests have been made yet in connection with the shooting.

Gunman Held in Probe of Robbery Attempt

A man was being held for investigation of attempted robbery and assault with a deadly weapon today after he exchanged several pistol shots with a liquor store owner early Sunday morning, police reported.

Buford Lee Wyckoff, owner of Lee's Liquor, 512 W. Colorado Ave., told police that he closed his shop and went to his car at approximately 12:40 a.m. Sunday. Wyckoff said when he got in his car he noticed that a mat which he usually has in the back seat was spread out over the front seat. He said he then got out of the car, and at this time a person got out the right rear door of the car and circled around to the front of the car.

Wyckoff said he then pulled a .25 automatic pistol from his pocket, and began to back away, and at this time the person fired a shot at him. Wyckoff said he then backed off to get out of the man's line of fire, and yelled at him to get out of there. He said he then fired his pistol four times at the man, and the man fled down an alley next to the vacant lot where Wyckoff's car was parked.

At this time Wyckoff contacted police, and at 12:45 a.m. Sunday police apprehended a man wearing a top coat and armed with a .22 caliber starting pistol at Bijou Street and Pine Street.

The man, identified as Benjamin Franklin Moore, 29, Ft. Carson, told police he had been hiding in Wyckoff's car to escape from two men who were following him. Moore said he thought Wyckoff was one of the men chasing him, so he fired at him a total of three times with his starter pistol, and then fled when Wyckoff fired back.

Panama Guard Hurls Grenades At Marchers

PANAMA (AP) — National Guardsmen hurled tear gas grenades Saturday to keep about 40 demonstrators from marching on the Panama Canal Zone on the first anniversary of bloody anti-U. S. riots.

About 100 students and labor organization members started the march toward the legislative palace, across the street from the Canal Zone which was a focal point of the 1964 clashes.

National Guardsmen stopped them about a block away. The demonstrators started to disperse, but about 40 of them attempted to stand their ground. Half a dozen grenades of tear gas put them to rout, the whole area was cleared, and traffic returned to normal.

The group was among 1,500 marchers who had paraded to the National Cemetery and the grave of Ascanio Arosemena, the student who was the first to die in the rioting that took the lives of four Americans and 21 Panamanians.

The marchers carried anti-U. S. and antigovernment banners and chanted slogans. Among the marchers were persons either officially named as Communists or known to be members of the party.

As the procession marched past the legislative plaza in sight of the Canal Zone the students redoubled their anti-U. S. chanting. At Santa Ana Plaza, a handful of marchers tore down the carnival flag raised last week. The carnival starts late in February.

Plans to carry empty coffins symbolizing the Panamanian dead did not materialize. The streets were lined with spectators on the march to the cemetery.

While the exercises were under way at the National Cemetery, the radio broadcast government-sponsored ceremonies at Jardin de Paz, a private cemetery in the outskirts of the city where the other 1964 victims are buried. President Marco A. Robles did not attend.

Speakers at both cemeteries spoke out against "Yankee imperialism" and warned Robles the people were vigilant in current negotiations with the United States for a new treaty.

The Panama government had decreed this a day of national mourning and meditation and ordered all places of business to close. All flags flew at half-staff, including the banners of Panama and the United States in the Canal Zone.

The rioting a year ago broke out over an attempt by Panamanians to fly the Panama flag in the American-controlled Canal Zone. Now both flags are displayed in the zone.

Nurse Tells About Saigon Work

EDITOR'S NOTE — What is it like to be an American nurse in Saigon. This story gives an insight into life in Viet Nam for Navy nurse Barbara Wooster, awarded a Purple Heart on Friday.

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — "Everything here is dirty," the U. S. Navy nurse in Saigon wrote home in a letter.

"You can't imagine the smell. It's horrible.

"We can't drink the water unless it's been treated. All the places that house Americans are guarded."

The nurse is Lt. Barbara J. Wooster of Bainbridge, Md. Wounded in a terrorist bomb explosion on Christmas Eve, she and two other nurses were awarded the Purple Heart on Friday in Saigon — the first American women so honored in Viet Nam.

Lt. Wooster's brother, Roger N. House of Baltimore, disclosed portions of her letters here Friday and said he was very worried about his sister.

"Anything could happen there," said House, 26, an employe of a firm which makes ceilings and partitions.

"I think she feels she's doing more duty and service to the country in Viet Nam. She has said it was least she could do for her country."

It was about 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve that the bomb exploded on the ground floor of the seven-story Brink Hotel in Saigon, used as officers' quarters. Struck by glass fragments and thrown to the floor, the nurses refused medical help until all wounded servicemen had been treated.

On Wednesday, House said, he received a letter his sister had written after the bombing.

"The war is becoming full-blown here and, for the first time, I'm a little frightened," she wrote.

"On Christmas Eve, 1964, they bombed our BOQ — Bachelor officers' quarters — and left 150 of us homeless.

"I was very lucky in that I got only a few cuts and bruises. Others were not so fortunate.

"There were 74 wounded and two killed. Many of our things were destroyed, but I managed to salvage most of my valuables.

"Now we're living in a little two-by-four room with nothing but a bed. I haven't much time as we are all working double shifts due to all the wounded at the hospital."

Viet Marine Corps Moves To New Area

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The entire Vietnamese marine corps moved toward embattled Binh Gia today to hold the area from the Communist Viet Cong.

Four marine battalions totaling 2,500 men began the transfer by helicopter and road to the Catholic refugee settlement 40 miles east of Saigon where government forces this month suffered their worst defeat of the war.

U.S. military sources said the marines plan to remain in the area indefinitely in an effort to pacify two largely unpopulated provinces that were free of Communist infiltration until two months ago.

Some U.S. advisers called the plan a mistake.

"The Viet Cong have won another victory at Binh Gia. They are tying up the whole marine corps, and preventing it from doing useful work elsewhere," one American said.

"The only reason the marines are being sent down there is to keep the road to Cap St. Jacques open," said another.

Cap St. Jacques is a popular sea resort 120 miles from Saigon.

However, other advisers said the marine deployment would prevent the Communists taking over the provinces to close "the ring of steel" around Saigon. Others said it would boost morale after the government defeat at Binh Gia.

Six Americans were killed and two others captured in the nine-day battle, longest single encounter of the four-year U.S.-supported guerrilla war. Government forces suffered about 500 casualties, including 121 dead.

Intelligence reports indicate that several Viet Cong battalions still occupy jungle areas around Binh Gia. The fresh marine battalions are replacing three paratrooper units that have been seeking without success to make contact with the elusive Communists.

On the political front, strained relations between the Vietnamese armed forces and the civilian government eased over the weekend, and a three-week crisis appeared to be over.

The military said it had restored full authority to the civilians and released a score of political prisoners arrested in the Dec. 20 military purge of the civilian government. Six of the prisoners were members of the High National Council, the provisional legislature abolished in the purge.

The United States had opposed the purge and had suspended discussion of new, enlarged aid programs until civilian rule was restored.

The military leaders said in a communique that they would cooperate with the government of Premier Tran Van Huong but did not restore the legislative council as the United States wished. Instead the communique said the civilian government would organize a National Assembly, probably by a direct vote in the cities and an indirect vote in the country.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said the agreement was not "ideal," but it went far enough for the United States to deal once more with the government.

Princess Says Ireland Is Wonderful

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, back with her children today after a turbulent Irish holiday, says she'll gladly risk more trips to visit her in-laws there.

"My husband's family are here," she told newsmen at Dublin Airport, "and we will always be coming back. We've had a wonderful time."

Thousands of Irish braved an icy rainstorm Sunday to give the princess and her husband, Lord Snowdon, a warm sendoff. Police had to clear a way for the couple through the cheering crowd.

With the princess safely away from Dublin, the Irish police released 19 men taken into protective custody during her visit.

Ten others remained in Limerick jail awaiting trial on charges of unlawful assembly. Police say they are members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which staged a series of anti-British demonstrations during the week the princess was in Ireland.

IRA men felled trees across the royal route from Dublin to Birr Castle, home of Lord Snowdon's mother. On Thursday the couple moved to Abbeyleix House to visit Snowdon's sister, and the IRA shorted out an electric transformer three miles away, plunging the neighborhood into darkness. The transformer explosion also broke windows at Abbeyleix House.

"We heard a bit of a boom," said the princess Sunday and laughed.

Margaret and Snowdon traveled home on a regularly scheduled airliner but a compartment was partitioned off for them. Other passengers' baggage was checked minutely and security men screened all maintenance men who serviced the plane.

Ironically, Abbeyleix House has long links with Ireland's fight for independence from Britain. Among the ancestors of Snowdon's brother-in-law, Viscount de Vesci, was the 18th century rebel hero Lord Edward Fitzgerald, one of the first to fight for an Irish republic.

The London Daily Telegraph commented: "Perhaps last week's conspirators had forgotten all this — if they ever knew it."

Cigarettes Kill People, Says Council Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emerson Foote, chairman of the National Interagency Council on Smoking and Health, said today that "cigarettes kill people — and they kill people in very large numbers.'"

In a speech prepared for a meeting sponsored by the council, Foote said:

"The United States Public Health Service, knows this, the American Cancer Society knows this. The American Heart Society knows this. The National Tuberculosis Association knows this. The royal College of Physicians of Great Britain knows Physicians all over the world this . . . know this."

Foote asserted it can be said with certainty that cigarette smoking kills at least 125,000 persons annually, and that the death toll might even be as high as 300,000.

"Either figure represents a national catastrophy," he said, adding:

"There are, of course, many hazards in life but in peacetime there is nothing else like this (cigarette smoking) hazard — not automobiles or anything else anyone can think of."

Foote also declared that "the amount of illness and suffering short of death, caused by cigarettes is truly a staggering proportion."

Foote, 57, resigned Dec. 1 as board chairman of McCann-Erickson Inc. of New York — which claims to be the world's second largest advertising agency.

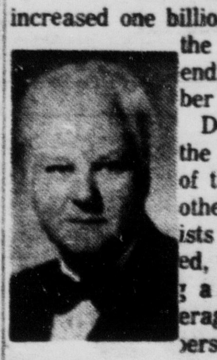
Reds Continue To Grow Despite U.S. Opposition

By H. L. HUNT



The number of people ruled by communist dictatorship has increased one billion at least in the 47 years ending November 1, 1964.

Despite all the efforts we of the U.S. and other freedomists have exerted, this subjugation averages 58,251 persons per 12 hour day.

Communism is offered as a "Workers' Paradise," and laborers even of the elite ruling classes should not be expected to work more than 12 hours per day.

Atheism refuses the waste of a day for religious observance, so infiltration continues 7 days a week.

There is no added incentive for overtime. Without added incentive during these 47 years the average rate of takeover has been 4,854 persons per hour.

The present rate of increase of slaves in the communist world is no less than 4,000 per hour and probably not more than 85,000 per hour.

Every patriot and each "tolerator" should make his own estimate of the hourly rate. One may wish to compare his own estimates with those of opposite views in determining if "it cannot happen here."

Those who really love their country should want to stop the trend. The enemy may be satisfied with his present progress and think he can win without changing his tactics.

The time schedules should be decided upon for the benefit of all involved, which in this case is the entire population of the world.

QUESTION: It seems that everyone is concerned about the decline of morals in America. What, in your estimation, is the cause for this? —M. B.

ASNWER: The blame cannot be placed on any one group. All of us are, in part, to blame for our sagging moral standards and conduct.

The church has been too soft on morals. Many of our young ministers have been taught in college that morals are relative and that sin and the mention of it is archaic. The church and the preachers are partly to blame. The voices that once cried aloud against evil now declare the social aspects of the gospel, to the neglect of the moral and spiritual.

Our lawmakers are partly to blame. The ban has been removed from salacious literature, and books that used to be peddled are now sold in our finest book stores.

The film industry, intent on box-office receipts, have too often lowered their standards, and gone against the code, and given us filth instead of wholesome and inspiring entertainment.

But the above cannot be blamed altogether. The average person who glamorizes illicit sex in everyday conversation, and in their personal behavior, have contributed to this trend, also. We have "sowed to the wind and are reaping the whirlwind."

Panama Guard Hurls Grenades At Marchers

PANAMA (AP) — National Guardsmen hurled tear gas grenades Saturday to keep about 40 demonstrators from marching on the Panama Canal Zone on the first anniversary of bloody anti-U. S. riots.

About 100 students and labor organization members started the march toward the legislative palace, across the street from the Canal Zone which was a focal point of the 1964 clashes.

National Guardsmen stopped them about a block away. The demonstrators started to disperse, but about 40 of them attempted to stand their ground. Half a dozen grenades of tear gas put them to rout, the whole area was cleared, and traffic returned to normal.

The group was among 1,500 marchers who had paraded to the National Cemetery and the grave of Ascanio Arosemena, the student who was the first to die in the rioting that took the lives of four Americans and 21 Panamanians.

The marchers carried anti-U. S. and antigovernment banners and chanted slogans. Among the marchers were persons either officially named as Communists or known to be members of the party.

As the procession marched past the legislative plaza in sight of the Canal Zone the students redoubled their anti-U. S. chanting. At Santa Ana Plaza, a handful of marchers tore down the carnival flag raised last week. The carnival starts late in February.

Plans to carry empty coffins symbolizing the Panamanian dead did not materialize. The streets were lined with spectators on the march to the cemetery.

While the exercises were under way at the National Cemetery, the radio broadcast government-sponsored ceremonies at Jardin de Paz, a private cemetery in the outskirts of the city where the other 1964 victims are buried. President Marco A. Robles did not attend.

Speakers at both cemeteries spoke out against "Yankee imperialism" and warned Robles the people were vigilant in current negotiations with the United States for a new treaty.

The Panama government had decreed this a day of national mourning and meditation and ordered all places of business to close. All flags flew at half-staff, including the banners of Panama and the United States in the Canal Zone.

The rioting a year ago broke out over an attempt by Panamanians to fly the Panama flag in the American-controlled Canal Zone. Now both flags are displayed in the zone.

Nurse Tells About Saigon Work

EDITOR'S NOTE — What is it like to be an American nurse in Saigon. This story gives an insight into life in Viet Nam for Navy nurse Barbara Wooster, awarded a Purple Heart on Friday.

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — "Everything here is dirty," the U. S. Navy nurse in Saigon wrote home in a letter.

"You can't imagine the smell. It's horrible.

"We can't drink the water unless it's been treated. All the places that house Americans are guarded."

The nurse is Lt. Barbara J. Wooster of Bainbridge, Md. Wounded in a terrorist bomb explosion on Christmas Eve, she and two other nurses were awarded the Purple Heart on Friday in Saigon — the first American women so honored in Viet Nam.

Lt. Wooster's brother, Roger N. House of Baltimore, disclosed portions of her letters here Friday and said he was very worried about his sister.

"Anything could happen there," said House, 26, an employe of a firm which makes ceilings and partitions.

"I think she feels she's doing more duty and service to the country in Viet Nam. She has said it was least she could do for her country."

It was about 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve that the bomb exploded on the ground floor of the seven-story Brink Hotel in Saigon, used as officers' quarters. Struck by glass fragments and thrown to the floor, the nurses refused medical help until all wounded servicemen had been treated.

On Wednesday, House said, he received a letter his sister had written after the bombing.

"The war is becoming full-blown here and, for the first time, I'm a little frightened," she wrote.

"On Christmas Eve, 1964, they bombed our BOQ — Bachelor officers' quarters — and left 150 of us homeless.

"I was very lucky in that I got only a few cuts and bruises. Others were not so fortunate.

"There were 74 wounded and two killed. Many of our things were destroyed, but I managed to salvage most of my valuables.

"Now we're living in a little two-by-four room with nothing but a bed. I haven't much time as we are all working double shifts due to all the wounded at the hospital."

Bob Denver, star of "Gilligan's Island," once worked as an athletic director and teacher at a children's school in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

Viet Marine Corps Moves To New Area

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The entire Vietnamese marine corps moved toward embattled Binh Gia today to hold the area from the Communist Viet Cong.

Four marine battalions totaling 2,500 men began the transfer by helicopter and road to the Catholic refugee settlement 40 miles east of Saigon where government forces this month suffered their worst defeat of the war.

U.S. military sources said the marines plan to remain in the area indefinitely in an effort to pacify two largely unpopulated provinces that were free of Communist infiltration until two months ago.

Some U.S. advisers called the plan a mistake.

"The Viet Cong have won another victory at Binh Gia. They are tying up the whole marine corps, and preventing it from doing useful work elsewhere," one American said.

"The only reason the marines are being sent down there is to keep the road to Cap St. Jacques open," said another.

Cap St. Jacques is a popular sea resort 120 miles from Saigon.

However, other advisers said the marine deployment would prevent the Communists taking over the provinces to close "the ring of steel" around Saigon. Others said it would boost morale after the government defeat at Binh Gia.

Six Americans were killed and two others captured in the nine-day battle, longest single encounter of the four-year U.S.-supported guerrilla war. Government forces suffered about 500 casualties, including 121 dead.

Intelligence reports indicate that several Viet Cong battalions still occupy jungle areas around Binh Gia. The fresh marine battalions are replacing three paratrooper units that have been seeking without success to make contact with the elusive Communists.

On the political front, strained relations between the Vietnamese armed forces and the civilian government eased over the weekend, and a three-week crisis appeared to be over.

The military said it had restored full authority to the civilians and released a score of political prisoners arrested in the Dec. 20 military purge of the civilian government. Six of the prisoners were members of the High National Council, the provisional legislature abolished in the purge.

The United States had opposed the purge and had suspended discussion of new, enlarged aid programs until civilian rule was restored.

The military leaders said in a communique that they would cooperate with the government of Premier Tran Van Huong but did not restore the legislative council as the United States wished. Instead the communique said the civilian government would organize a National Assembly, probably by a direct vote in the cities and an indirect vote in the country.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said the agreement was not "ideal," but it went far enough for the United States to deal once more with the government.

Princess Says Ireland Is Wonderful

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, back with her children today after a turbulent Irish holiday, says she'll gladly risk more trips to visit her in-laws there.

"My husband's family are here," she told newsmen at Dublin Airport, "and we will always be coming back. We've had a wonderful time."

Thousands of Irish braved an icy rainstorm Sunday to give the princess and her husband, Lord Snowdon, a warm sendoff. Police had to clear a way for the couple through the cheering crowd.

With the princess safely away from Dublin, the Irish police released 19 men taken into protective custody during her visit.

Ten others remained in Limerick jail awaiting trial on charges of unlawful assembly. Police say they are members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which staged a series of anti-British demonstrations during the week the princess was in Ireland.

IRA men felled trees across the royal route from Dublin to Birr Castle, home of Lord Snowdon's mother. On Thursday the couple moved to Abbeyleix House to visit Snowdon's sister, and the IRA shorted out an electric transformer three miles away, plunging the neighborhood into darkness. The transformer explosion also broke windows at Abbeyleix House.

"We heard a bit of a boom," said the princess Sunday and laughed.

Margaret and Snowdon traveled home on a regularly scheduled airliner but a compartment was partitioned off for them. Other passengers' baggage was checked minutely and security men screened all maintenance men who serviced the plane.

Ironically, Abbeyleix House has long links with Ireland's fight for independence from Britain. Among the ancestors of Snowdon's brother-in-law, Viscount de Vesci, was the 18th century rebel hero Lord Edward Fitzgerald, one of the first to fight for an Irish republic.

The London Daily Telegraph commented: "Perhaps last week's conspirators had forgotten all this — if they ever knew it."

Cigarettes Kill People, Says Council Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emerson Foote, chairman of the National Interagency Council on Smoking and Health, said today that "cigarettes kill people — and they kill people in very large numbers.'"

In a speech prepared for a meeting sponsored by the council, Foote said:

"The United States Public Health Service, knows this, the American Cancer Society knows this. The American Heart Society knows this. The National Tuberculosis Association knows this. The royal College of Physicians of Great Britain knows Physicians all over the world this . . . know this."

Foote asserted it can be said with certainty that cigarette smoking kills at least 125,000 persons annually, and that the death toll might even be as high as 300,000.

"Either figure represents a national catastrophy," he said, adding:

"There are, of course, many hazards in life but in peacetime there is nothing else like this (cigarette smoking) hazard — not automobiles or anything else anyone can think of."

Foote also declared that "the amount of illness and suffering short of death, caused by cigarettes is truly a staggering proportion."

Foote, 57, resigned Dec. 1 as board chairman of McCann-Erickson Inc. of New York — which claims to be the world's second largest advertising agency.

Reds Continue To Grow Despite U.S. Opposition

By H. L. HUNT

The number of people ruled by communist dictatorship has increased one billion at least in the 47 years ending November 1, 1964.

Despite all the efforts we of the U.S. and other freedomists have exerted, this subjugation averages 58,251 persons per 12 hour day.

Communism is offered as a "Workers' Paradise," and laborers even of the elite ruling classes should not be expected to work more than 12 hours per day.

Atheism refuses the waste of a day for religious observance, so infiltration continues 7 days a week.

There is no added incentive for overtime. Without added incentive during these 47 years the average rate of takeover has been 4,854 persons per hour.

The present rate of increase of slaves in the communist world is no less than 4,000 per hour and probably not more than 85,000 per hour.

Every patriot and each "tolerator" should make his own estimate of the hourly rate. One may wish to compare his own estimates with those of opposite views in determining if "it cannot happen here."

Those who really love their country should want to stop the trend. The enemy may be satisfied with his present progress and think he can win without changing his tactics.

How to Cut Your Own Income Tax

By RAY DE CRANE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

One of the greatest joys of home ownership is realized at income tax filing time.

A real glow of satisfaction spreads over the face of the otherwise grumbling taxpayer as he spreads out on the desk in front of him a pile of 12 mortgage payment receipts. As he scans each receipt he copies down just one figure from each slip and then carefully adds the 12 entries. He is eagerly totaling the interest he paid during 1964 on his home mortgage and for just that one night he wishes it were even higher.

For every penny of his interest charges is fully deductible on his income tax return. Home owners who are paying off a sizable mortgage usually elect to itemize their deductions instead of selecting either of the two options — the standard deduction which allows 10 per cent of income up to a maxiumum of $1,000, or the new minimum standard deduction which permits a settlement of $200 plus $100 for each exemption.

While mortgage interest usually is the biggest interest item when deductions are being totaled there are many other kinds of interest, all of which can be used to reduce the amount of tax you will pay.

Did you buy a new or used car on time last year? Borrow from a bank, savings and loan, credit union or finance company to consolidate debts, improve your home or buy new furniture? If so, the interest you paid on the use of the money is deductible. How about a loan for a college student's tuition? Interest paid to Internal Revenue for late payment on last year's taxes? These amounts, also, are fully deductible.

Carrying charges and service charges on many types of installment payments pose a problem for many taxpayers. Where the actual amount of interest is not shown on such a contract Internal Revenue will allow as interest 6 per cent of the average monthly balance. Here is how to arrive at this allowable interest figure when preparing your own tax return:

Gather together all your monthly statements from department stores, finance companies or any other firm with whom you made an installment purchase contract. Total all the monthly balances. Divide this total by 12 to obtain the average monthly balance. Multiply this figure by 6 per cent and that is your allowable interest. Enter it on your tax return as "Interest on installment purchases."

Many home mortgage notes contain a penalty clause which calls for the payment of an additional interest charge if the mortgage is paid off prematurely, generally within five or 10 years after the mortgage is entered into. Such accelerated payments are not common in most households but the rule can apply should the home be sold within the penalty period. For at the time of the sale the mortgage is fully paid off through the funds placed in escrow.

If you sold your home last year and you still had a sizable mortgage on it, better check your escrow statement. If you paid a penalty for early discharge of the mortgage this is additional interest which you may deduct on your tax return.

(NEXT: Those Deductible Taxes.)

Jury Will Take New Look at Race Slayings

By DAVID L. COWGER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Japanese Premier Eisaku Sato is to begin talks in Washington Tuesday on Japan's relations with Japan's relations with Communist China and the U.S. tax on investments overseas.

The 63-year-old premier arrived in San Francisco Sunday.

He was due in Washington at 5:45 p.m. EST today and will confer Tuesday and Wednesday with President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

On Thursday he is scheduled to meet with U.N. Secretary-General U Thant in New York.

At a news conference in San Francisco, Sato said he saw no conflict between Japan's conducting trade with Communist China and the U.S. policy barring trade.

Sato termed the U.S. position "a rigid one" and told newsmen Japan and Red China conduct trade only because they were close neighbors.

The premier, who took over the post when ailing Hayato Ikeda resigned last November, said he would not be able to decide whether to change Japan's trade policy with Peking until after his discussions with Johnson.

He has been pressured at home by political foes and denounced by Communist China and businessmen who want to increase trade with the mainland.

Sato said Japan has achieved nothing in its drive to end the U.S. equalization tax on foreign investments. The tax, initiated to curb the outflow of U.S. dollars, has made it difficult for Japan to attract U.S. investment capital.

"But as I understand it, the treaty is to be enforced for the remainder of the year," Sato said, "and so it would be my intention to ask the United States not to have such a law again or to repeat it."

Sato said he did not expect full agreement on all questions in his talks with Johnson and Rusk, "but the important thing is that through such contact we deepen mutual understanding."

He said he intends to clarify Japan's position with regard to Southeast Asia and expects "to get some understanding of the American side of the situation.'"

On the Indonesian-Malaysian dispute Sato said he wants to obtain the opinions of other U.N. members.

"I intend to work in my own way and to continue my efforts to help Indonesia remain in the United Nations," he said.

Humphrey Says More Than Spending Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President-elect Hubert H. Humphrey says increased federal spending alone will not conquer poverty.

Speaking to a conference of the United Jewish Appeal Saturday night, Humphrey said there also must be advances in education, health care, urban development, natural resources, transportation and communications.

"And we must wage a continuing war upon the ignorance, discrimination and prejudice which President Johnson so properly called 'poverty of the spirit,' " Humphrey said.

Bigger Rocket Motor Nozzle to Be Tested

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A huge rocket motor nozzle, described by a Rohr Corp. spokesman as the largest in the world, was en route here today from Ontario, Calif.

The nozzle will be attached to a 100-foot-long, solid-rocket motor expected to produce approximately three million pounds of thrust, or twice the thrust of any known motor produced today, the spokesman said.

The nozzle was built for Thiokol Chemical Corp. which built the rocket motor and has a facility at Brunswick. The nozzle weighs 10 tons, stands 19½ feet high and will project a flame 14 feet in diameter.

Battleship Visited By 5,000 Persons

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — More than 5,000 persons went up the gangway during the weekend to visit the battleship Alabama, dedicated Saturday as a memorial to the state's war dead.

The 35,000-ton vessel was opened for visits after it was formally dedicated by Undersecretary of Navy Paul Fay.

Henri Aldridge, chairman of the USS Alabama Battleship Commission, said he was delighted with interest shown for the Alabama despite the cold and windy weather.

Spaces open aboard the '86-foot ship include the main deck, the 16-story-high superstructure, the captain's quarters and the 16-inch gun turrets.

Soviets Want More Trade With America

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 47 businessmen, reporting Thursday to President Johnson on their talks in the Soviet Union last fall, said the Soviet Union is interested in increasing trade with the United States.

The spokesman for the group, President William Blackie of Caterpillar Tractor, said they observed that "the Soviet Union desires greater trade with the United States" and indicates it is willing to cooperate in removing obstacles such as a long-delayed settlement on its lend-lease debt to the United States.

Johnson told the group that "your government is committed to explore ways to increase peaceful trade with the Soviet union and the countries of Eastern Europe."

Cyprus Autonomy Federation Is Urged by Turkey

By HAL MCCLURE

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A visiting delegation from the Soviet Parliament, headed by one of the Kremlin's top men reportedly has told the Turks they support Turkey's proposal for a federated Cyprus.

There has been no official announcement of this change in Soviet position, but Turkish lawmakers said their Russian counterparts assured them privately of support. They said the Russians told them it is obvious the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities cannot live together any longer.

The Soviet Union has backed the Greek Cypriot government of President Makarios solidly since the Greek and Turkish Cypriots started fighting in December 1963. The Greek Cypriot majority demands enosis — union of the island with Greece.

Late last year, Turkey abandoned its position that the only Cyprus solution was partition of the island into Greek and Turkish areas. Instead Turkey suggested that the warring communities live apart under some kind of cantonal or federal system, bound by some sort of national government but retaining a large amount of autonomy.

The Cyprus issue is to come up for debate at the U.N. General Assembly this winter.

Nicklai V. Podgorny, a member of the Soviet Communist party's ruling Presidium, heads the visiting Russians. They are repaying a visit last year by Turkish parliamentarians to Moscow, which started the warming of relations between the two historical enemies.

Observers said it would be wrong for the West to assume that the thaw resulted from Turkish disappointment with the failure of the other North Atlantic allies to support the Turkish policy on Cyprus.

A columnist in the influential independent newspaper Cumhuriyet said the improvement in relations between the Soviet Union and Turkey "is an outcome of East-West elations and Turkey is one of the last countries to adapt herself to the trend."

The United States was caught in the middle of the Greek-Turkish dispute over Cyprus, trying to keep the two NATO countries from going to war over the island. Because of this, the United States came under attack in both the Turkish press and Parliament, and the first anti-American demonstrations since World War II broke out.

Premier Ismet Inonu's government has assured the West it does not intend to withdraw from NATO.

Another Soviet delegation has just returned to Moscow from Greece. Its leader, Victor V. Grishin, an alternate member of the party Presidium, said in a television address Thursday night that relations between the two countries "will develop and grow stronger" as a result of the visit.

While mortgage interest usually is the biggest interest item when deductions are being totaled there are many other kinds of interest, all of which can be used to reduce the amount of tax you will pay.

Did you buy a new or used car on time last year? Borrow from a bank, savings and loan, credit union or finance company to consolidate debts, improve your home or buy new furniture? If so, the interest you paid on the use of the money is deductible. How about a loan for a college student's tuition? Interest paid to Internal Revenue for late payment on last year's taxes? These amounts, also, are fully deductible.

Carrying charges and service charges on many types of installment payments pose a problem for many taxpayers. Where the actual amount of interest is not shown on such a contract Internal Revenue will allow as interest 6 per cent of the average monthly balance. Here is how to arrive at this allowable interest figure when preparing your own tax return:

Gather together all your monthly statements from department stores, finance companies or any other firm with whom you made an installment purchase contract. Total all the monthly balances. Divide this total by 12 to obtain the average monthly balance. Multiply this figure by 6 per cent and that is your allowable interest. Enter it on your tax return as "Interest on installment purchases."

Many home mortgage notes contain a penalty clause which calls for the payment of an additional interest charge if the mortgage is paid off prematurely, generally within five or 10 years after the mortgage is entered into. Such accelerated payments are not common in most households but the rule can apply should the home be sold within the penalty period. For at the time of the sale the mortgage is fully paid off through the funds placed in escrow.

If you sold your home last year and you still had a sizable mortgage on it, better check your escrow statement. If you paid a penalty for early discharge of the mortgage this is additional interest which you may deduct on your tax return.

Humphrey Says More Than Spending Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President-elect Hubert H. Humphrey says increased federal spending alone will not conquer poverty.

Speaking to a conference of the United Jewish Appeal Saturday night, Humphrey said there also must be advances in education, health care, urban development, natural resources, transportation and communications.

"And we must wage a continuing war upon the ignorance, discrimination and prejudice which President Johnson so properly called 'poverty of the spirit,' " Humphrey said.

Jury Will Take New Look at Race Slayings

By DAVID L. COWGER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Japanese Premier Eisaku Sato is to begin talks in Washington Tuesday on Japan's relations with Japan's relations with Communist China and the U.S. tax on investments overseas.

The 63-year-old premier arrived in San Francisco Sunday.

He was due in Washington at 5:45 p.m. EST today and will confer Tuesday and Wednesday with President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

On Thursday he is scheduled to meet with U.N. Secretary-General U Thant in New York.

At a news conference in San Francisco, Sato said he saw no conflict between Japan's conducting trade with Communist China and the U.S. policy barring trade.

Sato termed the U.S. position "a rigid one" and told newsmen Japan and Red China conduct trade only because they were close neighbors.

The premier, who took over the post when ailing Hayato Ikeda resigned last November, said he would not be able to decide whether to change Japan's trade policy with Peking until after his discussions with Johnson.

He has been pressured at home by political foes and denounced by Communist China and businessmen who want to increase trade with the mainland.

Sato said Japan has achieved nothing in its drive to end the U.S. equalization tax on foreign investments. The tax, initiated to curb the outflow of U.S. dollars, has made it difficult for Japan to attract U.S. investment capital.

"But as I understand it, the treaty is to be enforced for the remainder of the year," Sato said, "and so it would be my intention to ask the United States not to have such a law again or to repeat it."

Sato said he did not expect full agreement on all questions in his talks with Johnson and Rusk, "but the important thing is that through such contact we deepen mutual understanding."

He said he intends to clarify Japan's position with regard to Southeast Asia and expects "to get some understanding of the American side of the situation.'"

On the Indonesian-Malaysian dispute Sato said he wants to obtain the opinions of other U.N. members.

"I intend to work in my own way and to continue my efforts to help Indonesia remain in the United Nations," he said.

Bigger Rocket Motor Nozzle to Be Tested

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A huge rocket motor nozzle, described by a Rohr Corp. spokesman as the largest in the world, was en route here today from Ontario, Calif.

The nozzle will be attached to a 100-foot-long, solid-rocket motor expected to produce approximately three million pounds of thrust, or twice the thrust of any known motor produced today, the spokesman said.

The nozzle was built for Thiokol Chemical Corp. which built the rocket motor and has a facility at Brunswick. The nozzle weighs 10 tons, stands 19½ feet high and will project a flame 14 feet in diameter.

Battleship Visited By 5,000 Persons

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — More than 5,000 persons went up the gangway during the weekend to visit the battleship Alabama, dedicated Saturday as a memorial to the state's war dead.

The 35,000-ton vessel was opened for visits after it was formally dedicated by Undersecretary of Navy Paul Fay.

Henri Aldridge, chairman of the USS Alabama Battleship Commission, said he was delighted with interest shown for the Alabama despite the cold and windy weather.

Spaces open aboard the '86-foot ship include the main deck, the 16-story-high superstructure, the captain's quarters and the 16-inch gun turrets.

Soviets Want More Trade With America

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 47 businessmen, reporting Thursday to President Johnson on their talks in the Soviet Union last fall, said the Soviet Union is interested in increasing trade with the United States.

The spokesman for the group, President William Blackie of Caterpillar Tractor, said they observed that "the Soviet Union desires greater trade with the United States" and indicates it is willing to cooperate in removing obstacles such as a long-delayed settlement on its lend-lease debt to the United States.

Johnson told the group that "your government is committed to explore ways to increase peaceful trade with the Soviet union and the countries of Eastern Europe."

Cyprus Autonomy Federation Is Urged by Turkey

By HAL MCCLURE

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A visiting delegation from the Soviet Parliament, headed by one of the Kremlin's top men reportedly has told the Turks they support Turkey's proposal for a federated Cyprus.

There has been no official announcement of this change in Soviet position, but Turkish lawmakers said their Russian counterparts assured them privately of support. They said the Russians told them it is obvious the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities cannot live together any longer.

The Soviet Union has backed the Greek Cypriot government of President Makarios solidly since the Greek and Turkish Cypriots started fighting in December 1963. The Greek Cypriot majority demands enosis — union of the island with Greece.

Late last year, Turkey abandoned its position that the only Cyprus solution was partition of the island into Greek and Turkish areas. Instead Turkey suggested that the warring communities live apart under some kind of cantonal or federal system, bound by some sort of national government but retaining a large amount of autonomy.

The Cyprus issue is to come up for debate at the U.N. General Assembly this winter.

Nicklai V. Podgorny, a member of the Soviet Communist party's ruling Presidium, heads the visiting Russians. They are repaying a visit last year by Turkish parliamentarians to Moscow, which started the warming of relations between the two historical enemies.

Observers said it would be wrong for the West to assume that the thaw resulted from Turkish disappointment with the failure of the other North Atlantic allies to support the Turkish policy on Cyprus.

A columnist in the influential independent newspaper Cumhuriyet said the improvement in relations between the Soviet Union and Turkey "is an outcome of East-West elations and Turkey is one of the last countries to adapt herself to the trend."

The United States was caught in the middle of the Greek-Turkish dispute over Cyprus, trying to keep the two NATO countries from going to war over the island. Because of this, the United States came under attack in both the Turkish press and Parliament, and the first anti-American demonstrations since World War II broke out.

Premier Ismet Inonu's government has assured the West it does not intend to withdraw from NATO.

Another Soviet delegation has just returned to Moscow from Greece. Its leader, Victor V. Grishin, an alternate member of the party Presidium, said in a television address Thursday night that relations between the two countries "will develop and grow stronger" as a result of the visit.

state area received heavy amounts.

Snowstorms also struck several other widely separated areas of the nation.

In northeast Arkansas, wet snow knocked out electric and telephone service for more than 5,000 customers and a repairman was killed by a live wire.

Eight inches of snow fell in central and northern Idaho, but most roads were expected to remain open.

High winds kicked up old snow, closing two sections of U.S. 89 east of Glacier National Park in Montana.

The Midwest had generally dry weather, but temperatures plunged below freezing over the weekend and dropped as low as 31 degrees below zero in Hibbing, Minn. One woman died near Virginia, Minn., when she tried to walk home in 30-degree-below cold when her car went off a road.

Northwestern California still was suffering from the consequences of torrential floods of the past few weeks. Officials estimated earth slides and washouts there caused $60 million damage to roads and bridges.

Invaders From Indonesia Are Beaten Back

announced last Thursday that his country had walked out of the United Nations because Malaysia was seated on the U.N. Security Council. U.N. officials do not consider the withdrawal official because no written notice has been filed.

Malaysia said last week it would seek help from the United Nations if Indonesia increased the scale of its attacks, but the United Nations probably could not act if Indonesia opened a full-scale attack on Malaysia. The general Assembly is paralyzed by the U.S.-Soviet deadlock over peacekeeping finances. The Soviet Union is expected to veto any move in the Security Council to send forces against Indonesia.

Indonesia's walkout from the United Nations may force it to quite the conference of African-Asian nations in Algiers in March. Malaysia wants a seat at the conference. Presumably if it was seated, the Indonesians would refuse to stay.

Of all the African-Asian nations, only Communist China and her Asian satellites support Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations.

Red China again blasted the United Nations as a tool of the United States in a broadcast Sunday, leading to speculation that it would not accept an invitation to join the United Nations if invited.

Communist nations have tried for the past 15 years to bring Red China into the world organization as a replacement for Nationalist China. Every effort has been voted down, but support for Peking membership has been growing.

Japan announced Sunday that Shojiro Kawashima, an old friend of Sukarno's, will be sent to Jakarta to try to persuade him to reconsider the withdrawal. Kawashima is vice president of Premier Eisaku Sato's Liberal Democratic party.

The Indonesian government assured U.N. missions in Indonesia that their safety, interest and properties in this country will be safeguarded. Four police guards were posted at the U.N. headquarters in downtown Jakarta.

Polio Almost Vanishes From United States

persons stricken in the entire nation. Fewer than 10 died and far less than 100 had paralytic after-effects.

Ten years ago, Dr. Jonas F. Salk provided the first break in the fight against polio with his vaccine. This was buttressed six years later by Dr. Albert Sabin's vaccine.

Medicine thus found the key to a disease that had killed and maimed long before its cause was known — perhaps as long ago as 1400 B.C. Polio had been a vague, mysterious malady until 1840 when Dr. Jacob Heine, a German bone specialist, described its nature.

In 1902, an Austrian immunologist, Karl Landsteiner, proved that the disease resulted from a minute virus. Then three Harvard bacteriologists, John F. Enders, Frederick C. Robbins and Thomas H. Weller, developed a process for growing the virus in tissue cultures.

That made possible the development of the vaccines and the phenomenal victory over polio in the United States.

But the danger is never over.

Dr. Pierce Gardner, chief of the polio surveillance unit at the CDC, warned that approximately four million babies born each year must be vaccinated promptly. He said poorly immunized persons must be found and vaccinated.

"People believing polio is no longer a problem may become indifferent to measures to keep up immunity, particularly in the newborn," Gardner said. "Since polio is largely a disease of young people, it would not take long to accumulate a dangerous population of susceptibles."

Union Strikes Ports From Maine to Texas

ton, Reynolds said: "If any one has any illusion that there will be changes in the contract, it should be dispelled. The bargaining process is over."

The shipping industry here asked Sunday that President Johnson and Congress put pressure on the union to submit the dispute to compulsory arbitration. The appeal was submitted to Reynolds during a meeting with Gleason and the 14-men labor policy committe of the New York Shipping Association.

Alexander P. Chopin, chairman of the employer association, said the action should take effect when the strike began to threaten the national economy, He did not say when that might happen.

The proposed New York contract was rejected by a vote of 8,722 to 7,957. There are 24,000 ILA members in the port of New York.

The main rank-and-file objection here appeared to be to the clause providing for gradual reduction of the size of work gangs from 20 to 17 men over the term of the four-year agreement. Employers have sought for years to get the gang size cut because of automation of much of the work.

The employers, in return for the gang size cut, agreed to guarantee each man 1,600 hours of work a year, thus assuring them of a wage base of $5,860. The proposed contract also included a wage and benefits package of $32 a week in steps over four years. The base wage under the expired contract here was $3.26 an hour.

Detroit's Hotel Strike Faces Legal Battle

Stoskopf, front office manager of the Sheraton-Cadillac.

Union pickets met early arriving convention delegates Sunday with leaflets urging them to bypass the nine hotels and put up elsewhere.

The leaflets mentioned a union estimate that 70 per cent of the hotels' service workers are paid less than $1.50 an hour.

"Your group," the engineers were told, "probably knows more than anyone (that) when 70 per cent of 2,500 hotel workers earn less than $1.50 per hour, they are not remotely near being a customer for the new autos which you design and engineer into being each year."

Besides the Sheraton-Cadillac, the affected hotels include the Pick-Fort Shelby, Embassy, Tuller, Park Shelton, Belcrest and Abington, all of which laid off their employes, and the struck Whittier and Statler-Hilton.

The union went on strike at the Whittier and Statler-Hilton last week. The other seven laid off their union workers Thursday.

The Detroit Hotel Association, spokesman for all nine, said the layoff was its means of dealing with what it called union "whipsaw tactics." The association said the two strikes were meant to force identical settlements at all the hotels.

Union demands include a $1 an hour minimum wage for tipped workers and $1.50 for workers who get no tips.

Santurce Takes Twin Bill Victory

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Outfielder Lou Johnson collected five hits in eight at bats Sunday as Santurce swept a Winter League baseball doubleheader from Mayaguez, 9-3 and 6-4.

San Juan and Caguas split a twinbill. San Juan won the opener 3-1 on an eighth-inning bases-loaded single by Gerry McNertney of the Chicago White Sox. Caguas came back to take the nightcap 4-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Julio Navarro of the Detroit Tigers.

Arecibo captured both ends of a doubleheader from Ponce, 4-2 and 6-0, to move into second place in the standings and clinch a berth in the four-team playoffs.

Maestas Pleads Guilty to Two Charges

Walter Gerash of Denver told Denver District Court Judge Mitchell B. Johns that his client was presently under an eight year Federal sentence for possession of narcotics. The sentence is in the process of being appealed.

Maestas is accused of robbing the Self Service Drug Store, 506 W. Colorado Ave. of a quantity of narcotics, March 17. The second count states he conspired with Bennie Thomas Martinez, 30, now serving 30 to 40 years in the penitentiary for his part in the offense, and Henry Filimone Vigil, 22, 609 S. Sierra Madre, who has pleaded innocent and is scheduled to have his trial date set Tuesday.

Maestas had his pre-sentence investigation set for Jan. 29 at 9 a.m.

Thief at Church Caught by Police

A man caught rifling several women's purses at the Presbyterian Church Sunday was being held for investigation of Petit Larceny today police reported.

A custodian of the Presbyterian Church, 219 E. Bijou St., told police he saw the man leave the lobby of the church at 7:05 p.m. Sunday and go downstairs. He followed the man, and he and a member of the church apprehended him in the lady's dressing room. Both the custodian and the member said the man was rifling a lady's purse when they discovered him.

The man had one $5 bill and two $1 bills on his person, and the lady who owned the purse said she had seven dollars in her purse in those denominations.

Police said the man would probably be charged with Petit Larceny later today.

in the past and those presently made in biology.

"Basically there are three stages in the development of a science," Dr. Puck said. "First there is an early stage in which there is a very slow rate of growth. It involves the description and classification of the science involved.

"The middle state is when the generalizations begin to emerge. They are very general and vague. Separate theories are proposed to explain each phase of the science. These theories deal with things close to everyday experiences and are easily understood.

"In the mature state, basic elements of these theories usually are remote from everyday experiences — they may even contradict the original ideas. By this time science has achieved contact with reasonably fundamental elements. The theories are tremendously general and link regions of the science previously unrelated.

"Biology has been a more primitive science than physics, but more recently it has followed very closely the same theme followed by physics eariler.

"We consider physics, chemistry and biology as one new science, a part of a triumvirate.

"Throughout time nothing has interested man more than the study of himself. It is strange that the study of biology has lagged so far behind.

"The early period of biology started as early as Aristotle's time, although much was incorrect. Next came the development of a system which permitted life to be divided into mutually exclusive groups which bear relationships to each other. It seems classification should have suggested the possibility of evolution, but in science, as in anything else, hindsight is always easier.

"It wasn't until 1860 that man developed the self theory of life; that is that the basic elements of all living organisms was the same, the cell.

During the 19th Century came a series of simultaneous developments. There was the beginning of physiology, the development of the germ theory of infection, the science of immunology, Darwin's Theory of Evolution, studies in genetics, the birth of the science of biochemistry, the discovery of the isolation of hormones, antibiotics, technique of medicine, the beginning of the tissue culture, etc. Up until about 1940, biology as a science still was in the intermediate stage in science.

"But the new discoveries did not fit into each other. There was no unifying principle. The picture was like that in physics up to the end of the 19th Century. Until then, the science of physics and chemistry were completely unrelated.

"It was biological reproduction which set biology apart. How this was accomplished, to 1940 essentially was an unknown process.

"About 1940 the new biology began as scientists entered into the third or sophisticated stage of study. It was still more primitive than its sister science physics but the new phase was well on the road.

"There were two principle streams in the developments of these changes. First was biochemistry developed near the end of the 1800's. Bio-chemists had discovered that molecules applied to living organisms and that basically there were two types of molecules — small ones easy to duplicate in the test tube like water, salt, etc., and a second more unique variety thousands to millions times larger than the small ordinary ones. These were found only in living tissue. But the different classes had one unique possession. Proteins. So proteins were said to be the secret to reproduction. And all proteins were made out of amino acids. There were 20 kinds of these amino acids. And they seemed to be an 'alphabet' out of which 'words' or proteins were made. But no protein had less than 200 amino acids or no 'word' had less than 200 'letters.'

"And these chemicals carried out constant chemical reactions with an absence of the by products or ordinary errors committed by chemists in the test tube. This pehnomenon was found to be due to enzymes. Each enzyme was able to bring about one particular reaction. Scientists conclude that the secret of life was in proteins and enzymes.

"At the same time scientists were making progress in this area, geneticists were able to show that every characteristic of every living thing owned its presence to at least one of its parents.

They called these inherited characteristics genes. Every function was traced to a certain gene. So, scientists concluded every characteristic of every living thing required an inherited gene.

"Meanwhile physics and chemistry were making great strides in the production of conceptual tools, radioactive isotopes and the development and use of the information theory.

"About 1940 a critical set of experiments launched biology into a new phase. A bread mold was studied altering gene action with radiation and simultaneously altered gene computation. The generalization was reached that there was a one to one relationship between the enzyme and the gene it controls.

"With the key found, subsequent developments quickly followed. Suddenly there was a new understanding of classical disease, the promise of a new understanding of methods for preventing a number of genetic defects, many involving mental disorders.

"But the human implication — the reaction of society — has not reached the stage of awareness of this enormous rate of acceleration. Society must adjust to the psychology of these changes, to prepare for these changes in our social structure. For every specific principle is only part of a much more general principle yet to be discovered. Areas previously left to religion and the mystics now are within the realm of science."

New Probe of Handling Defectors Urged

sending to the FBI a report contending that the former Marine was not dangerous. The other diplomat was involved in the legal ruling that, although Oswald had renounced his citizenship in Russia, he didn't lose it because he had not signed certain documents.

MYSTERY WITNESSES — Representative Feighan, whose Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration will conduct the inquiry in the House, has the names of these State Department officials and plans to summon both as witnesses.

The FBI, which is keeping open its investigation of the assassination, will be asked to furnish its investigative reports on these officials, including one made during a security probe of the State Department in the '50s.

Feighan's hearings will highlight the little-known opposition of several Immigration Service authorites to Oswald's return.

One Immigration District Director, J. W. Holland of San Antonio, Texas, vigorously opposed granting return visas to Oswald and his wife, stating in a memorandum to his superiors:

"Petition of Lee Harvey Oswald forwarded with recommendation that sanctions not be waived and petition denied.

"A substantial amount of derogatory security information has been developed in connection with the petitioner, and it is felt that he does not meet the criteria mentioned as to being reputable, and considerable doubt has arisen with regard to any meritorious features of this case.

"It is reported that on his subsequent visit to the U. S. embassy in Moscow, he stated he had been completely relieved of his illusions about the Soviet Union, and also that much of the bravado and arrogance which characterized his first visit appeared to have left him.

"These unsupported declarations are not sufficient to relieve the doubts which have arisen regarding his loyalty to the U. S. Sanctions will not be waived, and the petition should be denied."

THE REVERSE PLAY — According to Feighan's investigation, the Immigration Service dropped its opposition to Oswald after the State Department Office of Security forwarded a memorandum stating:

"Lee Harvey Oswald attempted to renounce U. S. citizenship but did not, in fact, renounce U. S. citizenship.

"Our determination on the basis of information and evidence presently of record is that Mr. Oswald did not expatriate himself and remains a citizen of the U. S."

NATIONAL COMMISSION — In proposing the establishment of a national commission to handle all defector cases, Feighan and Lausche will contend such a federal body is needed to protect the security of this country.

They will use the Senate-House hearings to show that the U. S. presently has no national policy on handling defecting high - ranking officials from Communist countries, including Russia and China.

While asylum in the U. S. has usually been granted them by the State Department, there are no laws under which any agency of government can offer rewards or promise jobs to the Communist big-wigs willing to defect.

Specific cases to be put on the public record by Feighan will show that high - ranking Communist security officials have fled from Poland and Russia and given the CIA valuable information about Soviet agents in this country but no action has ever been taken against these security risks.

Thai Boxing Commission Asks For Bout Delay

BANGKOK (AP) — The Thai Boxing Commission is drafting a message to the World Boxing Council asking it to proceed with arrangements for a long delayed title fight between world flyweight champion Pone Kingpetch of Thailand and Italy's Salvatore Burruni.

Sources close to the TBC said Monday the message would be addressed to Luis Spota, Mexican president of the WBC.

The TBC cabled Spota Jan. 4 saying it agreed to a compromise proposal made by the WBC chief and aimed at breaking a deadlock over composition of the jury for the bout. The jury issue had held up negotiations for more than three months.

New Penn Coach Says Winning Teams Expected

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Give us time and we can do it." The "it" meant winning. The "we" was the University of Pennsylvania football team and the speaker was the team's new coach, Bob Odell.

Officially named head coach Saturday, with a three-year contract for a reported $12,000-plus salary, Odell said:

"Penn is ready to move ... our aid for scholarships is equal to that of Dartmouth, Princeton and Harvard and the other Ivies. We can do it. Give us time and we can do it."

Penn has seen a losing football season 11 of the last 12 years and reduced crowds at Franklin Field from more than 60,000 to a comparative handful.

"With good interesting football, we can get the people back. If we can be competitive, go into each game with a chance to win, the fans will come back," Odell said. He promised an aggressive but not wild recruiting program designed to interest academically justified athletes.

He talked of returning such names as Army and Navy to Penn's schedule, "when we get competitive."

Odell had been head coach at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa., the last seven years. There, his teams had won 37, lost 26 and twice earned the small college Lambert Cup, emblematic of Eastern football supremacy.

Ranch Empire Proves Fizzle For Cowboy

BEND, Ore. (AP) — Robert A. Eslinger, 37, married with two children, is a $300-a-month cowhand in central Oregon.

Two years ago he was the millionaire operator of eight Oregon cattle ranches and owned considerable land in California.

Today, Eslinger is in the midst of bankruptcy proceedings with more than 200 creditors and debts of $4.4 million. He lists his assets at $625 — all exempt.

The cowboy came to Oregon three years ago from California where he owned 20 properties, including office buildings in Fresno and Oakland, sugar beet ranches and cattle ranches.

He estimated his net work then at $1,250,000.

While in California, Eslinger had formed the Bar T Cattle Co. and began buying ranches in eastern and central Oregon.

By 1962, the company had purchased eight ranches and 5,000 head of cattle for $1,780,000. Eslinger owned two-thirds of the stock in the Bar T.

His problems started in 1963 when land values in California dropped and his holdings collapsed. Eslinger says: "I didn't leave behind good enough management. It all depended too much on me."

He said he had only equities in most of the properties, an estimated $750,000 of his own funds invested in properties valued at $3 million. On one ranch where he had $25,000 invested he said he was stuck for more than $200,000. Other foreclosures followed. Then cattle prices dropped 25 to 30 per cent.

He lost his cattle, then he started selling ranches to pay of fcreditors. He let regular employes go, sold his equipment and finally in June 1964, the Bank of California took all his stock in the Bar T.

Among other reasons for the collapse of his cattle empire, Eslinger said, was "my own optimism. I thought central Oregon was the best place in the world and that the cattle business was the best business in the world. I thought everyone else thought so too."

Eslinger says he isn't out of the cattle picture forever. He wants to get going again and "pay back as much as I can."

Eslinger figures he owes more than $1.35 million. Of his more than $4.4 million in debts, more than $3 million are secured claims.

state area received heavy amounts.

Snowstorms also struck several other widely separated areas of the nation.

In northeast Arkansas, wet snow knocked out electric and telephone service for more than 5,000 customers and a repairman was killed by a live wire.

Eight inches of snow fell in central and northern Idaho, but most roads were expected to remain open.

High winds kicked up old snow, closing two sections of U.S. 89 east of Glacier National Park in Montana.

The Midwest had generally dry weather, but temperatures plunged below freezing over the weekend and dropped as low as 31 degrees below zero in Hibbing, Minn. One woman died near Virginia, Minn., when she tried to walk home in 30-degree-below cold when her car went off a road.

Northwestern California still was suffering from the consequences of torrential floods of the past few weeks. Officials estimated earth slides and washouts there caused $60 million damage to roads and bridges.

Invaders From Indonesia Are Beaten Back

announced last Thursday that his country had walked out of the United Nations because Malaysia was seated on the U.N. Security Council. U.N. officials do not consider the withdrawal official because no written notice has been filed.

Malaysia said last week it would seek help from the United Nations if Indonesia increased the scale of its attacks, but the United Nations probably could not act if Indonesia opened a full-scale attack on Malaysia. The general Assembly is paralyzed by the U.S.-Soviet deadlock over peacekeeping finances. The Soviet Union is expected to veto any move in the Security Council to send forces against Indonesia.

Indonesia's walkout from the United Nations may force it to quite the conference of African-Asian nations in Algiers in March. Malaysia wants a seat at the conference. Presumably if it was seated, the Indonesians would refuse to stay.

Of all the African-Asian nations, only Communist China and her Asian satellites support Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations.

Red China again blasted the United Nations as a tool of the United States in a broadcast Sunday, leading to speculation that it would not accept an invitation to join the United Nations if invited.

Communist nations have tried for the past 15 years to bring Red China into the world organization as a replacement for Nationalist China. Every effort has been voted down, but support for Peking membership has been growing.

Japan announced Sunday that Shojiro Kawashima, an old friend of Sukarno's, will be sent to Jakarta to try to persuade him to reconsider the withdrawal. Kawashima is vice president of Premier Eisaku Sato's Liberal Democratic party.

The Indonesian government assured U.N. missions in Indonesia that their safety, interest and properties in this country will be safeguarded. Four police guards were posted at the U.N. headquarters in downtown Jakarta.

Polio Almost Vanishes From United States

persons stricken in the entire nation. Fewer than 10 died and far less than 100 had paralytic after-effects.

Ten years ago, Dr. Jonas F. Salk provided the first break in the fight against polio with his vaccine. This was buttressed six years later by Dr. Albert Sabin's vaccine.

Medicine thus found the key to a disease that had killed and maimed long before its cause was known — perhaps as long ago as 1400 B.C. Polio had been a vague, mysterious malady until 1840 when Dr. Jacob Heine, a German bone specialist, described its nature.

In 1902, an Austrian immunologist, Karl Landsteiner, proved that the disease resulted from a minute virus. Then three Harvard bacteriologists, John F. Enders, Frederick C. Robbins and Thomas H. Weller, developed a process for growing the virus in tissue cultures.

That made possible the development of the vaccines and the phenomenal victory over polio in the United States.

But the danger is never over.

Dr. Pierce Gardner, chief of the polio surveillance unit at the CDC, warned that approximately four million babies born each year must be vaccinated promptly. He said poorly immunized persons must be found and vaccinated.

"People believing polio is no longer a problem may become indifferent to measures to keep up immunity, particularly in the newborn," Gardner said. "Since polio is largely a disease of young people, it would not take long to accumulate a dangerous population of susceptibles."

Union Strikes Ports From Maine to Texas

ton, Reynolds said: "If any one has any illusion that there will be changes in the contract, it should be dispelled. The bargaining process is over."

The shipping industry here asked Sunday that President Johnson and Congress put pressure on the union to submit the dispute to compulsory arbitration. The appeal was submitted to Reynolds during a meeting with Gleason and the 14-men labor policy committe of the New York Shipping Association.

Alexander P. Chopin, chairman of the employer association, said the action should take effect when the strike began to threaten the national economy, He did not say when that might happen.

The proposed New York contract was rejected by a vote of 8,722 to 7,957. There are 24,000 ILA members in the port of New York.

The main rank-and-file objection here appeared to be to the clause providing for gradual reduction of the size of work gangs from 20 to 17 men over the term of the four-year agreement. Employers have sought for years to get the gang size cut because of automation of much of the work.

The employers, in return for the gang size cut, agreed to guarantee each man 1,600 hours of work a year, thus assuring them of a wage base of $5,860. The proposed contract also included a wage and benefits package of $32 a week in steps over four years. The base wage under the expired contract here was $3.26 an hour.

Detroit's Hotel Strike Faces Legal Battle

Stoskopf, front office manager of the Sheraton-Cadillac.

Union pickets met early arriving convention delegates Sunday with leaflets urging them to bypass the nine hotels and put up elsewhere.

The leaflets mentioned a union estimate that 70 per cent of the hotels' service workers are paid less than $1.50 an hour.

"Your group," the engineers were told, "probably knows more than anyone (that) when 70 per cent of 2,500 hotel workers earn less than $1.50 per hour, they are not remotely near being a customer for the new autos which you design and engineer into being each year."

Besides the Sheraton-Cadillac, the affected hotels include the Pick-Fort Shelby, Embassy, Tuller, Park Shelton, Belcrest and Abington, all of which laid off their employes, and the struck Whittier and Statler-Hilton.

The union went on strike at the Whittier and Statler-Hilton last week. The other seven laid off their union workers Thursday.

The Detroit Hotel Association, spokesman for all nine, said the layoff was its means of dealing with what it called union "whipsaw tactics." The association said the two strikes were meant to force identical settlements at all the hotels.

Union demands include a $1 an hour minimum wage for tipped workers and $1.50 for workers who get no tips.

Santurce Takes Twin Bill Victory

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Outfielder Lou Johnson collected five hits in eight at bats Sunday as Santurce swept a Winter League baseball doubleheader from Mayaguez, 9-3 and 6-4.

San Juan and Caguas split a twinbill. San Juan won the opener 3-1 on an eighth-inning bases-loaded single by Gerry McNertney of the Chicago White Sox. Caguas came back to take the nightcap 4-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Julio Navarro of the Detroit Tigers.

Arecibo captured both ends of a doubleheader from Ponce, 4-2 and 6-0, to move into second place in the standings and clinch a berth in the four-team playoffs.

Maestas Pleads Guilty to Two Charges

Walter Gerash of Denver told Denver District Court Judge Mitchell B. Johns that his client was presently under an eight year Federal sentence for possession of narcotics. The sentence is in the process of being appealed.

Maestas is accused of robbing the Self Service Drug Store, 506 W. Colorado Ave. of a quantity of narcotics, March 17. The second count states he conspired with Bennie Thomas Martinez, 30, now serving 30 to 40 years in the penitentiary for his part in the offense, and Henry Filimone Vigil, 22, 609 S. Sierra Madre, who has pleaded innocent and is scheduled to have his trial date set Tuesday.

Maestas had his pre-sentence investigation set for Jan. 29 at 9 a.m.

Thief at Church Caught by Police

A man caught rifling several women's purses at the Presbyterian Church Sunday was being held for investigation of Petit Larceny today police reported.

A custodian of the Presbyterian Church, 219 E. Bijou St., told police he saw the man leave the lobby of the church at 7:05 p.m. Sunday and go downstairs. He followed the man, and he and a member of the church apprehended him in the lady's dressing room. Both the custodian and the member said the man was rifling a lady's purse when they discovered him.

The man had one $5 bill and two $1 bills on his person, and the lady who owned the purse said she had seven dollars in her purse in those denominations.

Police said the man would probably be charged with Petit Larceny later today.

in the past and those presently made in biology.

"Basically there are three stages in the development of a science," Dr. Puck said. "First there is an early stage in which there is a very slow rate of growth. It involves the description and classification of the science involved.

"The middle state is when the generalizations begin to emerge. They are very general and vague. Separate theories are proposed to explain each phase of the science. These theories deal with things close to everyday experiences and are easily understood.

"In the mature state, basic elements of these theories usually are remote from everyday experiences — they may even contradict the original ideas. By this time science has achieved contact with reasonably fundamental elements. The theories are tremendously general and link regions of the science previously unrelated.

"Biology has been a more primitive science than physics, but more recently it has followed very closely the same theme followed by physics eariler.

"We consider physics, chemistry and biology as one new science, a part of a triumvirate.

"Throughout time nothing has interested man more than the study of himself. It is strange that the study of biology has lagged so far behind.

"The early period of biology started as early as Aristotle's time, although much was incorrect. Next came the development of a system which permitted life to be divided into mutually exclusive groups which bear relationships to each other. It seems classification should have suggested the possibility of evolution, but in science, as in anything else, hindsight is always easier.

"It wasn't until 1860 that man developed the self theory of life; that is that the basic elements of all living organisms was the same, the cell.

During the 19th Century came a series of simultaneous developments. There was the beginning of physiology, the development of the germ theory of infection, the science of immunology, Darwin's Theory of Evolution, studies in genetics, the birth of the science of biochemistry, the discovery of the isolation of hormones, antibiotics, technique of medicine, the beginning of the tissue culture, etc. Up until about 1940, biology as a science still was in the intermediate stage in science.

"But the new discoveries did not fit into each other. There was no unifying principle. The picture was like that in physics up to the end of the 19th Century. Until then, the science of physics and chemistry were completely unrelated.

"It was biological reproduction which set biology apart. How this was accomplished, to 1940 essentially was an unknown process.

"About 1940 the new biology began as scientists entered into the third or sophisticated stage of study. It was still more primitive than its sister science physics but the new phase was well on the road.

"There were two principle streams in the developments of these changes. First was biochemistry developed near the end of the 1800's. Bio-chemists had discovered that molecules applied to living organisms and that basically there were two types of molecules — small ones easy to duplicate in the test tube like water, salt, etc., and a second more unique variety thousands to millions times larger than the small ordinary ones. These were found only in living tissue. But the different classes had one unique possession. Proteins. So proteins were said to be the secret to reproduction. And all proteins were made out of amino acids. There were 20 kinds of these amino acids. And they seemed to be an 'alphabet' out of which 'words' or proteins were made. But no protein had less than 200 amino acids or no 'word' had less than 200 'letters.'

"And these chemicals carried out constant chemical reactions with an absence of the by products or ordinary errors committed by chemists in the test tube. This pehnomenon was found to be due to enzymes. Each enzyme was able to bring about one particular reaction. Scientists conclude that the secret of life was in proteins and enzymes.

"At the same time scientists were making progress in this area, geneticists were able to show that every characteristic of every living thing owned its presence to at least one of its parents.

They called these inherited characteristics genes. Every function was traced to a certain gene. So, scientists concluded every characteristic of every living thing required an inherited gene.

"Meanwhile physics and chemistry were making great strides in the production of conceptual tools, radioactive isotopes and the development and use of the information theory.

"About 1940 a critical set of experiments launched biology into a new phase. A bread mold was studied altering gene action with radiation and simultaneously altered gene computation. The generalization was reached that there was a one to one relationship between the enzyme and the gene it controls.

"With the key found, subsequent developments quickly followed. Suddenly there was a new understanding of classical disease, the promise of a new understanding of methods for preventing a number of genetic defects, many involving mental disorders.

"But the human implication — the reaction of society — has not reached the stage of awareness of this enormous rate of acceleration. Society must adjust to the psychology of these changes, to prepare for these changes in our social structure. For every specific principle is only part of a much more general principle yet to be discovered. Areas previously left to religion and the mystics now are within the realm of science."

sending to the FBI a report contending that the former Marine was not dangerous. The other diplomat was involved in the legal ruling that, although Oswald had renounced his citizenship in Russia, he didn't lose it because he had not signed certain documents.

MYSTERY WITNESSES — Representative Feighan, whose Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration will conduct the inquiry in the House, has the names of these State Department officials and plans to summon both as witnesses.

The FBI, which is keeping open its investigation of the assassination, will be asked to furnish its investigative reports on these officials, including one made during a security probe of the State Department in the '50s.

Feighan's hearings will highlight the little-known opposition of several Immigration Service authorites to Oswald's return.

One Immigration District Director, J. W. Holland of San Antonio, Texas, vigorously opposed granting return visas to Oswald and his wife, stating in a memorandum to his superiors:

"Petition of Lee Harvey Oswald forwarded with recommendation that sanctions not be waived and petition denied.

"A substantial amount of derogatory security information has been developed in connection with the petitioner, and it is felt that he does not meet the criteria mentioned as to being reputable, and considerable doubt has arisen with regard to any meritorious features of this case.

"It is reported that on his subsequent visit to the U. S. embassy in Moscow, he stated he had been completely relieved of his illusions about the Soviet Union, and also that much of the bravado and arrogance which characterized his first visit appeared to have left him.

"These unsupported declarations are not sufficient to relieve the doubts which have arisen regarding his loyalty to the U. S. Sanctions will not be waived, and the petition should be denied."

THE REVERSE PLAY — According to Feighan's investigation, the Immigration Service dropped its opposition to Oswald after the State Department Office of Security forwarded a memorandum stating:

"Lee Harvey Oswald attempted to renounce U. S. citizenship but did not, in fact, renounce U. S. citizenship.

"Our determination on the basis of information and evidence presently of record is that Mr. Oswald did not expatriate himself and remains a citizen of the U. S."

NATIONAL COMMISSION — In proposing the establishment of a national commission to handle all defector cases, Feighan and Lausche will contend such a federal body is needed to protect the security of this country.

They will use the Senate - House hearings to show that the U. S. presently has no national policy on handling defecting high - ranking officials from Communist countries, including Russia and China.

While asylum in the U. S. has usually been granted them by the State Department, there are no laws under which any agency of government can offer rewards or promise jobs to the Communist big-wigs willing to defect.

Specific cases to be put on the public record by Feighan will show that high - ranking Communist security officials have fled from Poland and Russia and given the CIA valuable information about Soviet agents in this country but no action has ever been taken against these security risks.

COLD CAN KILL

Last year many older people in England suffered unnecessarily or died as a result of cold weather. Their body temperature was below 95 degrees F. (hypothermia) and authorities estimated that many more cases of this type were missed because ordinary thermometers do not go low enough. This condition often causes confusion, slurred speech, and a staggering gait

The majority did not complain of the cold; the diagnosis was made accidentally because their offspring or neighbors were suspicious that all was not well with the aged person. The pulse and respirations were slow and the blood pressure low. The skin was pale, bluish, and puffy. Shivering seldom occurred after the temperature fell below 95 degrees F. and the best clue to their plight was to feel the abdomen; it was cold.

Hypothermia is more common in the elderly, especially those living alone. They are less active and their homes or apartments have an antiquated heating system. In addition, many cannot afford warm clothing.

Overexposure also is a problem among the feebleminded and the confused; they leave windows open or walk outside without dressing warmly. Concern about bodily discomfort decreases in people with diseases of the brain and mental problems. The use of alcohol and the barbituates also plays a role.

The best treatment is a warm room where the hypothermic man or woman can sit or recline while the body temperature goes up gradually. Heat should not be applied to the skin, which means that electric blankets and hot water bags are taboo. Severe hypothermia requires fluids, antibiotics, and hydrocortisone. The causative factors must be corrected later, with a better heating system, more clothing, and improved nutrition.

We do not know whether a similar problem exists in the United States. The lucky oldsters are those able to go south during the freezing months.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self - addressed envelope accompanies request.

NO APPETITE

Mrs. G. writes: My husband never is hungry and has to force himself to eat. Is there a pill I could give him to improve his appetite?

REPLY

Let well enough alone, provided he is otherwise healthy. We assume you are serving attractive and appetizing meals, and making dinner a pleasant and happy occasion. A cocktail before eating may encourage appetite.

PAINLESS ULCER

M. J. H. writes: Can a peptic ulcer exist without pain?

REPLY

Yes, because pain stems from burning of the open ulcer by the stomach acid. A good example is the relief of pain that follows a few days of treatment. The ulcer has not had time to heal, yet there is no distress because the stomach acid has been neutralized.

NORMAL THYROID

Mrs. E. S. writes: What is meant by a nontoxic thyroid gland?

REPLY

The gland is normal if it is not sluggish, not toxic, and not enlarged. When an excessive amount of thyroid hormone is secreted, symptoms of toxicity often occur (thyrotoxicosis).

AMA Discloses Own Proposal For Medicare

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association came out Saturday with a proposed program of health care for the aged and stated it would give elderly citizens far more than the administration's medicare plan.

Dr. Donovan F. Ward, president of the AMA, hit out at President Johnson's more for health insurance for the senior citizens linked to the Social Security system.

He said that program would give the people "far less than they expect," and "have a disastrous effect on the quality" of hospital and medical treatment.

Under the AMA proposal, Blue Cross and Blue Shield and other health insurance companies would provide policies to protect the elderly against the costs of illness.

Public and private funds would share the cost, according to each recipient's income.

Under the new program, an over-65 citizen would purchase through an insurance company a "wide spectrum of medical surgical and hospital benefits. and would pay all or none of the cost of the policy, depending on his income," Ward set forth in a statement.

"For individuals with income under the specified minimum, the state agency, using federal and state funds, would pay the entire cost."

The AMA program would make some use of the federal-state health aid machinery set up by the Kerr Mills Act and now in effect in 40 states.

The law permits states to determine eligibility through checkups by welfare departments on income, assets and other resources of the applicant. But Ward called for congressional action to make some changes. He suggested amendment of the present law to permit citizens over 65 to submit "a simple information return to the appropriate state agency outlining income from all sources."

"On the basis of this return alone," he said, "an individual with income within limits set by the states would immediately become eligible for benefits."

Ward said the AMA program "would provide far more to our elderly citizens than is proposed in the administration's medicare tax program.

"Aid would consist of comprehensive health care benefits, rather than being limited to hospital and nursing home care representing only a fraction of the cost of sickness.

"Benefits for eligible recipients would include not only payment of hospital and nursing home charges, but also payment of medical surgical and drug costs."

He also pointed out that it would operate within the established insurance system, private insurance companies would administer it, and it would make use of existing insurance and prepayment plans in which millions of Americans are enrolled.

The AMA labeled its proposal a sound and workable program that would accomplish "far more" than medicare, "with none of the attendant evils of unpredictable expense, invasion of medical practice by the federal bureauracy, or disruption of the private health insurance industry by the government."

Wheat Growers Want Trade With Russians

PORTLAN.D Ore. (AP) — The National Association of Wheat Growers urged almost unrestricted trade with the Soviet bloc Friday.

Trade with Red China was not recommended.

The resolution, passed at the closing session of the annual convention, asked for removal of the restriction that 50 per cent of the ships used for grain export must be U.S. vessels.

The growers said the higher costs of U.S. shipping was a stumbling block in world competition.

They noted that Canada and Austrialia have benefited greatly by grain sales to Russia and its allied nations. They said they want to get in on it permanently.

Another resolution urged the association to try to increase farmers' income by any administrative method available within the languages of present wheat regulations. The resolution mentioned that export or domestic certificates might be issued to achieve this.

The growers said the current wheat program cut 1964 grower income below 1963 and they fear it will go even lower this year.

"We do not believe that further reductions are necessary or warranted at this time," the resolution said.

They reaffirmed their approval of a voluntary certificate program with proper incentives to insure maximum participation by growers. They also urged an extension of the certificate program for at least four to five years.

They also called for full parity on wheat used in this country for food.

AMA Discloses Own Proposal For Medicare

Under the new program, an over-65 citizen would purchase through an insurance company a "wide spectrum of medical surgical and hospital benefits. and would pay all or none of the cost of the policy, depending on his income," Ward set forth in a statement.

"For individuals with income under the specified minimum, the state agency, using federal and state funds, would pay the entire cost."

The AMA program would make some use of the federal-state health aid machinery set up by the Kerr Mills Act and now in effect in 40 states.

The law permits states to determine eligibility through checkups by welfare departments on income, assets and other resources of the applicant. But Ward called for congressional action to make some changes. He suggested amendment of the present law to permit citizens over 65 to submit "a simple information return to the appropriate state agency outlining income from all sources."

"On the basis of this return alone," he said, "an individual with income within limits set by the states would immediately become eligible for benefits."

Ward said the AMA program "would provide far more to our elderly citizens than is proposed in the administration's medicare tax program.

"Aid would consist of comprehensive health care benefits, rather than being limited to hospital and nursing home care representing only a fraction of the cost of sickness.

"Benefits for eligible recipients would include not only payment of hospital and nursing home charges, but also payment of medical surgical and drug costs."

He also pointed out that it would operate within the established insurance system, private insurance companies would administer it, and it would make use of existing insurance and prepayment plans in which millions of Americans are enrolled.

The AMA labeled its proposal a sound and workable program that would accomplish "far more" than medicare, "with none of the attendant evils of unpredictable expense, invasion of medical practice by the federal bureauracy, or disruption of the private health insurance industry by the government."

Wheat Growers Want Trade With Russians

PORTLAN.D Ore. (AP) — The National Association of Wheat Growers urged almost unrestricted trade with the Soviet bloc Friday.

Trade with Red China was not recommended.

The resolution, passed at the closing session of the annual convention, asked for removal of the restriction that 50 per cent of the ships used for grain export must be U.S. vessels.

The growers said the higher costs of U.S. shipping was a stumbling block in world competition.

They noted that Canada and Austrialia have benefited greatly by grain sales to Russia and its allied nations. They said they want to get in on it permanently.

Another resolution urged the association to try to increase farmers' income by any administrative method available within the languages of present wheat regulations. The resolution mentioned that export or domestic certificates might be issued to achieve this.

The growers said the current wheat program cut 1964 grower income below 1963 and they fear it will go even lower this year.

"We do not believe that further reductions are necessary or warranted at this time," the resolution said.

They reaffirmed their approval of a voluntary certificate program with proper incentives to insure maximum participation by growers. They also urged an extension of the certificate program for at least four to five years.

They also called for full parity on wheat used in this country for food.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

The Father Must Be Silent

Whose influence over a young man should be primary: that of his foreman, or that of his father? Believe it or not, a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner has ruled that the father may not advise his son in a manner that a foreman may not.

This fantastic decision was reached in a case involving Reilly Tar and Chemical Corporation of Indianapolis.

This firm was cited for "unfair" labor practices, among them, this: The son, a laboratory worker at the Maywood plant of the firm, was among four employes who filed membership applications with the union (Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International). Later, the father and son were riding to work together. The father happens to be a foreman working for the same company. The father asked his son if he had joined the union.

When the son stated that he had made application, the father said that he did not "think it was such a good idea," and suggested that the boy withdraw his application. He also suggested that the lad talk it over with Mr. C. A. Fisher, the plant manager.

Later on, the young man talked to his immediate supervisor, following which he withdrew his application.

When this matter was brought out at the NLRB hearing, the trial examiner, A. Bruce Hunt, inquired as to whether the father was speaking to his son as a father or as a foreman. And then he stated: "The father's remarks if made to any employe other than the son, would constitute clear violation of the (National Labor Relations) Act." Thus, the ruling went against the company, which was ordered to bargain with the union and to cease and desist from anti - union activity such as that described above. In effect, the ruling had the merit of making it clear that the son's relationship to the union was of greater significance than his filial relationship to his own father.

In our opinion, the decision of examiner Hunt is tinged with total tyranny. If the father had advised his son not to join a union while the two were sitting at breakfast, it would apparently have made no difference, provided the father was employed in a supervisory capacity with the same firm which employed the son.

Clearly, this is an invasion of privacy of communication. Not only should the father have been able to advise his son in any way fitting, irrespective of their employment, such advice ought to be considered a privileged communication and not subject to question, examination or trial.

If a father fails to give his son constructive advice and the son gets into difficulties, it is not unheard of to hold the father partly or even totally to blame. Now comes the NLRB in its awesome power, to rule that a father may not exercise his parental right in offering good and constructive advice to his son, if that advice is contrary to the best interests of the union.

What in the world makes union interests a kind of sacred cow in this country?

What about the interests of the family: do they have any sanctity?

What about the interests of the firm for which these two men work? Is there not something to be said about unfair practices conducted by unions against the firms which provide employment and make the goods and furnish the services we all demand?

Our government is showing, in this NLRB affair, an enormous prejudice so monstrous that it will rule anything as harmful that seems to disrupt union ambitions, even if it means destroying a family relationship or the love and trust that rightfully could repose between a father and his son.

The only reason for the NLRB's existence is to provide a favorable climate, outside the ordinary realm of legality, for labor union rackets. If labor disputes were conducted in front of judges and in ordinary courts of law, at least some of the decisions would favor home and family; some would favor management; some would be found contrary to union wishes. By having the NLRB in its corner, the union can, and does, get away with just about anything.

We consider the ruling cited in this case an outrage and a direct attack on the sanctity and privacy of the home and family.

Colorado Taxes

In 1963, Colorado producers and wage earners got themselves a tax cut. It wasn't much, but it was helpful. The boys in the state house in Denver are now putting out danger flares, letting everyone know that increases in taxation MUST occur this year. And the general feeling is that the increases to come will wipe out any savings in 1963 and then go beyond that point. This was predicted at the time of the tax cuts.

In actual fact, the cuts made in 1963 probably have resulted in savings to taxpayers of about $28 million to date. However, the new state cigarette tax last year cost smokers an estimated $8 million.

Also, the state has been collecting a property tax which resulted in about $5.5 million which is now to expire. But changes in reporting the state income tax in 1964 will probably result in a similar sum flowing into the treasury.

One of the legislators is favoring a state lottery to help raise money. Another favors an increase in the state sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent per dollar; an increase in the cigarette tax from 3 to 5 cents per pack; an increase in the state tax on gasoline from 6 to 7 cents a gallon.

If these three proposals were to be approved, some $43 million would be anticipated which would be used primarily to support the government school system in this state. And in the face of these advances, there are still some people around who want to see the government building and managing more colleges and more secondary schools.

The theory, and it will be exploited, is that by increasing the taxes on sales, cigarettes and gasoline some relief will be experienced locally in the payment of property taxes. But this is unlikely. So the lawmakers scheme and stew, trying to figure out how to extract more money from all of us so their vain and vainglorious proposals can all be implemented.

In actual fact, all this discussion about increasing the taxes and trying to do so painlessly is pointless. If Colorado is to remain solvent, a philosophy is going to have to be developed which will rely on the government less, rather than more, in the years ahead.

Our real problem is not the kind of tax, nor the method of collecting it. The difficulty arises from the supposition that progress comes in government garments and that anything the government wants to do must be important and the money must be raised.

Now, it happens that there are thousands of people in this state who have their own plans about building and improving their communities and their futures. And they can do it if they are not taxed under the present theory. What we are living under is a belief in the efficacy of government to solve all kinds of problems at all levels. What we are going to have to learn, if we wish a remedy, is that government solves no problems, but merely moves them across what is called the "public sector" much as players move their pieces in a chess game.

We should keep in mind that there is a profound difference between a "right" to tax and a "power" to tax. In recent years we have tended to confuse these two things. Governments, in fact have no "right" to tax at all. A right arises from nature and always relates to individuals. Further, rights are never in conflict, by definition. Thus, an individual has a right to dispose of his own earnings as he pleases. But government has no right at all to the disposal of the earnings of others.

However, it is obviously true that government has the "power" to tax. Since government has monopoly control of the military and police forces, this power is not in question.

But there is a profound difference between power and right. Without challenging the power of the state, it is important that we challenge the right of the state. Rightfully speaking, each person should have the full latitude required so that he can expend whatever portion of his earnings he wishes in support of the schemes of the politicians. If this element of choice is removed from the person, then he is at the mercy of the state and really has no realistic ability to hold the power of the state in check, even over his own funds.

NEEDED

To the Editor:

What the U.S. needs in today's crises is a good five-cent nickel, an honest 10-cent silver dime and an honorable gold dollar with our gold eagle screaming defiance to the world. We also need a Congress with the will to pour the fool's gold and the valueless Federal Reserve notes into the gaping ratholes and reinstate GOLD as the circulating medium.

SUNDAY BUYING

To the Editor:

In the past few days I have noted two letters by a George Ernst of this city in regard to Sunday closing laws. I should like to comment on this if I may for a moment.

First of all, there seems to be a misapplication of the Bible here. I find many many references in regard to the Sabbath as to keeping it holy, doing no work, no buying and many other restrictions. However, this is Saturday under the Jewish law. Sunday, the first day of the week or the Lord's Day, is a different matter. Nowhere are there commandments in regard to not buying or selling on this day. In fact, if one will read his Bible you will find that our Lord Jesus picked corn on the Sabbath, forbidden under the law. Also, He healed on the Sabbath, this too forbidden by the law (Matthew 12-1, John 5-9). Our Lord's reply on one occasion was, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." And on the other occasion he said He was Lord over the Sabbath.

Now, so there will be no misconception I do not believe in much buying on the Lord's Day. However, one cannot command those who do not believe in Jesus Christ as Saviour to do as He wishes. So, then, it is a personal matter and if your conscience bothers you, do not do it; but never command others to do what you feel you must, for Christianity is freedom, not a dictatorship.

I pray this has been a help. Should anyone think there is a Scripture forbidding the buying on the Lord's day, I want to see it.

ONLY HOPE

To the Editor:

May I take this means of thanking Mr. F. C. Ware for taking up where I left off in my letter in the December 22 issue. When I wrote regarding voter qualifications I was wondering if there would be a reader who would discern the hitch in my suggestion. No, we cannot leave to politicians the qualifying of voters. Voter qualification depends upon education. Again we are stymied, for we cannot depend upon the government-sponsored schools for an impartial presentation of our Constitution in the light of INTENT of the Founding Fathers, and of a free enterprise economy and individual property rights.

The only hope is for the education of the coming generation (and succeeding ones) in private schools staffed by educators dedicated to the principle of individual freedom through individual property rights and an unhampered market place — NO subsidies, NO price-fixing, NO tariffs to curtail the free choice by consumers or to inflate costs to them. We might add "limited government" except for the contradiction, so we will suggest "limit to government ONLY" with prohibitions against meddling in the affairs of individuals (except as they over-reach their rights and interfere with the rights of others) and prohibitions against meddling in the market place (subsidies, price-fixing, etc.), except for upholding honesty in weights, measures, labeling, etc., and a further limiting by a ceiling on taxes.

The foregoing suggests the possibility of the need for no more amendments to our Constitution but a complete revamping of it. Ambiguities need to be removed. Definite qualifications of character and abilities and experience for all office holders (rather than a mere age and citizenship stipulation) need to be spelled out. The matter of salaries should be decided by the voters instead of by state and national legislators. We need to prohibit Congress from delegating ANY of its authority to any board, bureau or commission — they to be limited to investigative and-or advisory capacities only.

Mr. Ware has a pretty good picture of how our federation got started and who started it. At the time there were those who "got the picture" and felt that to stay would be skating on thin ice. When the "brains" (benevolent despots) passed on to their Heavenly reward, the "riff-raff" would gain the ascendency and no one then would be safe in person or in their property. Isn't it getting that way more and more, day by day? And now we have the "vision" — "The Great Society" of bankrupt mediocrity! Think of it, all of us the pawns of the Great White (Stetson) Experimenter!

To The Point

What Pictures Do You Hang?

By RUSSELL KIRK

Your servant likes to see pictures on the walls. Water-colors, good prints, or interesting photographs make a home or a public room cheerful and diverse; to my taste, the more such, the better.

But pictures are fallen on evil days, in much of this world of ours. The British, who once covered their walls so thick with picture-frames that they scarcely needed wallpaper, now often seem better content with a monotonous and chilly expanse of mere wallspace. For the paintings of Highland cattle, and other Victorian or Edwardian subjects, went into the garret or the cellar during the blitz — and rarely emerged, unless in the junkman's cart. Not knowing what sort of picture to choose, and wishing to seem "modern," today's Englishman settles for nothing at all on his walls.

In America, on the contrary, decent prints, admirably reproduced, and usually in color, are far more frequently encountered now than they were fifteen years ago. Yet the American displays a small discrimination in his pictures, except that he, too, worships modernity. So it is that one sees, in house after house, reproductions of one of Utrillo's Montmarte scenes — even though the householder never has been to Paris, and knows nothing about Post-Impressionism and all that. Mass-produced and mass-distributed, popular American pictures signify next to nothing to their average possessor.

Assuming, then, the grand role of arbiter of taste, this commentator suggests the following guidelines for picture-hanging.

First, your picture should have some close association with you. It should reflect your religion (most great painting is religious in subject), your strong interests, your travels, your aspirations.

Second, your picture should be unique or unusual, if possible. A water-color or pen-and-ink sketch by a reasonably talented friend, a good etching, or even a lucky and memorable photograph of your own, will please your eye and your neighbor's more than most cheap prints of "The Last Supper" or "The Blue Boy," say. Also it will make a better conversation-piece.

Third, your picture should not ordinarily stand isolated on a vast stretch of wall, but should fit neatly enough into the proportions of the room, or perhaps should be a group of small pictures, rather than a single big frame.

Fourth, if you don't like "abstract art" — and few really do — for Giotto's sake don't torment yourself by keeping it incessantly before your eyes. Read Max Picard's wise little book, "The Disintegration of Forms in Modern Art," or Wyndham Lewis' "The Demon of Progress in the Arts" — and be assured that you are not a boor in wanting your pictures to picture something.

In fine, if you love Highland cattle (and though I prefer my Piranesi engravings, knowing Rome, still I rather like those shaggy beasts in oils), take grandmother's Highland-cattle picture out of the attic and display it without shame. Pictures are to please you — not to suit the fancy (and fatten the pocketbook) of some inferior interior-decorator who once won the grade of "C" in an art-appreciation course at Dismal Swamp A. & M.

Wall Street, U.S.A.

By DONALD I. ROGERS
Consultant, Business and Financial Affairs

Reprinted from Canvas Products Review

We have before us today two magic figures, both round sums. One is $3,000. The other is $6,000.

The upper limit of poverty, said President Johnson, is $3,000 per year. A family earning $3,000 or less annually is impoverished.

Now along comes the Census Bureau and reports that the Governments last year — Federal, state and local — spent $185.2 billion which, a little arithmetic tells us, amounts to somewhat more than $3,000 per year for every family in the United States.

The Labor Department reports that $6,000 is the average annual income of the average factory worker in the United States.

The Census Bureau reports that government debt last year increased to $384.6 billion, which is somewhat more than $6,000 per family for every family in the United States.

There emerges a harsh truth. Government last year cost every family in America what it would cost to provide each family with minimum livelihood in the most Utopian of all worlds. And Government incurred debt, in the name of each American family, more than is earned by most families that receive what is considered to be a good income.

It will take more than the assurances of Economic Adviser Walter W. Heller that this is all right and in fact "progressive" before many of us can believe that this policy is one which will bring lasting prosperity to this country.

There comes also to attention the report of Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R., Nebraska, which he submitted to the Senate Anti-trust and Monopoly subcommittee, showing government to be the biggest monopolist of all. The report relates that 1941 was the last year that corporate profits after taxes were greater than the U. S. government's revenues taken from taxpayers and corporations.

Then, the after-tax profits of corporations, at slightly under $10 billion, were about $2 billion greater than government receipts.

Since that time, government revenues have climbed by leaps to $90 billion a year — and more — while the after-tax profits of corporations have increased to about $28 billion. In 20-odd years the government's income — derived from taxpayers and taxpaying corporations — has increased from $8 billion to $90 billion, while corporations, whose investments and productivity provide the income of taxpayers, have increased their income from a little less than $10 billion to a mere $28 billion.

It is a matter of record that chief economic adviser Heller says there is absolutely nothing wrong with this, and, in fact, that it is beneficial.

To whom? To those who are eagerly awaiting the day that private corporations no longer can afford to hire us and the government will be "forced" to take over the responsibility?

Endless Struggle

These Days

The Uses of 'I-chu-hua'

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

This column's Kremlinologists, who were accurate in predicting the 1963 crop failure in the Soviet Union and have since been right about other things ("Nothing can save Khrushchev," said one of them quite early in 1964), insist that Moscow's hopes for an accommodation with Red China are foundering on Mao Tse-tung's bargaining attitude of "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?"

The Red Chinese bargaining begins in true Oriental fashion, with a display of ferocity. Talking with Japanese Communists, Mao Tse-tung calls the Russians "imperialists." He lists the territories the Romanov czars seized from the Chinese in the nineteenth century, from inner Asia to Vladivostok. And he throws in a dig about Russian imperialism in Rumania and Hungary.

Even while Mao is talking, some mysterious leaflets appear in Rumania itself, urging the Rumanian government to insist on a restoration of the old Province of Bessarabia that is now part of Russia. Other leaflets appear in Hungary, taking issue with the propaganda that insists on the popularity of Kadar's government. Nobody dares accuse the Red Chinese of instigating the pamphleteering for fear it will disrupt negotiations between Moscow and Peiping. The fiction is that the leaflets are being printed in Albania, a country that is too small to do anything about the accusation, if it is indeed an accusation rather than an excuse.

PHASES

This is the "ta, ta," or "fight, fight," phase of Chinese bargaining. It is then followed by the "tan, tan," or "talk, talk," phase.

But what is there to talk about? Mao Tse-tung's price, so the Kremlinologists say, is to insist that Soviet Russia should live up to the brother-in-arms obligations of international Marxists. The Soviets, so Mao points out, have lands in Asia which they cannot adequately farm because of a shortage of manpower. China, on the other hand, has so many people that it cannot feed them. So why not put the surplus Chinese to work on the surplus Soviet acreage? And in return for Soviet freedom in eastern Europe why not give Red China a free hand throughout Asia — meaning a cessation of Soviet aid to India?

If the words of the old song of the Marxist Internationale — "The International Soviet will be the human race" — had any real meaning for proletarians today, the Russians would, of course, have to comply with Mao's request for land for hungry Oriental Communists and a quid pro quo territorial arrangement on the rights to extend the revolution. But the Soviets, as Mao Tse-tung has wickedly pointed out, have ceased to be orthodox Marxists. They are not interested in feeding hungry Chinese proletarians at Russia's territorial expense.

Thus there will be no satisfactory answer from Moscow to Mao's "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?"

SURPLUS

Theoretically, a compromise might be worked out between the Russians and the Chinese Reds if Moscow would only lend some aid to Peiping's efforts to industrialize China. But Russia itself has nothing much to give in this area. It has a surplus of oil, but the Chinese haven't the spare parts they need to keep machinery and an air force in shape to use imposing quantities of oil and gasoline. Since the Soviets themselves are suffering from the tacit sabotage of industrial slowdown and the agricultural dislocations imposed by a "why work?" peasantry, they can't produce the surplus that would be needed to bail out the Red Chinese economy.

All of which give the nations of the West their opportunity of engaging in their own statecraft of "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?" There are still sixty-odd thousand Hungarians in Kazahkstan, waiting for amnesty and a return to their homeland. And awaiting freedom in Hungary itself there are those political prisoners who were jailed after the failure of the revolution of 1956 instead of being shot. These prisoners were under eighteen at the time of their incarceration. Their freedom might be bought for western wheat in an "I-chu-hua" deal before they grow too old and lose hope.

The Chinese and the Russians can't arrive at a bargaining exchange because neither group has anything to give to the other. But the West has plenty to give, so why can't it buy liberty for political prisoners in some quid pro quo deals?

Won't someone teach Lyndon Johnson, Dean Rusk and Averell Harriman to ask, "I-chu-hua?"

Communism in Reverse

From N.Y. Daily News

From Moscow comes a weird but evidently true news story of a factory that makes men's suits and operates on capitalist principles — mainly the principle that to sell things you should make what the customers want.

The Communist notion is that all-wise planners should tell factories what to make, and the people should buy the products like so many two-legged sheep.

This theory was not proving out at the Bolschevichka textile plant. So last summer the Kremlin told the manager, Pyotr K. Noskov, to use his own brains and try to make profits.

He did, by finding out what sorts of suits Russian men wanted, and then making them. Results as of now: zooming profits at Noskov's plant, and a bright future for it.

The future may not be so bright for the Commies, though. This rediscovery of capitalism in Russia (almost a playback of Henry Hazlitt's masterly 1951 novel, "The Great Idea," about a Marxist state that saw the Capitalist light) just could be a time-bomb to destroy Communism the world over. Let's keep our fingers crossed and hope.

Neutron Counter

By RUFUS L. PORTER

One interesting gadget I got to investigate and watch in action up at the Climax Observatory was a neutron counter in a cosmic ray station which was set up at the observatory in a Quonset hut type building by the University of Chicago eight years ago. Since that time this machine has been clicking constantly 24 hours a day, counting the neutrons being hurled at the surface of the earth from the cosmic rays.

It is an electronic device that seems to need little or no attention. A row of little lights flitter on and off almost incessantly counting the single neutrons up to 128. Each unit of 128 is then registered on a meter-type apparatus, similar to a speedometer, or a taximeter. One of the solar observers checks the machine every morning and figures the total "bombardment" by neutrons the area has taken during the past 24 hours.

Our son, Chet, did this the morning I was there. The total number was something over 37,000. The average, he says, is above 40,000. When he spoke of neutrons and bombardment, it sounded rather sinister. Then I got to thinking that this has been going on since the beginning of time, and will continue probably into eternity, and I saw no cause for immediate concern.

For many millions of years, perhaps, mankind has lived with this constant bombardment of his earth by the cosmic rays — certainly long before he knew he was being bombarded by neutrons, which he has only recently learned to count.

But this machine is not simply a nutty scientist's crazy plaything. It comes under the heading of pure scientific research (research for its own sake). This is the type of research that has been chiefly responsible for man's advancement throughout the millennia he has dwelt on this planet.

One thing they expect to learn over a period of time is whether the neutronic bombardment is increasing or diminishing. This will give them something they can hang some theories on. And knowledge hangs upon the proving or disproving of scientific theories. Cosmic rays, magnetic fields, sun spots — these are the most intriguing things among the small group of scientists at the Climax Observatory. That and keeping the snow cleared off the pond so they can enjoy some ice skating in their idle hours.

No longer can an American boast, "I own this land, all the way down to China. I own the mineral rights, the surface rights, she's all mine." He knew, of course, that he only owned it to the center of the earth — the Chinaman on the other side presumably owned his land to the center, too.

But, according to the latest interpretation of property rights by our state government, "all water, including underground water, belongs to all the people," and it can be grabbed, in their holy name, from whatever source. Your own water from your own land is about to be rationed out to you. You will have no right to drill for it and sell your excess to those who would be willing to buy. You will "share" it with whomever the state tells you to on an equal basis with yourself.

Now, water has always been considered a mineral and has been included in the phrase "all mineral rights" whenever a piece of real property was sold without reservations. If they can take your water rights away, they can take any other mineral rights. Suppose you have a fine seam of coal running under your ground, or iron or gold or any other useful mineral. It is just as logical to say these other minerals belong to "all the people" as to say your water does. In fact, that is precisely what the socialists are always and forever saying.

This water steal is just one more step toward total elimination of property rights. First real estate and then all other forms of property will "belong to all the people."

But nothing ever can belong to all the people. What this misleading phrase means is that it belongs to the government, to the politicians and bureaucrats — the commissars, who will be the only ones left to ride the gravy train after the befuddled public, expecting something for nothing, accepts socialism as a better life.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

The Father Must Be Silent

Whose influence over a young man should be primary: that of his foreman, or that of his father? Believe it or not, a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner has ruled that the father may not advise his son in a manner that a foreman may not.

This fantastic decision was reached in a case involving Reilly Tar and Chemical Corporation of Indianapolis.

This firm was cited for "unfair" labor practices, among them, this: The son, a laboratory worker at the Maywood plant of the firm, was among four employes who filed membership applications with the union (Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International). Later, the father and son were riding to work together. The father happens to be a foreman working for the same company. The father asked his son if he had joined the union.

When the son stated that he had made application, the father said that he did not "think it was such a good idea," and suggested that the boy withdraw his application. He also suggested that the lad talk it over with Mr. C. A. Fisher, the plant manager.

Later on, the young man talked to his immediate supervisor, following which he withdrew his application.

When this matter was brought out at the NLRB hearing, the trial examiner, A. Bruce Hunt, inquired as to whether the father was speaking to his son as a father or as a foreman. And then he stated: "The father's remarks if made to any employe other than the son, would constitute clear violation of the (National Labor Relations) Act." Thus, the ruling went against the company, which was ordered to bargain with the union and to cease and desist from anti - union activity such as that described above. In effect, the ruling had the merit of making it clear that the son's relationship to the union was of greater significance than his filial relationship to his own father.

In our opinion, the decision of examiner Hunt is tinged with total tyranny. If the father had advised his son not to join a union while the two were sitting at breakfast, it would apparently have made no difference, provided the father was employed in a supervisory capacity with the same firm which employed the son.

Clearly, this is an invasion of privacy of communication. Not only should the father have been able to advise his son in any way fitting, irrespective of their employment, such advice ought to be considered a privileged communication and not subject to question, examination or trial.

If a father fails to give his son constructive advice and the son gets into difficulties, it is not unheard of to hold the father partly or even totally to blame. Now comes the NLRB in its awesome power, to rule that a father may not exercise his parental right in offering good and constructive advice to his son, if that advice is contrary to the best interests of the union.

What in the world makes union interests a kind of sacred cow in this country?

What about the interests of the family: do they have any sanctity?

What about the interests of the firm for which these two men work? Is there not something to be said about unfair practices conducted by unions against the firms which provide employment and make the goods and furnish the services we all demand?

Our government is showing, in this NLRB affair, an enormous prejudice so monstrous that it will rule anything as harmful that seems to disrupt union ambitions, even if it means destroying a family relationship or the love and trust that rightfully could repose between a father and his son.

The only reason for the NLRB's existence is to provide a favorable climate, outside the ordinary realm of legality, for labor union rackets. If labor disputes were conducted in front of judges and in ordinary courts of law, at least some of the decisions would favor home and family; some would favor management; some would be found contrary to union wishes. By having the NLRB in its corner, the union can, and does, get away with just about anything.

We consider the ruling cited in this case an outrage and a direct attack on the sanctity and privacy of the home and family.

Colorado Taxes

In 1963, Colorado producers and wage earners got themselves a tax cut. It wasn't much, but it was helpful. The boys in the state house in Denver are now putting out danger flares, letting everyone know that increases in taxation MUST occur this year. And the general feeling is that the increases to come will wipe out any savings in 1963 and then go beyond that point. This was predicted at the time of the tax cuts.

In actual fact, the cuts made in 1963 probably have resulted in savings to taxpayers of about $28 million to date. However, the new state cigarette tax last year cost smokers an estimated $8 million.

Also, the state has been collecting a property tax which resulted in about $5.5 million which is now to expire. But changes in reporting the state income tax in 1964 will probably result in a similar sum flowing into the treasury.

One of the legislators is favoring a state lottery to help raise money. Another favors an increase in the state sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent per dollar; an increase in the cigarette tax from 3 to 5 cents per pack; an increase in the state tax on gasoline from 6 to 7 cents a gallon.

If these three proposals were to be approved, some $43 million would be anticipated which would be used primarily to support the government school system in this state. And in the face of these advances, there are still some people around who want to see the government building and managing more colleges and more secondary schools.

The theory, and it will be exploited, is that by increasing the taxes on sales, cigarettes and gasoline some relief will be experienced locally in the payment of property taxes. But this is unlikely. So the lawmakers scheme and stew, trying to figure out how to extract more money from all of us so their vain and vainglorious proposals can all be implemented.

In actual fact, all this discussion about increasing the taxes and trying to do so painlessly is pointless. If Colorado is to remain solvent, a philosophy is going to have to be developed which will rely on the government less, rather than more, in the years ahead.

Our real problem is not the kind of tax, nor the method of collecting it. The difficulty arises from the supposition that progress comes in government garments and that anything the government wants to do must be important and the money must be raised.

Now, it happens that there are thousands of people in this state who have their own plans about building and improving their communities and their futures. And they can do it if they are not taxed under the present theory. What we are living under is a belief in the efficacy of government to solve all kinds of problems at all levels. What we are going to have to learn, if we wish a remedy, is that government solves no problems, but merely moves them across what is called the "public sector" much as players move their pieces in a chess game.

We should keep in mind that there is a profound difference between a "right" to tax and a "power" to tax. In recent years we have tended to confuse these two things. Governments, in fact have no "right" to tax at all. A right arises from nature and always relates to individuals. Further, rights are never in conflict, by definition. Thus, an individual has a right to dispose of his own earnings as he pleases. But government has no right at all to the disposal of the earnings of others.

However, it is obviously true that government has the "power" to tax. Since government has monopoly control of the military and police forces, this power is not in question.

But there is a profound difference between power and right. Without challenging the power of the state, it is important that we challenge the right of the state. Rightfully speaking, each person should have the full latitude required so that he can expend whatever portion of his earnings he wishes in support of the schemes of the politicians. If this element of choice is removed from the person, then he is at the mercy of the state and really has no realistic ability to hold the power of the state in check, even over his own funds.

NEEDED

To the Editor:

What the U.S. needs in today's crises is a good five-cent nickel, an honest 10-cent silver dime and an honorable gold dollar with our gold eagle screaming defiance to the world. We also need a Congress with the will to pour the fool's gold and the valueless Federal Reserve notes into the gaping ratholes and reinstate GOLD as the circulating medium.

SUNDAY BUYING

To the Editor:

In the past few days I have noted two letters by a George Ernst of this city in regard to Sunday closing laws. I should like to comment on this if I may for a moment.

First of all, there seems to be a misapplication of the Bible here. I find many many references in regard to the Sabbath as to keeping it holy, doing no work, no buying and many other restrictions. However, this is Saturday under the Jewish law. Sunday, the first day of the week or the Lord's Day, is a different matter. Nowhere are there commandments in regard to not buying or selling on this day. In fact, if one will read his Bible you will find that our Lord Jesus picked corn on the Sabbath, forbidden under the law. Also, He healed on the Sabbath, this too forbidden by the law (Matthew 12-1, John 5-9). Our Lord's reply on one occasion was, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." And on the other occasion he said He was Lord over the Sabbath.

Now, so there will be no misconception I do not believe in much buying on the Lord's Day. However, one cannot command those who do not believe in Jesus Christ as Saviour to do as He wishes. So, then, it is a personal matter and if your conscience bothers you, do not do it; but never command others to do what you feel you must, for Christianity is freedom, not a dictatorship.

I pray this has been a help. Should anyone think there is a Scripture forbidding the buying on the Lord's day, I want to see it.

ONLY HOPE

To the Editor:

May I take this means of thanking Mr. F. C. Ware for taking up where I left off in my letter in the December 22 issue. When I wrote regarding voter qualifications I was wondering if there would be a reader who would discern the hitch in my suggestion. No, we cannot leave to politicians the qualifying of voters. Voter qualification depends upon education. Again we are stymied, for we cannot depend upon the government-sponsored schools for an impartial presentation of our Constitution in the light of INTENT of the Founding Fathers, and of a free enterprise economy and individual property rights.

The only hope is for the education of the coming generation (and succeeding ones) in private schools staffed by educators dedicated to the principle of individual freedom through individual property rights and an unhampered market place — NO subsidies, NO price-fixing, NO tariffs to curtail the free choice by consumers or to inflate costs to them. We might add "limited government" except for the contradiction, so we will suggest "limit to government ONLY" with prohibitions against meddling in the affairs of individuals (except as they over-reach their rights and interfere with the rights of others) and prohibitions against meddling in the market place (subsidies, price-fixing, etc.), except for upholding honesty in weights, measures, labeling, etc., and a further limiting by a ceiling on taxes.

The foregoing suggests the possibility of the need for no more amendments to our Constitution but a complete revamping of it. Ambiguities need to be removed. Definite qualifications of character and abilities and experience for all office holders (rather than a mere age and citizenship stipulation) need to be spelled out. The matter of salaries should be decided by the voters instead of by state and national legislators. We need to prohibit Congress from delegating ANY of its authority to any board, bureau or commission — they to be limited to investigative and-or advisory capacities only.

Mr. Ware has a pretty good picture of how our federation got started and who started it. At the time there were those who "got the picture" and felt that to stay would be skating on thin ice. When the "brains" (benevolent despots) passed on to their Heavenly reward, the "riff-raff" would gain the ascendency and no one then would be safe in person or in their property. Isn't it getting that way more and more, day by day? And now we have the "vision" — "The Great Society" of bankrupt mediocrity! Think of it, all of us the pawns of the Great White (Stetson) Experimenter!

To The Point

What Pictures Do You Hang?

By RUSSELL KIRK

Your servant likes to see pictures on the walls. Water-colors, good prints, or interesting photographs make a home or a public room cheerful and diverse; to my taste, the more such, the better.

But pictures are fallen on evil days, in much of this world of ours. The British, who once covered their walls so thick with picture-frames that they scarcely needed wallpaper, now often seem better content with a monotonous and chilly expanse of mere wallspace. For the paintings of Highland cattle, and other Victorian or Edwardian subjects, went into the garret or the cellar during the blitz — and rarely emerged, unless in the junkman's cart. Not knowing what sort of picture to choose, and wishing to seem "modern," today's Englishman settles for nothing at all on his walls.

In America, on the contrary, decent prints, admirably reproduced, and usually in color, are far more frequently encountered now than they were fifteen years ago. Yet the American displays a small discrimination in his pictures, except that he, too, worships modernity. So it is that one sees, in house after house, reproductions of one of Utrillo's Montmarte scenes — even though the householder never has been to Paris, and knows nothing about Post-Impressionism and all that. Mass-produced and mass-distributed, popular American pictures signify next to nothing to their average possessor.

Assuming, then, the grand role of arbiter of taste, this commentator suggests the following guidelines for picture-hanging.

First, your picture should have some close association with you. It should reflect your religion (most great painting is religious in subject), your strong interests, your travels, your aspirations.

Second, your picture should be unique or unusual, if possible. A water-color or pen-and-ink sketch by a reasonably talented friend, a good etching, or even a lucky and memorable photograph of your own, will please your eye and your neighbor's more than most cheap prints of "The Last Supper" or "The Blue Boy," say. Also it will make a better conversation-piece.

Third, your picture should not ordinarily stand isolated on a vast stretch of wall, but should fit neatly enough into the proportions of the room, or perhaps should be a group of small pictures, rather than a single big frame.

Fourth, if you don't like "abstract art" — and few really do — for Giotto's sake don't torment yourself by keeping it incessantly before your eyes. Read Max Picard's wise little book, "The Disintegration of Forms in Modern Art," or Wyndham Lewis' "The Demon of Progress in the Arts" — and be assured that you are not a boor in wanting your pictures to picture something.

In fine, if you love Highland cattle (and though I prefer my Piranesi engravings, knowing Rome, still I rather like those shaggy beasts in oils), take grandmother's Highland-cattle picture out of the attic and display it without shame. Pictures are to please you — not to suit the fancy (and fatten the pocketbook) of some inferior interior-decorator who once won the grade of "C" in an art-appreciation course at Dismal Swamp A. & M.

Wall Street, U.S.A.

By DONALD I. ROGERS
Consultant, Business and Financial Affairs

Reprinted from Canvas Products Review

We have before us today two magic figures, both round sums. One is $3,000. The other is $6,000.

The upper limit of poverty, said President Johnson, is $3,000 per year. A family earning $3,000 or less annually is impoverished.

Now along comes the Census Bureau and reports that the Governments last year — Federal, state and local — spent $185.2 billion which, a little arithmetic tells us, amounts to somewhat more than $3,000 per year for every family in the United States.

The Labor Department reports that $6,000 is the average annual income of the average factory worker in the United States.

The Census Bureau reports that government debt last year increased to $384.6 billion, which is somewhat more than $6,000 per family for every family in the United States.

There emerges a harsh truth. Government last year cost every family in America what it would cost to provide each family with minimum livelihood in the most Utopian of all worlds.

And Government incurred debt, in the name of each American family, more than is earned by most families that receive what is considered to be a good income.

It will take more than the assurances of Economic Adviser Walter W. Heller that this is all right and in fact "progressive" before many of us can believe that this policy is one which will bring lasting prosperity to this country.

There comes also to attention the report of Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R., Nebraska, which he submitted to the Senate Anti-trust and Monopoly subcommittee, showing government to be the biggest monopolist of all. The report relates that 1941 was the last year that corporate profits after taxes were greater than the U.S. government's revenues taken from taxpayers and corporations.

Then, the after-tax profits of corporations, at slightly under $10 billion, were about $2 billion greater than government receipts.

Since that time, government revenues have climbed by leaps to $90 billion a year — and more — while the after-tax profits of corporations have increased to about $28 billion. In 20-odd years the government's income — derived from taxpayers and taxpaying corporations — has increased from $8 billion to $90 billion, while corporations, whose investments and productivity provide the income of taxpayers, have increased their income from a little less than $10 billion to a mere $28 billion.

It is a matter of record that chief economic adviser Heller says there is absolutely nothing wrong with this, and, in fact, that it is beneficial.

To whom? To those who are eagerly awaiting the day that private corporations no longer can afford to hire us and the government will be "forced" to take over the responsibility?

Endless Struggle

These Days

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

This column's Kremlinologists, who were accurate in predicting the 1963 crop failure in the Soviet Union and have since been right about other things ("Nothing can save Khrushchev," said one of them quite early in 1964), insist that Moscow's hopes for an accommodation with Red China are foundering on Mao Tse-tung's bargaining attitude of "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?"

The Red Chinese bargaining begins in true Oriental fashion, with a display of ferocity. Talking with Japanese Communists, Mao Tse-tung calls the Russians "imperialists." He lists the territories the Romanov czars seized from the Chinese in the nineteenth century, from inner Asia to Vladivostok. And he throws in a dig about Russian imperialism in Rumania and Hungary.

Even while Mao is talking, some mysterious leaflets appear in Rumania itself, urging the Rumanian government to insist on a restoration of the old Province of Bessarabia that is now part of Russia. Other leaflets appear in Hungary, taking issue with the propaganda that insists on the popularity of Kadar's government. Nobody dares accuse the Red Chinese of instigating the pamphleteering for fear it will disrupt negotiations between Moscow and Peiping. The fiction is that the leaflets are being printed in Albania, a country that is too small to do anything about the accusation, if it is indeed an accusation rather than an excuse.

PHASES

This is the "ta, ta," or "fight, fight," phase of Chinese bargaining. It is then followed by the "tan, tan," or "talk, talk," phase.

But what is there to talk about? Mao Tse-tung's price, so the Kremlinologists say, is to insist that Soviet Russia should live up to the brother-in-arms obligations of international Marxists. The Soviets, so Mao points out, have lands in Asia which they cannot adequately farm because of a shortage of manpower. China, on the other hand, has so many people that it cannot feed them. So why not put the surplus Chinese to work on the surplus Soviet acreage? And in return for Soviet freedom in eastern Europe why not give Red China a free hand throughout Asia — meaning a cessation of Soviet aid to India?

If the words of the old song of the Marxist Internationale — "The International Soviet will be the human race" — had any real meaning for proletarians today, the Russians would, of course, have to comply with Mao's request for land for hungry Oriental Communists and a quid pro quo territorial arrangement on the rights to extend the revolution. But the Soviets, as Mao Tse-tung has wickedly pointed out, have ceased to be orthodox Marxists. They are not interested in feeding hungry Chinese proletarians at Russia's territorial expense.

Thus there will be no satisfactory answer from Moscow to Mao's "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?"

SURPLUS

Theoretically, a compromise might be worked out between the Russians and the Chinese Reds if Moscow would only lend some aid to Peiping's efforts to industrialize China. But Russia itself has nothing much to give in this area. It has a surplus of oil, but the Chinese haven't the spare parts they need to keep machinery and an air force in shape to use imposing quantities of oil and gasoline. Since the Soviets themselves are suffering from the tacit sabotage of industrial slowdown and the agricultural dislocations imposed by a "why work?" peasantry, they can't produce the surplus that would be needed to bail out the Red Chinese economy.

All of which give the nations of the West their opportunity of engaging in their own statecraft of "I-chu-hua," or "What will you give?" There are still sixty-odd thousand Hungarians in Kazahkstan, waiting for amnesty and a return to their homeland. And awaiting freedom in Hungary itself there are those political prisoners who were jailed after the failure of the revolution of 1956 instead of being shot. These prisoners were under eighteen at the time of their incarceration. Their freedom might be bought for western wheat in an "I-chu-hua" deal before they grow too old and lose hope.

The Chinese and the Russians can't arrive at a bargaining exchange because neither group has anything to give to the other. But the West has plenty to give, so why can't it buy liberty for political prisoners in some quid pro quo deals?

Won't someone teach Lyndon Johnson, Dean Rusk and Averell Harriman to ask, "I-chu-hua?"

Neutron Counter

By RUFUS L. PORTER

One interesting gadget I got to investigate and watch in action up at the Climax Observatory was a neutron counter in a cosmic ray station which was set up at the observatory in a Quonset hut type building by the University of Chicago eight years ago. Since that time this machine has been clicking constantly 24 hours a day, counting the neutrons being hurled at the surface of the earth from the cosmic rays.

It is an electronic device that seems to need little or no attention. A row of little lights flitter on and off almost incessantly counting the single neutrons up to 128. Each unit of 128 is then registered on a meter-type apparatus, similar to a speedometer, or a taximeter. One of the solar observers checks the machine every morning and figures the total "bombardment" by neutrons the area has taken during the past 24 hours.

Our son, Chet, did this the morning I was there. The total number was something over 37,000. The average, he says, is above 40,000. When he spoke of neutrons and bombardment, it sounded rather sinister. Then I got to thinking that this has been going on since the beginning of time, and will continue probably into eternity, and I saw no cause for immediate concern.

For many millions of years, perhaps, mankind has lived with this constant bombardment of his earth by the cosmic rays — certainly long before he knew he was being bombarded by neutrons, which he has only recently learned to count.

But this machine is not simply a nutty scientist's crazy plaything. It comes under the heading of pure scientific research (research for its own sake). This is the type of research that has been chiefly responsible for man's advancement throughout the millennia he has dwelt on this planet.

One thing they expect to learn over a period of time is whether the neutronic bombardment is increasing or diminishing. This will give them something they can hang some theories on. And knowledge hangs upon the proving or disproving of scientific theories. Cosmic rays, magnetic fields, sun spots — these are the most intriguing things among the small group of scientists at the Climax Observatory. That and keeping the snow cleared off the pond so they can enjoy some ice skating in their idle hours.

No longer can an American boast, "I own this land, all the way down to China. I own the mineral rights, the surface rights, she's all mine." He knew, of course, that he only owned it to the center of the earth — the Chinaman on the other side presumably owned his land to the center, too.

But, according to the latest interpretation of property rights by our state government, "all water, including underground water, belongs to all the people," and it can be grabbed, in their holy name, from whatever source. Your own water from your own land is about to be rationed out to you. You will have no right to drill for it and sell your excess to those who would be willing to buy. You will "share" it with whomever the state tells you to on an equal basis with yourself.

Now, water has always been considered a mineral and has been included in the phrase "all mineral rights" whenever a piece of real property was sold without reservations. If they can take your water rights away, they can take any other mineral rights. Suppose you have a fine seam of coal running under your ground, or iron or gold or any other useful mineral. It is just as logical to say these other minerals belong to "all the people" as to say your water does. In fact, that is precisely what the socialists are always and forever saying.

This water steal is just one more step toward total elimination of property rights. First real estate and then all other forms of property will "belong to all the people."

But nothing ever can belong to all the people. What this misleading phrase means is that it belongs to the government, to the politicians and bureaucrats — the commissars, who will be the only ones left to ride the gravy train after the befuddled public, expecting something for nothing, accepts socialism as a better life.

Communism in Reverse

From N.Y. Daily News

From Moscow comes a weird but evidently true news story of a factory that makes men's suits and operates on capitalist principles — mainly the principle that to sell things you should make what the customers want.

The Communist notion is that all-wise planners should tell factories what to make, and the people should buy the products like so many two-legged sheep.

This theory was not proving out at the Bolschevichka textile plant. So last summer the Kremlin told the manager, Pyotr K. Noskov, to use his own brains and try to make profits.

He did, by finding out what sorts of suits Russian men wanted, and then making them. Results as of now: zooming profits at Noskov's plant, and a bright future for it.

The future may not be so bright for the Commies, though. This rediscovery of capitalism in Russia (almost a playback of Henry Hazlitt's masterly 1951 novel, "The Great Idea," about a Marxist state that saw the Capitalist light) could be a time-bomb to destroy Communism the world over. Let's keep our fingers crossed and hope.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Wants to 'Retire'

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem small to you, but it's big to me. Whenever my husband and I go to his parents', my father-in-law lies down on the living room floor and insists that I jump on his stomach as hard as I can. I suppose he's trying to show off how strong he is. I've tried to get out of these demonstrations because it makes me feel so foolish, but my father-in-law insists and rather than make a big scene I go along with it. How can I get out of these silly performances without hurting his feelings He is a very dear man otherwise, and quite sensitive. —PART OF THE ACT

DEAR PART: Even though father - in - law may be "dear" and "sensitive," you, as a woman, are entitled to be "sensitive" about jumping up and down on a man's stomach. If he must show off his abdominal strength, he shouldn't ask a woman to do a man's job.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been dead for four years and the company where he used to work still sends a Christmas card to "MR. AND MRS. ...." I feel terrible about this and wonder if other widows have the same problem. Or do you suppose they haven't missed my husband at work yet —FEELING LOW

DEAR FEELING: I am sure they miss your husband. (I'll bet they took him off the payroll.) Notify the company that their Christmas card list needs revising.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is married and has a lovely family. Her doctor told her that she must either give up smoking or die young. She's had pneumonia four times and her lungs are seriously weakened. I arrived the second day after she had quit smoking. On the fourth day she invited two of her friends in for lunch and bridge. One is a chain smoker, so I offered to call this woman and explain the facts, and ask her to please to refrain from smoking in my daughter's presence because she is tempted to smoke when others do. My daughter wouldn't let me call. She said that her guests came first and she wouldn't want them to feel tense or uncomfortable. I say that the hostess comes first and the guests are secondary. Which of us is right in the social sense. Also, isn't there a moral principle of self-preservation involved here? —ANXIOUS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter is right. She realizes that the strength to quit smoking must come from within, attempting to isolate herself from temptation will not solve her problem. It's her battle, Mother. Let her fight it her way.

DEAR ABBY: Please stop advising people to call their hostesses the day after a party to "thank" them again. When my guests leave, they say "thank you" and that is good enough for me.

The day after I entertain I am so bone-tired that all I want to do is crawl into a corner and stay there. But now, thanks to you, Dear Abby I have to jump up every five minutes to answer the phone and listen to somebody "thank" me again for the lovely evening.

I don't like written thank-you notes, either. When the postman delivers one of those little envelopes I think it is an invitation to a party, and when I discover it is just a formal "thank you" note, what a letdown! —S. G. R.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

To keep emergency police, fire and doctor's phone numbers at your fingertips, take a strip of paper, long enough and wide enough to fit across the top of the receiver of your telephone.

Write down phone numbers and names and cover with clear cellophane tape to keep the ink from smudging when handling the receiver.

This is also a great reference for the babysitter, your own personal use, and handy for children who are unable to use the telephone directory, etc. —Mrs. E. Ghougasian

Dear Heloise:

When the elastic in my underpants gets loose, instead of taking all the time and trouble to remove and replace it, I take two lengths of tiny round elastic and a large darning needle and do a running stitch through the old elastic. Quick and easy. And there are no bulges. —Zannah Buse

Heavens to Betsy! Wish I could claim the credit for thinking of that one.

What a time and money saver . . . the round elastic is much less expensive than replacing the stretched elastic with regular elastic or a replacement band. Besides, it is practically impossible to put new elastic on some pants (using the sewing machine) because the nylon puckers, the machine skips a stitch, or you miss a space, etc.

I am sure all the other gals join me in saying thanks to Zannah for this wonderful hint. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

When buying kitchen utensils for a bridal shower (or replacements for your own kitchen) such as paring knives, can openers, etc., instead of trying for matched sets, buy them with different colored handles. It is much easier to find something when you are in a hurry.

Haven't you ever scrambled around trying to find a particular knife, only to have to practically unload the drawer? —Mrs. McFarland

Letter Of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

If you have trouble making smooth gravy, or if you accidently make a lumpy batch, add a can of chopped mushrooms or a tablespoonful of dried onion flakes.

Either one greatly enhances the flavor of plain gravy . . . and the eaters won't know if the lumps are there by accident or by design! —Anne Rinehart

Dear Heloise:

We were sitting around one afternoon watching our neighbor knit a hat (on four needles) for her child, and the angora kept slipping off the needles that were not in use.

There we were, sipping our coffee and smoking our filter tip cigarettes, and we found a marvelous use for those filter tips. . .

We broke them off the cigarettes and pushed them on the tips of the knitting needles to prevent the yarn from slipping. Just great. —Esther, Arleene & Grace

Sure is, not the cigarettes but the three gals for sending in the terrific hint. Thanks, Pals. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

So many little ones are nervous when they are alone in a room, but my daughter-in-law really solved the problem:

She put a large mirror near the child's bed, at the level of the pillow.

Isn't it worth a try, seeing the child talking to his image and enjoying the company? —Grandmother of 15 small fry

Dear Heloise:

When my pattern envelopes become torn and worn (and I think you will find they do if you use them several times) here's what I do:

I save the nice, big brown envelopes we get in the mail. I cut my pattern envelope apart and paste the front of the pattern envelope on one side of the big brown envelope and the back of the pattern envelope on the other side of the brown envelope.

I find they last longer and the pattern goes in easier. —Mrs. R. A. H.

Heloise welcomes all mail, especially household hints which she can pass on to readers as space permits. However, because of the tremendous volume of mail she receives daily, Heloise is unable to answer all individual letters. She will answer readers' questions in her column whenever possible.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

To keep emergency police, fire and doctor's phone numbers at your fingertips, take a strip of paper, long enough and wide enough to fit across the top of the receiver of your telephone.

Write down phone numbers and names and cover with clear cellophane tape to keep the ink from smudging when handling the receiver.

This is also a great reference for the babysitter, your own personal use, and handy for children who are unable to use the telephone directory, etc. —Mrs. E. Ghougasian

Dear Heloise:

When the elastic in my underpants gets loose, instead of taking all the time and trouble to remove and replace it, I take two lengths of tiny round elastic and a large darning needle and do a running stitch through the old elastic. Quick and easy. And there are no bulges. —Zannah Buse

Heavens to Betsy! Wish I could claim the credit for thinking of that one.

What a time and money saver . . . the round elastic is much less expensive than replacing the stretched elastic with regular elastic or a replacement band. Besides, it is practically impossible to put new elastic on some pants (using the sewing machine) because the nylon puckers, the machine skips a stitch, or you miss a space, etc.

I am sure all the other gals join me in saying thanks to Zannah for this wonderful hint. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

When buying kitchen utensils for a bridal shower (or replacements for your own kitchen) such as paring knives, can openers, etc., instead of trying for matched sets, buy them with different colored handles. It is much easier to find something when you are in a hurry.

Haven't you ever scrambled around trying to find a particular knife, only to have to practically unload the drawer? —Mrs. McFarland

Letter Of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

If you have trouble making smooth gravy, or if you accidently make a lumpy batch, add a can of chopped mushrooms or a tablespoonful of dried onion flakes.

Either one greatly enhances the flavor of plain gravy . . . and the eaters won't know if the lumps are there by accident or by design! —Anne Rinehart

Dear Heloise:

We were sitting around one afternoon watching our neighbor knit a hat (on four needles) for her child, and the angora kept slipping off the needles that were not in use.

There we were, sipping our coffee and smoking our filter tip cigarettes, and we found a marvelous use for those filter tips. . .

We broke them off the cigarettes and pushed them on the tips of the knitting needles to prevent the yarn from slipping. Just great. —Esther, Arleene & Grace

Sure is, not the cigarettes but the three gals for sending in the terrific hint. Thanks, Pals. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

So many little ones are nervous when they are alone in a room, but my daughter-in-law really solved the problem:

She put a large mirror near the child's bed, at the level of the pillow.

Isn't it worth a try, seeing the child talking to his image and enjoying the company? —Grandmother of 15 small fry

Dear Heloise:

When my pattern envelopes become torn and worn (and I think you will find they do if you use them several times) here's what I do:

I save the nice, big brown envelopes we get in the mail. I cut my pattern envelope apart and paste the front of the pattern envelope on one side of the big brown envelope and the back of the pattern envelope on the other side of the brown envelope.

I find they last longer and the pattern goes in easier. —Mrs. R. A. H.

Heloise welcomes all mail, especially household hints which she can pass on to readers as space permits. However, because of the tremendous volume of mail she receives daily, Heloise is unable to answer all individual letters. She will answer readers' questions in her column whenever possible.

Bliss Will Not Actively Seek Top GOP Post

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allies of Republican National Chairman Dean Burch say they are confident Ray C. Bliss will not actively seek the embattled chairman's job.

Bliss, the Ohio state chairman, is rated the No. 1 choice to head the national party by those who are trying to oust Burch.

However, one Republican said Bliss has told Burch he will stick to a neutral stance at least publicly in the battle for the chairmanship.

And another, an associate of Burch, said of the Ohio chairman: "He's not campaigning."

Still, Bliss seems to be doing well without an open campaign.

And an old ally of Barry Goldwater, the 1964 Republican presidential nominee who picked Burch to head the party organization, announced he will challenge Burch as an active candidate.

The declaration came from Wayne J. Hood in La Crosse, Wis.

Hood, who served as director of campaign organization during Goldwater's presidential campaign, said: "I had hoped that Goldwater would be able to sit down with other party leaders and negotiate a settlement on the chairmanship, but that does not now appear possible."

As many of his foes rallied toward Bliss in the scrap over the chairmanship, Burch conferred secretly with the Ohio chairman in Washington Wednesday.

Burch, 37, who has Goldwater's backing in the party power struggle, would not reveal the substance of his talk with Bliss.

Answering questions after a speech at the National Press Club Friday, the Phoenix attorney said only that he had talked with Bliss and that they had discussed the chairmanship fight.

Bliss, who served on Goldwater's campaign steering committee, would say nothing.

That has been his stance all along, and Republican sources said Bliss indicated he would not change it.

One of Burch's backers said Bliss had given the chairman what amounted to a declaration of neutrality during the scramble over the job.

It will come to a head in Chicago Jan. 22, when the 132 National Committee members gather to chart an off-year course.

Republicans seeking to force Burch from his post say they have at least 70 votes lined up now.

Burch says he has the votes to keep his job, but has mentioned no figure.

Bliss Will Not Actively Seek Top GOP Post

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allies of Republican National Chairman Dean Burch say they are confident Ray C. Bliss will not actively seek the embattled chairman's job.

Bliss, the Ohio state chairman, is rated the No. 1 choice to head the national party by those who are trying to oust Burch.

However, one Republican said Bliss has told Burch he will stick to a neutral stance at least publicly in the battle for the chairmanship.

And another, an associate of Burch, said of the Ohio chairman: "He's not campaigning."

Still, Bliss seems to be doing well without an open campaign.

And an old ally of Barry Goldwater, the 1964 Republican presidential nominee who picked Burch to head the party organization, announced he will challenge Burch as an active candidate.

The declaration came from Wayne J. Hood in La Crosse, Wis.

Hood, who served as director of campaign organization during Goldwater's presidential campaign, said: "I had hoped that Goldwater would be able to sit down with other party leaders and negotiate a settlement on the chairmanship, but that does not now appear possible."

As many of his foes rallied toward Bliss in the scrap over the chairmanship, Burch conferred secretly with the Ohio chairman in Washington Wednesday.

Burch, 37, who has Goldwater's backing in the party power struggle, would not reveal the substance of his talk with Bliss.

Answering questions after a speech at the National Press Club Friday, the Phoenix attorney said only that he had talked with Bliss and that they had discussed the chairmanship fight.

Bliss, who served on Goldwater's campaign steering committee, would say nothing.

That has been his stance all along, and Republican sources said Bliss indicated he would not change it.

One of Burch's backers said Bliss had given the chairman what amounted to a declaration of neutrality during the scramble over the job.

It will come to a head in Chicago Jan. 22, when the 132 National Committee members gather to chart an off-year course.

Republicans seeking to force Burch from his post say they have at least 70 votes lined up now.

Burch says he has the votes to keep his job, but has mentioned no figure.

All-Star Game Called Off in Racial Dispute

By BEN THOMAS

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — The American Football League called off its All-Star game scheduled next Saturday, when Negro players complained of discrimination and left New Orleans.

The league also canceled its owners' meeting, slated to begin here Wednesday.

AFL Commissioner Joe Foss said in Chicago he would announce today whether the All-Star game would be played in another city.

Even before the game was canceled, the 21 Negro players here for the exhibition packed their bags and left.

"We're not wanted here so we are leaving," said halfback Clem Daniels of the Oakland Raiders. We were refused cab service and admittance to French Quarter-clubs."

Ernie Warlick, Buffalo Bills end, said the players met Sunday to compare notes on their treatment in New Orleans and then voted on the walkout.

"The vote wasn't unanimous," he said. "Some of the boys wanted to stay and play. But the majority ruled."

There were 20 Negroes on the All-Star squad plus one alternate, Dick Westmoreland, defensive halfback for the San Diego Chargers. Matt Snell of the New York Jets also had been scheduled to come here as an alternate but had to go into the Army.

Negro team members included Cookie Gilchrist, Elbert Dubenion and George Byrd of Buffalo; Larry Garron and Houston Antwine of Boston; Sherman Plunkett and Winston Hill of New York; Sid Blanks of Houston; Art Powell of Oakland; Abner Haynes, Mack Lee Hill, Julius Buchanan, Bob Bell and Dave Grayson of Kansas City; Frank Buncom of San Diego and Willie Brown of Denver; Ernie Ladd and Earl Faison of San Diego.

"Since all players are members of the official league family, the league must abide by their decision not to play," said Foss in a statement.

David Dixon, head of the group sponsoring the All-Star game, worked frantically to get the Negroes to change their stand. He arranged for the players to have access to all the better French Quarter establishments, restaurants and night clubs.

Westmoreland said Dixon and his group "made a big point of the fact that arrangements had been made for us to be accepted at the better restaurants and night spots and by one of the major cab companies.

"If they had told us this before, we'd have looked specifically for those cabs and sought our entertainment in those places. But they led us to believe everything was okay. And it wasn't."

On New Year's Day, the Sugar Bowl had its first completely integrated football game. Syracuse, which lost to Louisiana State 13-10, had eight Negroes on its team. They said they did not run into any discrimination here.

Looking at Hollywood

By HEDDA HOPPER

© 1964: By the Chicago Tribune

Hollywood —The idea of George Cukor, director of "My Fair Lady," joining up with Joe ("Carpetbaggers") Levine for a picture set me back on my haunches. But Cukor set me straight. There is a possibility he may do "The Idol," but he assures me he won't go in for any vulgarity . . . "Bogus masculinity or fake sex appeal is boring," he said. "I've never worked with an attractive girl with real sex appeal who had to make an effort at it. Take Ava Gardner and Lana Turner. They've never exposed themselves. Ava's sexy in a fur coat. Sex is always there. When exploited, it's embarrassing. It was not exposing themselves that made Brigitte Bardot and Marilyn Monroe stars. It was the curious clutch they had at your heart. Something that moved you. Any human experience is interesting, but it must be reasonable. When I see one of these pictures exploiting sex, I expect to see the Marx brothers come running out to chase the girls." . . . "The Idol" is a psychological drama about an American woman living in Rome. It would be shot here with some exteriors in Italy. "But the deal is by no means set," Cukor said.

It took Bob Hope a long time to get around to Carroll Baker but he finally made it. She'll co-star in his comedy hour the middle of February. "I'm going to get my diamonds out of the vault," says Carroll. She'll only wear them in the future when she's well guarded. She's also auditioning her new transparent Balmain wardrobe for Bob and his crew. They'll turn the camera on the duds and see if there's one outfit that can get by the TV censors. Because she used to be a dancer, she and Bob will do a turn or two. . . . John Frankenheimer's wife, Evan Evans, is being very understanding but it ain't easy. Her old man, who used to race on the dirt tracks back east, goes to the Riverside Raceway every week-end and test drives a $15,000 American Cobra at speeds of 170 m.p.h.

Omar Sharif will shave that beaeutiful head of hair for "Dr. Zhicago." The Russians are so upset about this anti-commie picture, they'd like him to shave it off to his Adam's apple. It's going to be a long hard winter for Omar — a bare head during the coldest winter in Madrid history . . . Debbie Reynolds canceled out on the Inaugural Ball. The big do in Washington and her engagement at Las Vegas were just too much much, so she nixed the nonpaying date. All her clothes are designed by Helen Rose . . . John Barry, who wrote the score for the three James Bond films, is en route here to do the same chore for Tom McDermott's TV series, Area Code 212, which will star Bob Wagner with Sheldon Reynolds directing.

Gypsy Rose Lee's son,, Erik, picked up Ethel Merman and me and drove us to his mother's wing-ding. First person I saw was Robert Q. Lewis, who tells me he sold a TV show for next year (he won't be in it). He's moved here bag and baggage. Wonders why he didn't do it sooner . . . The second person was Eliot Elisofon,, brilliant Photographer, who gifted Gyp with his marvelous book, "The Nile." He made three trips to Egypt over a four-year period photographing the river from mouth to sea, and writing the text.

Also there were producer Dick Brill and his beautiful wife, and Paul Lynde, and the Shelly Bermans. Imogene Coca was quiet as a mouse but you couldn't say that about the rest of us. Ethel had a bad cold, but was flying next day to New York where she'll do a TV salute to Cole Porter. . . . After a delicious dinner, Gyp poured black velvet (half stout, half champagne). I took one sip. It's lethal . . . Ain't love grand. It's better than any diet. Ann Sothern is becoming sylph-like again since she's been going with Rudy Diaz, of the homicide division. He flew up to Sun Valley to see the new year in with her. . . . You can imagine my amazement when I read the Gallup poll of the 10 most admired women of the world, then went right on through the runners-up, and lo and behold there was Hopper following Princess Grace, ahead of Luci Johnson and Rose Kennedy. Now I gotta believe those polls.

Elizabeth Taylor Wants to Quit U.S. Citizenship

LONDON (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor says she wants to renounce her American citizenship because "I want to become British more than anything else. I like the British best of all."

"It is true I am trying to give up my American citizenship and become completely British," Miss Taylor, 32, told a newsman as she and her actor husband Richard Burton left a London club Friday night.

The glamorous British-born screen star was wearing a bandage and dark glasses over a black eye which an associate called "quite a shiner" received in a tobagganing accident in Switzerland.

Miss Taylor's American agent said earlier in New York that she felt she had already renounced her U.S. citizenship after turning in her American passport to a U.S. embassy official in Paris and signing papers last October.

But the spokesman, John Springer, said that the U.S. State Department refuses to recognize Miss Taylor's renunciation statement because she refused to sign a portion of the oath requiring her to "abjure all allegiance and loyalty to the United States."

The actress, who rose to fame and wealth in a spectacular Hollywood movie career, feels that the United States has been good to her. She does not want to give a contrary impression.

"Miss Taylor had made it clear that she cannot honestly sign a statement including those words," Springer said. He added that she was allowed to sign another statement instead.

"Subsequently, she was informed that the State Department objected to the statement in that it did not contain the words," he said.

Miss Taylor's statement claimed that "under American civil law, a citizen cannot exercise citizenship in two countries." It said she "elected to use the citizenship of her birth and her husband." Burton was born in Wales.

However, U.S. legal experts apparently hold that since Miss Taylor was born in Britain the daughter of Americans that she holds dual citizenship. She has never given up her British citizenship, British officials said.

Lunatic Fringe Pants Latest Women's Fashion

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — When women wear the pants in the family, men should laugh, believes designer John Weitz.

They will, too, if their wives wear the poolside pants he prescribed at Sunday's fashion press show.

Yellow cowboy suits with chaps of giant red desert flowers, a scaffold jump suit, lunatic fringe pants, and a bodice made modest by a single bow were some of the customes created to get grins if not guffaws.

Weitz, who is the husband of actess Susan Kohner, heartily approved the ancient sport of poking fun at ladies' wardrobes.

"A man may roar 'Good Gawd what's that,' "but he is secretly amused at his wife's verve," said Weitz.

His poolside pants are fringed, ruffled, and and puffy with poises. Bare midriff and stretch pants that cling to the strategic spots are bold but not bad.

"Some pants for women are cut so that they look wonderful while she stands, but are awful when she sits down," said Weitz. "Other pants are great at right angles but not vertically ."

But Weitz found the secret of good cut in the suits worn by men on scaffolds. Those he makes for ladies are brilliant colors worn with fancy shirts that men on scaffolds would never wear.

Romance was the theme of the spring collection by Luis Estevez and there were more heart-shaped necklines than on Valentines. Bias-cut dresses that were seamed at the midriff in sunburst fashion skimmed lightly across feminine figures. There were ruffly, backed-tiered skirts, trumpet-flared ones and many cut as a perfect circle which fell in folds from defined waistlines.

Shawl-like stoles, a signature of the Castilian, were triangular-shaped and wrapped at the side over strapless dresses.

Bright navy was the most important color. Estevez repeated it in wool, crape, chiffon, and lace.

Undecided whether fashion needs a hemline change, Estevez compomised with a semi-demi-longeur skirt line for evening that is above the knee in front and drops to the ankle in back.

Making women kiss-proof seemed to be the idea of milliner Lily Dache, who wrapped pretty faces to their throats in tulle.

U.N. Chief Returns From Vacation Trip

NEW YORK (AP) — U Thant, secretary-general of the United Nations, returned to New York from a Caribbean vacation Friday night and gave his views about Indonesia's decision to leave the U.N.

He said he had not received formal withdrawal notification. Thant explained that if Indonesia chose to leave and later wished to return to the U.N., "they would have to go through the normal procedure."

Five Crewmen Are Killed in Train Crash

WOOSER, Ohio (AP) — A Baltimore & Ohio freight train and an Erie-Lackawanna freight collided head-on early today at a track crossover in Sterlin, killing five crewmen in flames.

A sixth crewman, who was thrown clear, was reported in fair condition at a hospital in Medina.

The fuel tanks on the diesel engines of both trains exploded, igniting fuel oil. Between 100 and 200 firemen from 10 departments battled 150-foot-high flames for more than an hour before bringing them under control.

"I heard a crash and the next thing I knew I was flying through the air," said the survivor, Clyde Howard Masters, 54, brakeman on the Erie-Lackawanna train. Masters, from Marion, Ohio, told a highway patrolman he had gone to the rear of the engine because the radio apparently wasn't working.

Only two bodies were recovered. The other three were in the cab of the B&O train, which was searing from the heat.

Ira Brattin, who lives within sight of the tracks, said he had just gone to bed when the crash occurred.

"It shook the house," he said. "It sounded like the Russians dropped a bomb."

Another neighbor, Skip Johnson, said "I thought a bulding had blown up."

Sterling is about 20 miles north of Wooster and 35 miles southwest of Cleveland.

The trains were the B&O's "The Virginian," en route from Willard, Ohio, to New Castle, Pa. The other train was No. 77, en route to Chicago from New York City. Cars were piled up three high, and wires were down in the area.

Recovered from the cab of the Erie-Lackawanna train were the bodies of Donald Narney, 42, the engineer, and a brakeman, C. Porter. Both were from Marion, Ohio.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The daughter of August A. Busch Jr., president of Anheuser-Busch brewery, accidentally left a handbag containing jewels worth $12,000 at Lambert — St. Louis Airport Sunday night. When she returned, it was gone.

Carolotta Busch Flanigan of Pasadena, Calif., said August Busch III had picked her up at the airport and put her bags in the car. However, they accidentally left the handbag behind.

All-Star Game Called Off in Racial Dispute

By BEN THOMAS

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — The American Football League called off its All-Star game scheduled next Saturday, when Negro players complained of discrimination and left New Orleans.

The league also canceled its owners' meeting, slated to begin here Wednesday.

AFL Commissioner Joe Foss said in Chicago he would announce today whether the All-Star game would be played in another city.

Even before the game was canceled, the 21 Negro players here for the exhibition packed their bags and left.

"We're not wanted here so we are leaving," said halfback Clem Daniels of the Oakland Raiders. We were refused cab service and admittance to French Quarter-clubs."

Ernie Warlick, Buffalo Bills end, said the players met Sunday to compare notes on their treatment in New Orleans and then voted on the walkout.

"The vote wasn't unanimous," he said. "Some of the boys wanted to stay and play. But the majority ruled."

There were 20 Negroes on the All-Star squad plus one alternate, Dick Westmoreland, defensive halfback for the San Diego Chargers. Matt Snell of the New York Jets also had been scheduled to come here as an alternate but had to go into the Army.

Negro team members included Cookie Gilchrist, Elbert Dubenion and George Byrd of Buffalo; Larry Garron and Houston Antwine of Boston; Sherman Plunkett and Winston Hill of New York; Sid Blanks of Houston; Art Powell of Oakland; Abner Haynes, Mack Lee Hill, Julius Buchanan, Bob Bell and Dave Grayson of Kansas City; Frank Buncom of San Diego and Willie Brown of Denver; Ernie Ladd and Earl Faison of San Diego.

"Since all players are members of the official league family, the league must abide by their decision not to play," said Foss in a statement.

David Dixon, head of the group sponsoring the All-Star game, worked frantically to get the Negroes to change their stand. He arranged for the players to have access to all the better French Quarter establishments, restaurants and night clubs.

Westmoreland said Dixon and his group "made a big point of the fact that arrangements had been made for us to be accepted at the better restaurants and night spots and by one of the major cab companies.

"If they had told us this before, we'd have looked specifically for those cabs and sought our entertainment in those places. But they led us to believe everything was okay. And it wasn't."

On New Year's Day, the Sugar Bowl had its first completely integrated football game. Syracuse, which lost to Louisiana State 13-10, had eight Negroes on its team. They said they did not run into any discrimination here.

Looking at Hollywood

By HEDDA HOPPER

© 1964: By the Chicago Tribune

Hollywood —The idea of George Cukor, director of "My Fair Lady," joining up with Joe ("Carpetbaggers") Levine for a picture set me back on my haunches. But Cukor set me straight. There is a possibility he may do "The Idol," but he assures me he won't go in for any vulgarity . . . "Bogus masculinity or fake sex appeal is boring," he said. "I've never worked with an attractive girl with real sex appeal who had to make an effort at it. Take Ava Gardner and Lana Turner. They've never exposed themselves. Ava's sexy in a fur coat. Sex is always there. When exploited, it's embarrassing. It was not exposing themselves that made Brigitte Bardot and Marilyn Monroe stars. It was the curious clutch they had at your heart. Something that moved you. Any human experience is interesting, but it must be reasonable. When I see one of these pictures exploiting sex, I expect to see the Marx brothers come running out to chase the girls." . . . "The Idol" is a psychological drama about an American woman living in Rome. It would be shot here with some exteriors in Italy. "But the deal is by no means set," Cukor said.

It took Bob Hope a long time to get around to Carroll Baker but he finally made it. She'll co-star in his comedy hour the middle of February. "I'm going to get my diamonds out of the vault," says Carroll. She'll only wear them in the future when she's well guarded. She's also auditioning her new transparent Balmain wardrobe for Bob and his crew. They'll turn the camera on the duds and see if there's one outfit that can get by the TV censors. Because she used to be a dancer, she and Bob will do a turn or two. . . . John Frankenheimer's wife, Evan Evans, is being very understanding but it ain't easy. Her old man, who used to race on the dirt tracks back east, goes to the Riverside Raceway every week-end and test drives a $15,000 American Cobra at speeds of 170 m.p.h.

Omar Sharif will shave that beaeutiful head of hair for "Dr. Zhicago." The Russians are so upset about this anti-commie picture, they'd like him to shave it off to his Adam's apple. It's going to be a long hard winter for Omar — a bare head during the coldest winter in Madrid history . . . Debbie Reynolds canceled out on the Inaugural Ball. The big do in Washington and her engagement at Las Vegas were just too much much, so she nixed the nonpaying date. Ali her clothes are designed by Helen Rose . . . John Barry, who wrote the score for the three James Bond films, is en route here to do the same chore for Tom McDermott's TV series, Area Code 212, which will star Bob Wagner with Sheldon Reynolds directing.

Gypsy Rose Lee's son,, Erik, picked up Ethel Merman and me and drove us to his mother's wing-ding. First person I saw was Robert Q. Lewis, who tells me he sold a TV show for next year (he won't be in it). He's moved here bag and baggage. Wonders why he didn't do it sooner . . . The second person was Eliot Elisofon,, brilliant Photographer, who gifted Gyp with his marvelous book, "The Nile." He made three trips to Egypt over a four-year period photographing the river from mouth to sea, and writing the text.

Also there were producer Dick Brill and his beautiful wife, and Paul Lynde, and the Shelly Bermans. Imogene Coca was quiet as a mouse but you couldn't say that about the rest of us. Ethel had a bad cold, but was flying next day to New York where she'll do a TV salute to Cole Porter. . . . After a delicious dinner, Gyp poured black velvet (half stout, half champagne). I took one sip. It's lethal . . . Ain't love grand. It's better than any diet. Ann Sothern is becoming sylph-like again since she's been going with Rudy Diaz, of the homicide division. He flew up to Sun Valley to see the new year in with her. . . . You can imagine my amazement when I read the Gallup poll of the 10 most admired women of the world, then went right on through the runners-up, and lo and behold there was Hopper following Princess Grace, ahead of Luci Johnson and Rose Kennedy. Now I gotta believe those polls.

Elizabeth Taylor Wants to Quit U.S. Citizenship

LONDON (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor says she wants to renounce her American citizenship because "I want to become British more than anything else. I like the British best of all."

"It is true I am trying to give up my American citizenship and become completely British," Miss Taylor, 32, told a newsman as she and her actor husband Richard Burton left a London club Friday night.

The glamorous British-born screen star was wearing a bandage and dark glasses over a black eye which an associate called "quite a shiner" received in a tobagganing accident in Switzerland.

Miss Taylor's American agent said earlier in New York that she felt she had already renounced her U.S. citizenship after turning in her American passport to a U.S. embassy official in Paris and signing papers last October.

But the spokesman, John Springer, said that the U.S. State Department refuses to recognize Miss Taylor's renunciation statement because she refused to sign a portion of the oath requiring her to "abjure all allegiance and loyalty to the United States."

The actress, who rose to fame and wealth in a spectacular Hollywood movie career, feels that the United States has been good to her. She does not want to give a contrary impression.

"Miss Taylor had made it clear that she cannot honestly sign a statement including those words," Springer said. He added that she was allowed to sign another statement instead.

"Subsequently, she was informed that the State Department objected to the statement in that it did not contain the words," he said.

Miss Taylor's statement claimed that "under American civil law, a citizen cannot exercise citizenship in two countries." It said she "elected to use the citizenship of her birth and her husband." Burton was born in Wales.

However, U.S. legal experts apparently hold that since Miss Taylor was born in Britain the daughter of Americans that she holds dual citizenship. She has never given up her British citizenship, British officials said.

Lunatic Fringe Pants Latest Women's Fashion

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — When women wear the pants in the family, men should laugh, believes designer John Weitz.

They will, too, if their wives wear the poolside pants he prescribed at Sunday's fashion press show.

Yellow cowboy suits with chaps of giant red desert flowers, a scaffold jump suit, lunatic fringe pants, and a bodice made modest by a single bow were some of the customes created to get grins if not guffaws.

Weitz, who is the husband of actess Susan Kohner, heartily approved the ancient sport of poking fun at ladies' wardrobes.

"A man may roar 'Good Gawd what's that,' "but he is secretly amused at his wife's verve," said Weitz.

His poolside pants are fringed, ruffled, and and puffy with poises. Bare midriff and stretch pants that cling to the strategic spots are bold but not bad.

"Some pants for women are cut so that they look wonderful while she stands, but are awful when she sits down," said Weitz. "Other pants are great at right angles but not vertically .

But Weitz found the secret of good cut in the suits worn by men on scaffolds. Those he makes for ladies are brilliant colors worn with fancy shirts that men on scaffolds would never wear.

Romance was the theme of the spring collection by Luis Estevez and there were more heart-shaped necklines than on Valentines. Bias-cut dresses that were seamed at the midriff in sunburst fashion skimmed lightly across feminine figures. There were ruffly, backed-tiered skirts, trumpet-flared ones and many cut as a perfect circle which fell in folds from defined waistlines.

Shawl-like stoles, a signature of the Castilian, were triangular-shaped and wrapped at the side over strapless dresses.

Bright navy was the most important color. Estevez repeated it in wool, crape, chiffon, and lace.

Undecided whether fashion needs a hemline change, Estevez compomised with a semi-demi-longeur skirt line for evening that is above the knee in front and drops to the ankle in back.

Making women kiss-proof seemed to be the idea of milliner Lily Dache, who wrapped pretty faces to their throats in tulle.

U.N. Chief Returns From Vacation Trip

NEW YORK (AP) — U Thant, secretary-general of the United Nations, returned to New York from a Caribbean vacation Friday night and gave his views about Indonesia's decision to leave the U.N.

He said he had not received formal withdrawal notification. Thant explained that if Indonesia chose to leave and later wished to return to the U.N., "they would have to go through the normal procedure."

Five Crewmen Are Killed in Train Crash

WOOSER, Ohio (AP) — A Baltimore & Ohio freight train and an Erie-Lackawanna freight collided head-on early today at a track crossover in Sterlin, killing five crewmen in flames.

A sixth crewman, who was thrown clear, was reported in fair condition at a hospital in Medina.

The fuel tanks on the diesel engines of both trains exploded, igniting fuel oil. Between 100 and 200 firemen from 10 departments battled 150-foot-high flames for more than an hour before bringing them under control.

"I heard a crash and the next thing I knew I was flying through the air," said the survivor, Clyde Howard Masters, 54, brakeman on the Erie-Lackawanna train. Masters, from Marion, Ohio, told a highway patrolman he had gone to the rear of the engine because the radio apparently wasn't working.

Only two bodies were recovered. The other three were in the cab of the B&O train, which was searing from the heat.

Ira Brattin, who lives within sight of the tracks, said he had just gone to bed when the crash occurred.

"It shook the house," he said. "It sounded like the Russians dropped a bomb."

Another neighbor, Skip Johnson, said "I thought a bulding had blown up."

Sterling is about 20 miles north of Wooster and 35 miles southwest of Cleveland.

The trains were the B&O's "The Virginian," en route from Willard, Ohio, to New Castle, Pa. The other train was No. 77, en route to Chicago from New York City. Cars were piled up three high, and wires were down in the area.

Recovered from the cab of the Erie-Lackawanna train were the bodies of Donald Narney, 42, the engineer, and a brakeman, C. Porter. Both were from Marion, Ohio.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The daughter of August A. Busch Jr., president of Anheuser-Busch brewery, accidentally left a handbag containing jewels worth $12,000 at Lambert — St. Louis Airport Sunday night. When she returned, it was gone.

Carolotta Busch Flanigan of Pasadena, Calif., said August Busch III had picked her up at the airport and put her bags in the car. However, they accidentally left the handbag behind.

Five Men Lost As Cargo Plane Explodes, Falls

HONOLULU (AP) — A huge U.S. Air Force cargo plane capable of lifting 50 tons plunged into the Pacific Ocean less than a minute after takeoff from Wake Island Sunday. No trace could be found of its six-man crew.

The Cargomaster exploded and burned as it hit the water about a mile east of Wake. Control tower officials said the takeoff had appeared normal as the four-engine aircraft left the runway.

Federal Aviation Agency observers in the tower saw the explosion and dispatched crash boats to the scene. Darkness hampered the search. After daylight, about five hours after the crash, searchers found debris on the water but no trace of survivors or bodies.

Aboard the Dover (Del.) Air Force Base plane were:

Capt. Arthur F. Wiegand, 30, Clearwater, Fla., the aircraft commander; Maj. Herman D. Stephan, 44. Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada, copilot; 1st Lt. Jon B. Parker, 24, Silver Spring, Md.; T. Sgt. James O. Smith, 29, Elmira, N.Y.; S. Sgt. Anthony Panzarella, 36, Queens, N.Y., and S. Sgt. James Gold, 34, Squantum, Mass.

Two other Air Force men were aboard the plane when it landed on Wake but did not leave with it. They were M. Sgt. Earl F. Stoneking and Sgt. F. M. Bonnett, both from Dover Air Force Base. Their home towns were not available.

The Air Force said the plane was carrying general cargo from Travis Air Force Base, Calif., to Kadena AFB on Okinawa via Honolulu and Wake Island.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP)—Gold mining stocks declined and air lines rose in a mixed stock market early this afternoon. Trading was fairly active.

The gold mining issues took some sharp losses in reaction to a decline in the London price of gold and to U.S. government statements published over the weekend.

Airlines continued to be cheered by the rise in air traffic.

Cigarette stocks were down in advance of a new report on smoking and health but rallied above their lows on publication of the report which, apparently, was not as severe as some investors had feared.

Steels motors, drugs, rubbers and nonferrous metals were mixed, electronics higher and chemicals lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .3 at 327.7 with industrials up .6, rails up .2 and utilities unchanged.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was down 1.39 to 881.21.

Among gold shares, Homestake and Campbell Red Lake fell more than a point each.

IBM and U.S. Smelting were each down more than 2. Xerox gained more than a point, Polaroid 2.

Prices were mixed in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds traded in a narrow price range.

Drop Reported In Cigarette Consumption

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General Luther L. Terry today reported first evidence of a sustained reduction in cigarette consumption, and indicated it might be largely due to the ominous report of a year ago blasting cigarette smoking.

He said new evidence gathered from a national sampling of households regarding smoking habits indicated that an additional 7 per cent of the nation's adult males have quit cigarettes since 1962. That brought the number who have sworn off at some time in their lives to nearly one in four.

Terry said surveys by the Public Health Service show smoking among women also has declined since 1962 — to a smaller degree but "the first time on record in which the trend has been downward."

Five Men Lost As Cargo Plane Explodes, Falls

HONOLULU (AP) — A huge U.S. Air Force cargo plane capable of lifting 50 tons plunged into the Pacific Ocean less than a minute after takeoff from Wake Island Sunday. No trace could be found of its six-man crew.

The Cargomaster exploded and burned as it hit the water about a mile east of Wake. Control tower officials said the takeoff had appeared normal as the four-engine aircraft left the runway.

Federal Aviation Agency observers in the tower saw the explosion and dispatched crash boats to the scene. Darkness hampered the search. After daylight, about five hours after the crash, searchers found debris on the water but no trace of survivors or bodies.

Aboard the Dover (Del.) Air Force Base plane were:

Capt. Arthur F. Wiegand, 30, Clearwater, Fla., the aircraft commander; Maj. Herman D. Stephan, 44, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada, copilot; 1st Lt. Jon B. Parker, 24, Silver Spring, Md.; T. Sgt. James O. Smith, 29, Elmira, N.Y.; S. Sgt. Anthony Panzarella, 36, Queens, N.Y., and S. Sgt. James Gold, 34, Squantum, Mass.

Two other Air Force men were aboard the plane when it landed on Wake but did not leave with it. They were M. Sgt. Earl F. Stoneking and Sgt. F. M. Bonnett, both from Dover Air Force Base. Their home towns were not available.

The Air Force said the plane was carrying general cargo from Travis Air Force Base, Calif., to Kadena AFB on Okinawa via Honolulu and Wake Island.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP)—Gold mining stocks declined and air lines rose in a mixed stock market early this afternoon. Trading was fairly active.

The gold mining issues took some sharp losses in reaction to a decline in the London price of gold and to U.S. government statements published over the weekend.

Airlines continued to be cheered by the rise in air traffic.

Cigarette stocks were down in advance of a new report on smoking and health but rallied above their lows on publication of the report which, apparently, was not as severe as some investors had feared.

Steels motors, drugs, rubbers and nonferrous metals were mixed, electronics higher and chemicals lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .3 at 327.7 with industrials up .6, rails up .2 and utilities unchanged.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was down 1.39 to 881.21.

Among gold shares, Homestake and Campbell Red Lake fell more than a point each.

IBM and U.S. Smelting were each down more than 2. Xerox gained more than a point, Polaroid 2.

Prices were mixed in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds traded in a narrow price range.

Drop Reported In Cigarette Consumption

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General Luther L. Terry today reported first evidence of a sustained reduction in cigarette consumption, and indicated it might be largely due to the ominous report of a year ago blasting cigarette smoking.

He said new evidence gathered from a national sampling of households regarding smoking habits indicated that an additional 7 per cent of the nation's adult males have quit cigarettes since 1962. That brought the number who have sworn off at some time in their lives to nearly one in four.

Terry said surveys by the Public Health Service show smoking among women also has declined since 1962 — to a smaller degree but "the first time on record in which the trend has been downward."

Traffic Cops In Sky Are Halting Deaths

BY TOM NOLAN

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The chances of the plane in which you are flying actually hitting another in mid-air have been cut drastically in recent years. Still, however, there will be about 15 collisions in the skies this year—mostly involving private planes not protected by new traffic control systems.

Public attention was focused on the potentially deadly nature of air traffic by the collision four years ago of two airliners over Brooklyn, N. Y. It remains the world's worst plane disaster, with 134 deaths, including six persons killed on the ground.

Since the Brooklyn crash, the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) has made more than a dozen changes in its Air Traffic Control (ATC) regulations designed to reduce the danger of overcrowded air lanes.

The latest change, completion of the Area Positive Control (APC) separation center network, is the most spectacular and far-reaching of these.

With the addition of the Boston and Great Falls, Mont., ATC centers late in 1964, virtually all airspace in the continental United States between 24,000 (minimum jet cruising altitude) and 60,000 feet is now controlled by APC.

Only properly equipped aircraft operating in accordance with an approved instrument flight rule (IFR) flight plan are permitted in APC airspace. These planes are under constant radar surveillance.

Most other commercial flight at lesser altitude is governed by IFR, but is not under constant radar surveillance except in the heavily traveled air routes.

In good weather, collision avoidance is on a "see and be seen" basis. In bad weather, planes not on IFR are grounded. More than 95 per cent of the small private planes in this category fly under 15,000 feet, and 90 per cent of them fly under 10,000 feet.

The 22 APC centers use a total of 76 long-range radar sets. This near-solid coverage permits two aircraft to be safely separated by as little as three miles, thus speeding up traffic.

Yet, despite precautions, officials still expect that mid-air collisions will continue to average about 15 a year in the near future.

In 1964, there were 17 mid-air collisions resulting in seven fatalities. In 15 of these both planes were private craft. Each of the remaining two involved a military plane and a private plane.

There has been no mid-air collision involving airline traffic since the Brooklyn crash.

Main reason for the belief that these accidents will continue to average rought 15 a year is that the numner of "near misses"—those mid-air collisions avoided only by a pure chance or evasive action by a pilot—reported to FAA has remained constant over the last four years.

They average between 50 and 60 a month, roughly two a day. Their actual number could be considerably higher. FAA officials note that many pliots, fearing punishment which could ground them permanently, will not file a near-miss report under any circumstances.

How many of these potential collisions go unreported in a year is anybody's guess. In a 1956 study conducted anonymously among its own members, the Air Transport Association reported an average of over four per day in the United States.

In another anonymous study, the Flight Safety Foundation reported that over 2,500 near misses occurred between July 1961, and June 1962. This averages out to seven per day.

In both cases, these statistics were gleaned from confidential pilots' reports which were not submitted to FAA for investigation, evaluation and corrective action.

Of the 2,650 or so near misses reported to FAA in the last four years, about 12 per cent have been classified as "Critical avoided by chance only." Another 40 per cent are classed as "Potential: averted by prompt evasive action." The remainder are judged "No collision hazard."

The best means of averting near misses under normal conditions are a pilot's eyes, says one FAA official. "But at sonic and supersonic speeds," he adds grimly, "you run out of eyeball."

Only 10 per cent of the collisions at these high speeds are due to pilot errors. The rest are caused by controller and altitude errors, mainly the latter.

Present radar scopes have no way of estimating a plane's altitude. But a new system, called radar beacon, now being installed in an advanced test facility at Atlanta, may be able to.

The radar beacon screen, a simple instrument which looks like a horizontal bar, sends beams from the ground to the aircraft. Instead of bouncing off the plane as normal radar neams, they are received by a device called a transponder which turns them into coded symbols, passes them through the plane's altimeter, and returns them to the ground with height information.

Springs CPA's Sponsor GT Advertisements

The Colorado Springs Chapter of the Colorado Society of Certified Public Accountants is sponsoring a series of 12 institutional advertisements to appear on the second Sunday of each month in the Business and Financial News section of the Gazette Telegraph.

Advertising by the CPA society begins today in the Gazette, according to Vernon Nygren, public relations chairman for the local chapter, and C. Robert Taylor, chapter chairman. In Denver, society President Earl Moore recently said that the organization seeks to give statewide coverage to the story of Certified Public Accountants, on the theme that the initials "CPA" also stand for "competence, professionalism and accuracy."

Besides advertising in the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph, the CPAs are furthering their cause with ads running in newspapers in Denver, Pueblo and Grand Junction. Also the society's 1,000 statewide members are cooperating in such projects as high school career days, panel discussions on tax matters, telephone directory advertising and dissemination of pamphlets.

According to Taylor, the Colorado Springs chapter has some 60 members and has been in existence since 1949. He said that the advertising promotion of CPAs is being done to encourage more people to consult Certified Public Accountants and to alleviate a desperate shortage of public accountants.

Newsman Tries To Figure Out Magazines

By WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Due to unforeseen circumstances, the dentist took us a bit sooner than he had planned. So we are not able to review the major magazines as thoroughly as usual, having only had time to read the latest issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" and "Collier's Weekly" of Nov. 18, 1916.

Now, as a rule we have very little patience with reviews that do not come right to the point and say whether a thing is basically worth - while. But after years of orthodonture and subscriptions, we have concluded that you cannot sort the general magazines according to their basic worth.

We will illustrate this point by reciting a sampling of the contents of the two magazines and then defy you to say which came from the past issue of "Saturday Evening Post," and which from "Collier's Weekly" of a half-century ago:

A short story about an emancipated girl and her puzzled husband; a report on the Federal Trade Commission's latest doings; a letter to the editor by a reader worried by juvenile delinquency; a profile of a business tycoon; an analysis by Winston Churchill of the conditions in Europe leading to the battle of Verdun; a new design for running a more efficient office, three advertisements for cigarettes, and three for new automobiles.

Actually, they are all from the 1916 Collier's magazine. But we have not set them down here to disparage magazines.

We only want to point out that the same periodical press has been an integral part of the American way of life for so long that it can doubtless withstand the worst national catastrophes, short of universal fluoridation of water.

Consequently, it does not matter what issue of which general magazine you compare with any other. The fundamental differences between them will almost all be superficial.

In fact, the greater the magazine, the more similar it is. In the heyday of "Post," as we recall, you could not tell one issue from another. And the same was true of "Collier's."

But there never seemed to be any difficulty in telling the two apart.

For some reason, however, that has all changed. Today, the basic difference between the two, as we understand it, is that the most recent issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" is still on the newsstands whereas "Collier's" is not.

Moreover, we have been warned by informed sources at every street corner along Madison Avenue that even this slim difference is disappearing, and only a miracle can save the "Post" from the fate that swallowed "Collier's."

But as nobody can say why or how this situation came to be, we have been studying the two magazines very closely to find the reason.

The only conclusion we have been able to reach is that "The Saturday Evening Post" is not similar enough any more.

Norman Rockwell's paintings no longer appear on the cover. Ben Hibbs' name no longer appears on the masthead. Benjamin Franklin's face is not to be seen anywhere.

There is no article by John Bartlow Martin, and no short story by Clarence Buddington Kelland.

True enough, these are superficial items but they are what made the magazine what it was 30 years ago when the people on our block used to wait for the mailman to bring the latest issue.

Well, times haven't changed that much. At least not when a magazine for Nov. 18, 1916, is still pretty interesting.

And actually, it would probably be a lot cheaper to put out an old magazine.

Auto Industry Rolls to Greatest Year

The U.S. automobile industry rolled to its greatest year ever in total vehicle production during 1964, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported today.

Along with the record-shattering 9,307,443 vehicles turned out last year, U.S. manufacturers toppled two other records — total trucks and buses produced during a year and most cars built during a single month.

The highest - ever total for motor vehicles was better than the 9,204,049 turned out in 1955, said the AMA. In addition, the year - end truck total of 1,561,952 surpassed 1963 when 1,464,399 were produced.

The manufacturers also built a record 866,631 passenger cars in December — the highest ever for a single month. The previous record had been 799,375 in October of 1963.

Production during the holiday-shortened New Year's week totaled 143,217 units, the AMA said. Included in the total were 119,454 passenger cars and 23,763 trucks and buses. During the previous week 121,497 cars and 21,618 commercial vehicles rolled off the assembly lines.

Besides the record car figure for December, manufacturers produced 147,657 trucks for a healthy monthly total of 1,014,288.

Included in the record 1964 figure for total vehicles were 7,745,491 passenger cars. The figure is second only to 1955 when 7,950,377 cars were produced.

Total motor vehicle production in 1963 totaled 9,108,776, AMA said. Included in that total were 7,644,377 cars.

Demo Hopefuls Already Eyeing Presidency Race

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Lyndon B. Johnson will have no competition as the dominant figure in the Democratic party in the four to eight years ahead. But there will be some interesting trainees for his job.

They, include, of course, Vice President - Elect Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. - Elect Robert F. Kennedy of New York, and his brother, Sen. Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy of Massachusetts.

If the President holds his health and wins a second full term, the job will not be vacant until January, 1973. Thus the hard, practical rivalries of the succession are a long way off. But the vital career-building leading up to the test begins right now.

A Democrat who has helped make some presidents says:

"In the first six months of 1965 these fellows will be getting into position, determing what roads there are to travel. By next fall it will be time for a beginning look at who is doing what."

A quick assumption took root after the election that Humphrey would become the heir apparent. Yet it may not be quite that simple.

Johnson's own ascendancy to power through John Kennedy's death, and the Republicans' 1960 nomination of Richard M. Nixon, fired the growing notion that it is virtually axiomatic to give the vice president a presidential bid. Before Nixon, however, it had not happened for a century and a quarter.

The President is giving Humphrey plenty to do — in tough fields like civil rights and poverty. These burdens spell opportunity, but also risk.

There is the further matter of age. By 1072 Humphrey will be past 60. One Democratic observer in New York suggests that for an incumbent vice president, rich in top level experience, that may be no drawback. Party men agree, though, that 60 has had an old sound since John Kennedy passed on the scene.

It is a fair guess that the colorful Hubert will continue to enjoy the kind of strong personal following he has today. This naturally will stand him in good stead when the time comes for combat.

Nevertheless, Humphrey's flamboyance is not all political blessing. Four to eight years of maximum national exposure on the wide screen could cost him some points. Some of his friends were distressed that he could not find a good cut-off place in his talky victory speech election night.

After Humphrey, the two Kennedys spring to mind. The question that bugs many people, in and out of the Democratic party, is: Which one?

Bob Kennedy has many of the necessary attributes. He is steeped in political know - how, has much government experience on the administrative side, will be operating as senator from one of the country's most powerful political bases — New York.

Still, a good friend of both Kennedys says:

"I think Teddy may come along too fast for Bob."

Before Ted Kennedy broke his back (now pretty well mended) in an airplane crash last June in Massachusetts, he was indeed moving along in great leaps. His early 1964 campaigning for other Democrats across the country had begun to create a dazzling legend. He is the family's most exuberant campaigner.

In the years to come, comparisons between the two Kennedys are going to be made at every level of activity. Inevitably, in the view of some who know them, this public game of watching is going to be painful for one or the other, or both.

Bob's obvious seasoning, and six years' age advantage, must be thrown into the balance against a young brother whose learning capacity impresses some of the wisest heads in the party and in Congress.

First, however, this incipient rivalry for 1972 is Humphrey vs. the Kennedys.

All the principals, properly occupied with the immediate business of making a record, insist they are giving no thought to the competition. They express dismay at talk they are already trying to maneuver.

Humphrey is reported to have urged an old Kennedy associate not to leave the government. The Humphrey - Kennedy bond established during the late President's tenure appears to have, for the time at least, a smiling durability.

Most of the worrisome huffing and puffing in the two camps, if they now deserve that label, comes from friends who are a few stages removed from the inner circle. It is an old phenomenon in politics. Their cocktail party talk often is elevated far beyond its importance.

The era of Humphrey-Kennedy good feeling may get its first sharp blow when some of the books on John Kennedy's public life — done by former Kennedy men — reach print.

Drug Retail Sales Will Show Record in 1965

Drug retail sales totaled $9,200,000,000 in 1964 and "will reach the magic figure of $10,000,000,000" in 1965, Charles R. Beall, newly-elected president of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association predicted at a luncheon held in his honor by the Bureau of Advertising, ANPA, at the Canadian Club, today.

Pointing out that this continues "a climb from the 1963 total of $8,794,000,000," he said that "drug advertising will be tied to this climb." He told the luncheon, "As president of the NWDA, I do not hesitate to say that newspaper advertising is the retail pharmacist's most effective sales and promotion medium."

Beall said that his forecast 'was based on my continued confidence in the pharmacists's unique role in the retail market a dnhis growing merchandising ability. Also, we expect to see a greater number of new product introductions in the drug field in 1965 than in recent years."

Linking the future market growth of the drug retailer to advertising, Beall urged druggists "for effective, aggressive promotion to set their sights well above the average" in deciding their ad budgets. Independent druggists, he said, allow an average of 1.5 of sales — behind both chain drug stores with 2.2 and department store "the bellweathers of retailing" with 2.6. The Bureau of Advertising, he said, reports that drug stores put 75 per cent of their ad budgets in newspapers.

Beall, who is vice president for marketing, McKesson & Robbins, Inc., said that in his own company's experience this would run as high as 85 per cent." Druggists, he said, had been "increasing their investment in newspaper ads by approximately 10 per cent annually during the past years and the total for 1964 will approach $60 million."

The druggist, he said, "has to appeal to the consumer to shop in his pharmacy — his 'universe' is much smaller than any manufacturer's, but his needs are the same. The independent pharmacist is competing with larger stores, drug and non-drug, many of whom have created a national image through advertising. The independent has to build a consistent and favorable identity in his community and his best means is a well-planned newspaper advertising campaign."

Beall said that his conviction that newspaper advertising is the druggist's best means for building store traffic for greater volume and profit "is shared by all drug wholesalers" and this "message is being taken to the 54,000 retail pharmacists in this country." "Newspaper advertising," he said, "performs a helpful shopping service for acquainting them with the full range of merchandise conveniently available in his drug store. At the same time, it is the generator that kicks off the energy that gives his in-store merchandising more power, more mileage."

ins to national promotions. "All

He said that additional progress is being made in the character of the drug store ad, streamlining its format to convey a progressive message. Hundreds of pharmacists, he added, are attending wholesaler-sponsored sessions on advertising layout and merchandising and making greater use of ad mats for local newspaper tie-ins to national promotions. "All this," he said, "shows a growing recognition on their part that newspaper advertising is a fundamental instrument in building volume and profits at the retail level."

Exectives at the luncheon in addition to Beall and Lipscomb were: from McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Herman C. Nolen, chairman of the board, Henry H. Henley, president; Jack W. Cox, vice president, sales; John J. Fenstermaker, vice president, drug relations; from the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, William A. Studebaker Has Returned to Cab Market

A return to the taxicab market in both the U.S. and Canada was announced by Studebaker here today with Jan. 25 set as the production start - up date for a special taxicab model.

Studebaker, long a strong contender in the taxicab field, temporarily dropped its taxi model when it shifted automotive production to a smaller, more modern plant in Hamilton, Ont., last year.

Gordon Grundy, president of the automotive division of Studebaker, said today that continuing demands for the heavy-duty taxi package, coupled with the growing efficiency at the Hamilton plant, has made possible the resumption of cab models.

At the time taxi production was discontinued in December, 1963, Studebaker had a cab fleet of 650 units in New York City and had 200 units in Louisville, Ky., plus 115 in Omaha, Neb.

Other cities where Studebaker cabs have been an important factor include Erie, Pa., where the entire fleet is Studebaker; San Francisco, Memphis, Baltimore, Lexington, N.C.; Roanoake, Va., and Schenectady, N.Y.

The new cab models will be offered only in six cylinder models, with an option of heavy-duty Borg - Warner water-cooled automatic transmission or a three speed heavy - duty floor shift manual transmission.

Manpower Inc. Predicts Stable Employment

Sixty - seven per cent of the nation's businessmen polled by Manpower, Inc., in an independent national survey predict stable employment for the first quarter of 1965.

Eighteen per cent anticipate an increase and nine per cent a decline with the remainder offering no opinion.

Asked about their outlook for 1965 as a whole, the group was more optimistic. Fifty - four per cent of those polled said they expect employment to remain the same, while 27 per cent look for an increase. Four per cent said they anticipate a decline, and the remainder gave no opinion.

Analysis of the 25 industries polled nationally shows machinery manufacturers and public utilities expect greatest increases in employemnt during the first quarter, while transportation equipment manufacturers anticipate greatest increases for the entire year.

The greatest degree of stability during the first quarter is anticipated by trucking and warehousing firms, while food manufacturers expect the greatest stability during the year.

First quarter decreases are expected nationally by retail department stores.

Regionally, greatest increases in employment in the next three months were expected by businessmen in the east (Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina) and in the southwest (California, Nevada and Arizona. Highest forecasts of stability were made by those polled in the Southeast (Tennessee, South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida).

Forecasts for the entire year show 39 per cent of Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky businessmen expect overall increases in employment.

The quarterly survey is the 29th conducted by Manpower, Inc. which last year employed over 160,000 people in temporary and part - time positions. The firm has over 360 offices on five continents throughout the world.

Traffic Cops In Sky Are Halting Deaths

BY TOM NOLAN

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The chances of the plane in which you are flying actually hitting another in mid-air have been cut drastically in recent years. Still, however, there will be about 15 collisions in the skies this year—mostly involving private planes not protected by new traffic control systems.

Public attention was focused on the potentially deadly nature of air traffic by the collision four years ago of two airliners over Brooklyn, N. Y. It remains the world's worst plane disaster, with 134 deaths, including six persons killed on the ground.

Since the Brooklyn crash, the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) has made more than a dozen changes in its Air Traffic Control (ATC) regulations designed to reduce the danger of overcrowded air lanes.

The latest change, completion of the Area Positive Control (APC) separation center network, is the most spectacular and far-reaching of these.

With the addition of the Boston and Great Falls, Mont., ATC centers late in 1964, virtually all airspace in the continental United States between 24,000 (minimum jet cruising altitude) and 60,000 feet is now controlled by APC.

Only properly equipped aircraft operating in accordance with an approved instrument flight rule (IFR) flight plan are permitted in APC airspace. These planes are under constant radar surveillance.

Most other commercial flight at lesser altitude is governed by IFR, but is not under constant radar surveillance except in the heavily traveled air routes.

In good weather, collision avoidance is on a "see and be seen" basis. In bad weather, planes not on IFR are grounded. More than 95 per cent of the small private planes in this category fly under 15,000 feet, and 90 per cent of them fly under 10,000 feet.

The 22 APC centers use a total of 76 long-range radar sets. This near-solid coverage permits two aircraft to be safely separated by as little as three miles, thus speeding up traffic.

Yet, despite precautions, officials still expect that mid-air collisions will continue to average about 15 a year in the near future.

In 1964, there were 17 mid-air collisions resulting in seven fatalities. In 15 of these both planes were private craft. Each of the remaining two involved a military plane and a private plane.

There has been no mid-air collision involving airline traffic since the Brooklyn crash.

Main reason for the belief that these accidents will continue to average rought 15 a year is that the numner of "near misses"—those mid-air collisions avoided only by a pure chance or evasive action by a pilot—reported to FAA has remained constant over the last four years.

They average between 50 and 60 a month, roughly two a day. Their actual number could be considerably higher. FAA officials note that many pliots, fearing punishment which could ground them permanently, will not file a near-miss report under any circumstances.

How many of these potential collisions go unreported in a year is anybody's guess. In a 1956 study conducted anonymously among its own members, the Air Transport Association reported an average of over four per day in the United States.

In another anonymous study, the Flight Safety Foundation reported that over 2,500 near misses occurred between July 1961, and June 1962. This averages out to seven per day.

In both cases, these statistics were gleaned from confidential pilots' reports which were not submitted to FAA for investigation, evaluation and corrective action.

Of the 2,650 or so near misses reported to FAA in the last four years, about 12 per cent have been classified as "Critical avoided by chance only." Another 40 per cent are classed as "Potential: averted by prompt evasive action." The remainder are judged "No collision hazard."

The best means of averting near misses under normal conditions are a pilot's eyes, says one FAA official. "But at sonic and supersonic speeds," he adds grimly, "you run out of eyeball."

Only 10 per cent of the collisions at these high speeds are due to pilot errors. The rest are caused by controller and altitude errors, mainly the latter.

Present radar scopes have no way of estimating a plane's altitude. But a new system, called radar beacon, now being installed in an advanced test facility at Atlanta, may be able to.

The radar beacon screen, a simple instrument which looks like a horizontal bar, sends beams from the ground to the aircraft. Instead of bouncing off the plane as normal radar neams, they are received by a device called a transponder which turns them into coded symbols, passes them through the plane's altimeter, and returns them to the ground with height information.

Springs CPA's Sponsor GT Advertisements

The Colorado Springs Chapter of the Colorado Society of Certified Public Accountants is sponsoring a series of 12 institutional advertisements to appear on the second Sunday of each month in the Business and Financial News section of the Gazette Telegraph.

Advertising by the CPA society begins today in the Gazette, according to Vernon Nygren, public relations chairman for the local chapter, and C. Robert Taylor, chapter chairman. In Denver, society President Earl Moore recently said that the organization seeks to give statewide coverage to the story of Certified Public Accountants, on the theme that the initials "CPA" also stand for "competence, professionalism and accuracy."

Besides advertising in the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph, the CPAs are furthering their cause with ads running in newspapers in Denver, Pueblo and Grand Junction. Also the society's 1,000 statewide members are cooperating in such projects as high school career days, panel discussions on tax matters, telephone directory advertising and dissemination of pamphlets.

According to Taylor, the Colorado Springs chapter has some 60 members and has been in existence since 1949. He said that the advertising promotion of CPAs is being done to encourage more people to consult Certified Public Accountants and to alleviate a desperate shortage of public accountants.

Newsman Tries To Figure Out Magazines

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Due to unforeseen circumstances, the dentist took us a bit sooner than he had planned. So we are not able to review the major magazines as thoroughly as usual, having only had time to read the latest issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" and "Collier's Weekly" of Nov. 18, 1916.

Now, as a rule we have very little patience with reviews that do not come right to the point and say whether a thing is basically worth - while. But after years of orthodonture and subscriptions, we have concluded that you cannot sort the general magazines according to their basic worth.

We will illustrate this point by reciting a sampling of the contents of the two magazines and then defy you to say which came from the past issue of "Saturday Evening Post," and which from "Collier's Weekly" of a half-century ago:

A short story about an emancipated girl and her puzzled husband; a report on the Federal Trade Commission's latest doings; a letter to the editor by a reader worried by juvenile delinquency; a profile of a business tycoon; an analysis by Winston Churchill of the conditions in Europe leading to the battle of Verdun; a new design for running a more efficient office, three advertisements for cigarettes, and three for new automobiles.

Actually, they are all from the 1916 Collier's magazine. But we have not set them down here to disparage magazines.

We only want to point out that the same periodical press has been an integral part of the American way of life for so long that it can doubtless withstand the worst national catastrophes, short of universal fluoridation of water.

Consequently, it does not matter what issue of which general magazine you compare with any other. The fundamental differences between them will almost all be superficial.

In fact, the greater the magazine, the more similar it is. In the heyday of "Post," as we recall, you could not tell one issue from another. And the same was true of "Collier's."

But there never seemed to be any difficulty in telling the two apart.

For some reason, however, that has all changed. Today, the basic difference between the two, as we understand it, is that the most recent issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" is still on the newsstands whereas "Collier's" is not.

Moreover, we have been warned by informed sources at every street corner along Madison Avenue that even this slim difference is disappearing, and only a miracle can save the "Post" from the fate that swallowed "Collier's."

But as nobody can say why or how this situation came to be, we have been studying the two magazines very closely to find the reason.

The only conclusion we have been able to reach is that "The Saturday Evening Post" is not similar enough any more.

Norman Rockwell's paintings no longer appear on the cover. Ben Hibbs' name no longer appears on the masthead. Benjamin Franklin's face is not to be seen anywhere.

There is no article by John Bartlow Martin, and no short story by Clarence Buddington Kelland.

True enough, these are superficial items but they are what made the magazine what it was 30 years ago when the people on our block used to wait for the mailman to bring the latest issue.

Well, times haven't changed that much. At least not when a magazine for Nov. 18, 1916, is still pretty interesting.

And actually, it would probably be a lot cheaper to put out an old magazine.

Auto Industry Rolls to Greatest Year

The U.S. automobile industry rolled to its greatest year ever in total vehicle production during 1964, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported today.

Along with the record-shattering 9,307,443 vehicles turned out last year, U.S. manufacturers toppled two other records — total trucks and buses produced during a year and most cars built during a single month.

The highest - ever total for motor vehicles was better than the 9,204,049 turned out in 1955, said the AMA. In addition, the year - end truck total of 1,561,952 surpassed 1963 when 1,464,399 were produced.

The manufacturers also built a record 866,631 passenger cars in December — the highest ever for a single month. The previous record had been 799,375 in October of 1963.

Production during the holiday-shortened New Year's week totaled 143,217 units, the AMA said. Included in the total were 119,454 passenger cars and 23,763 trucks and buses. During the previous week 121,497 cars and 21,618 commercial vehicles rolled off the assembly lines.

Besides the record car figure for December, manufacturers produced 147,657 trucks for a healthy monthly total of 1,014,288.

Included in the record 1964 figure for total vehicles were 7,745,491 passenger cars. The figure is second only to 1955 when 7,950,377 cars were produced.

Total motor vehicle production in 1963 totaled 9,108,776, AMA said. Included in that total were 7,644,377 cars.

Demo Hopefuls Already Eyeing Presidency Race

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Lyndon B. Johnson will have no competition as the dominant figure in the Democratic party in the four to eight years ahead. But there will be some interesting trainees for his job.

They, include, of course, Vice President - Elect Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. - Elect Robert F. Kennedy of New York, and his brother, Sen. Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy of Massachusetts.

If the President holds his health and wins a second full term, the job will not be vacant until January, 1973. Thus the hard, practical rivalries of the succession are a long way off. But the vital career-building leading up to the test begins right now.

A Democrat who has helped make some presidents says:

"In the first six months of 1965 these fellows will be getting into position, determing what roads there are to travel. By next fall it will be time for a beginning look at who is doing what."

A quick assumption took root after the election that Humphrey would become the heir apparent. Yet it may not be quite that simple.

Johnson's own ascendancy to power through John Kennedy's death, and the Republicans' 1960 nomination of Richard M. Nixon, fired the growing notion that it is virtually axiomatic to give the vice president a presidential bid. Before Nixon, however, it had not happened for a century and a quarter.

The President is giving Humphrey plenty to do — in tough fields like civil rights and poverty. These burdens spell opportunity, but also risk.

There is the further matter of age. By 1072 Humphrey will be past 60. One Democratic observer in New York suggests that for an incumbent vice president, rich in top level experience, that may be no drawback. Party men agree, though, that 60 has had an old sound since John Kennedy passed on the scene.

It is a fair guess that the colorful Hubert will continue to enjoy the kind of strong personal following he has today. This naturally will stand him in good stead when the time comes for combat.

Nevertheless, Humphrey's flamboyance is not all political blessing. Four to eight years of maximum national exposure on the wide screen could cost him some points. Some of his friends were distressed that he could not find a good cut-off place in his talky victory speech election night.

After Humphrey, the two Kennedys spring to mind. The question that bugs many people, in and out of the Democratic party, is: Which one?

Bob Kennedy has many of the necessary attributes. He is steeped in political know - how, has much government experience on the administrative side, will be operating as senator from one of the country's most powerful political bases — New York.

Still, a good friend of both Kennedys says:

"I think Teddy may come along too fast for Bob."

Before Ted Kennedy broke his back (now pretty well mended) in an airplane crash last June in Massachusetts, he was indeed moving along in great leaps. His early 1964 campaigning for other Democrats across the country had begun to create a dazzling legend. He is the family's most exuberant campaigner.

In the years to come, comparisons between the two Kennedys are going to be made at every level of activity. Inevitably, in the view of some who know them, this public game of watching is going to be painful for one or the other, or both.

Bob's obvious seasoning, and six years' age advantage, must be thrown into the balance against a young brother whose learning capacity impresses some of the wisest heads in the party and in Congress.

First, however, this incipient rivalry for 1972 is Humphrey vs. the Kennedys.

All the principals, properly occupied with the immediate business of making a record, insist they are giving no thought to the competition. They express dismay at talk they are already trying to maneuver.

Humphrey is reported to have urged an old Kennedy associate not to leave the government. The Humphrey - Kennedy bond established during the late President's tenure appears to have, for the time at least, a smiling durability.

Most of the worrisome huffing and puffing in the two camps, if they now deserve that label, comes from friends who are a few stages removed from the inner circle. It is an old phenomenon in politics. Their cocktail party talk often is elevated far beyond its importance.

The era of Humphrey-Kennedy good feeling may get its first sharp blow when some of the books on John Kennedy's public life — done by former Kennedy men — reach print.

Drug Retail Sales Will Show Record in 1965

Drug retail sales totaled $9,200,000,000 in 1964 and "will reach the magic figure of $10,000,000,000" in 1965, Charles R. Beall, newly-elected president of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association predicted at a luncheon held in his honor by the Bureau of Advertising, ANPA, at the Canadian Club, today.

Pointing out that this continues "a climb from the 1963 total of $8,794,000,000," he said that "drug advertising will be tied to this climb." He told the luncheon, "As president of the NWDA, I do not hesitate to say that newspaper advertising is the retail pharmacist's most effective sales and promotion medium."

Beall said that his forecast 'was based on my continued confidence in the pharmacists's unique role in the retail market a dnhis growing merchandising ability. Also, we expect to see a greater number of new product introductions in the drug field in 1965 than in recent years."

Linking the future market growth of the drug retailer to advertising, Beall urged druggists "for effective, aggressive promotion to set their sights well above the average" in deciding their ad budgets. Independent druggists, he said, allow an average of 1.5 of sales — behind both chain drug stores with 2.2 and department store "the bellweathers of retailing" with 2.6. The Bureau of Advertising, he said, reports that drug stores put 75 per cent of their ad budgets in newspapers.

Beall, who is vice president for marketing, McKesson & Robbins, Inc., said that in his own company's experience this would run as high as 85 per cent." Druggists, he said, had been "increasing their investment in newspaper ads by approximately 10 per cent annually during the past years and the total for 1964 will approach $60 million."

The druggist, he said, "has to appeal to the consumer to shop in his pharmacy — his 'universe' is much smaller than any manufacturer's, but his needs are the same. The independent pharmacist is competing with larger stores, drug and non-drug, many of whom have created a national image through advertising. The independent has to build a consistent and favorable identity in his community and his best means is a well-planned newspaper advertising campaign."

Beall said that his conviction that newspaper advertising is the druggist's best means for building store traffic for greater volume and profit "is shared by all drug wholesalers" and this "message is being taken to the 54,000 retail pharmacists in this country." "Newspaper advertising," he said, "performs a helpful shopping service for acquainting them with the full range of merchandise conveniently available in his drug store. At the same time, it is the generator that kicks off the energy that gives his in-store merchandising more power, more mileage."

ins to national promotions. "All

He said that additional progress is being made in the character of the drug store ad, streamlining its format to convey a progressive message. Hundreds of pharmacists, he added, are attending wholesaler-sponsored sessions on advertising layout and merchandising and making greater use of ad mats for local newspaper tie-ins to national promotions. "All this," he said, "shows a growing recognition on their part that newspaper advertising is a fundamental instrument in building volume and profits at the retail level."

Exectives at the luncheon in addition to Beall and Lipscomb were: from McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Herman C. Nolen, chairman of the board, Henry H. Henley, president; Jack W. Cox, vice president, sales; John J. Fenstermaker, vice president, drug relations; from the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, William A. Patriot and News, and vice president, sales of all Newhouse Newspapers.

Studebaker Has Returned to Cab Market

A return to the taxicab market in both the U.S. and Canada was announced by Studebaker here today with Jan. 25 set as the production start - up date for a special taxicab model.

Studebaker, long a strong contender in the taxicab field, temporarily dropped its taxi model when it shifted automotive preduction to a smaller, more modern plant in Hamilton, Ont., last year.

Gordon Grundy, president of the automotive division of Studebaker, said today that continuing demands for the heavy-duty taxi package, coupled with the growing efficiency at the Hamilton plant, has made possible the resumption of cab models.

At the time taxi production was discontinued in December, 1963, Studebaker had a cab fleet of 650 units in New York City and had 200 units in Louisville, Ky., plus 115 in Omaha, Neb.

Other cities where Studebaker cabs have been an important factor include Erie, Pa., where the entire fleet is Studebaker; San Francisco, Memphis, Baltimore, Lexington, N.C.; Roanoake, Va., and Schenectady, N.Y.

The new cab models will be offered only in six cylinder models, with an option of heavy-duty Borg - Warner water-cooled automatic transmission or a three speed heavy - duty floor shift manual transmission.

Boa Constrictor May Get Legal Squeeze

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Harrisburg wants to put the legal squeeze on a five-foot boa constrictor.

Clair Fletcher, 29, a bartender, has kept "Joe the Boa" in his home as a pet since he acquired the reptile two years ago.

Fletcher said the snake "is perfectly harmless."

Irvin E. Harrison, a city sanitary inspector, said Friday there is nothing unsanitary about the cage in which Joe lives but added, "An accident could happen." That's why he hopes to find a law that would force Fletcher to get rid of the boa.

What do Fletcher's wife and seven children think about the pet?

"They don't either like or dislike him," he said. "Joe doesn't bother them and never has."

COLOMBO—Ceylon has announced she has no intention of paying for any losses suffered when she nationalized some firms.

Johnson Plans Four More Messages

By JOHN BECKLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sends four more messages to Congress this week to spell out details of his legislative program.

Tuesday there will be one on education, Wednesday on immigration, Thursday on foreign aid and Friday on space. They follow last Thursday's message on health and the President's State of the Union message delivered a week ago tonight.

Johnson's requests are piling up on a Congress that still hasn't had a chance to get organized. Both House and Senate hope to complete action on committee assignments during the week. Until they do, no action on legislation can be taken.

The President gave a hint of what he wants in the field of education and immigration in his State of the Union address.

He is seeking $1.5 billion for an education program touching all school years from prekindergarten to graduate school. The main effort will be directed at helping primary and secondary schools in low-income areas.

Little that is new is expected to be included in Johnson's specific request. What is new is the big Democratic majority in the House that offers the administration hope for programs that have been blocked in Congress for years.

Johnson's proposals on immigration are also expected to echo those submitted by his predecessor, John F. Kennedy, which went no place in the last Congress.

The key feature undoubtedly will be a plea for an end to the present fixing of immigration quotas for each country, with Western and Northern European countries given preference over all others.

In his State of the Union address, Johnson called for an immigration law "based on the work a man can do and not where he was born or how he spells his name."

He is expected to ask for elimination of the quota system over a five-year period. The total quota would be kept as an annual limit on immigration. But except for preferences given to job skills and the reuniting of families, persons would be admitted on a first-come, first-served basis.

There has been little advance information about Johnson's proposals for foreign aid and space legislation.

Although legislative committees have not yet been set up, the Senate Commerce Committee will hold a hearing Tuesday on Johnson's nomination of John T. Connor to be secretary of commerce.

Both House and Senate committees will be briefed by CIA Director John A. McCone.

One more battle remains to be fought in the leadership struggle going on among House Republicans. Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, the new leader, is expected to dump the assistant leader, Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, by midweek for an as yet undisclosed choice.

Federal Medicare Aid Cleared in Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Action by the State Welfare Board cleared the way Friday for federal approval of Colorado's program of medical care for the aged.

The board adopted revisions that were drafted after it was revealed last month that federal officials had refused to approve the program, holding up all ocation of federal funds to the state.

Welfare Director Thomas Bell said he was wiring Health, Education and Welfare Department officials of the action. He said they had assured him the revisions would be accepted once the board acted.

Colorado will lose about $800,000 in federal funds that would have been received if federal authorities had accepted the program as origionally drafted.

Dad's Car Fatally Injures Daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — "Oh, why didn't I overturn at the intersection" was the anguished cry of a father whose skidding car fatally injured his daughter Sunday.

The daughter, Ann Smith, 30, and her mother, Ann, stood in front of a delicatessen as the father, John Smith, 65, went to get the family car. The three had attended services at St. Agatha's Roman Catholic church.

Smith's auto and another car collided at the nearby intersection. Smith's car skidded on the snow and mounted the sidewalk.

"Run this way," shouted Mrs. Smith.

But the daughter ran the other way and was pinned against the building. She was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Mercury,
year's most successful car,
awarded year's top honor

Receives Car Life's Annual Award for Engineering Excellence.

The car you see on this page is the proud recipient of the hardest won award in the automobile business.

Car Life Magazine is very particular about its Annual Award for Engineering Excellence. So much so, in fact, that last year they didn't give it at all.

In selecting Mercury for 1965, the magazine stated, "The 1965 Mercury shows a quality of concept, design and engineering far above the ordinary."

Car Life goes on to describe "the comfort and the quiet" of Mercury. Then the "briskness, the massive handsomeness, and the good road manner."

Car Life isn't the only authority in the automobile field that's been praiseful of the 1965 Mercury.

Wide press acclaim.

The New York Times called Mercury "the surprise hit of 1965 in the medium-price field." Automotive News says it's "probably the most changed car in years." Life Magazine, the Miami News, the Pittsburgh Post Gazette have echoed these sentiments.

But what counts most, really, is customers — people who come in and say, "I like" — and then buy. Right now, the 1965 Mercury is getting the greatest customer acceptance in history.

Production up 83%.

To assure meeting the increased demand, production schedules for Mercury have been increased 83%.

Credit for all this, of course, goes to the car itself. An entirely new kind of Mercury — built in the Lincoln Continental tradition. Beautifully proportioned, and with luxury features and options once reserved only for the most expensive cars. No medium-price car has ever come so close in luxury to the high-price class.

Come see what all the talk is about. Drive the new Mercury — in the Lincoln Continental tradition — today.

Sweeping New Immigration Law Is Sought

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP — President Johnson will ask Congress for a sweeping new immogration law dropping race and nationality as factors in choosing foreigners for admission to the United States, qualified sources said Saturday.

The new law reportedly would give preference to those having special skills or other qualifications which would make them of special value to the U.S. economy or culture.

And it would make it easier also to unify families torn apart by present immigration law with its quota system.

It is understood that Johnson's proposal will be much like the one proposed by the late President John F. Kennedy is 1963.

Johnson, in his State of the Union message, called for "an immigration law based on the work a man can do and not where he was born or how he spells his name."

In his State of the Union Address a year ago, Johnson asked passage of the bill proposed by Kennedy in July 1963.

Since 1924, immigration to the United States has been based on the national-origins quota system. Quotas are assigned to each nation on the basis of this country's 1920 population and are designed to preserve the ethnic ratios of the U.S. population as it was then.

If Johnson follows the lines of the Kennedy bill when he sends his immigration message to Congress next week, the new proposal will have several goals:

— The notional-orgin quota system would be gradually abolished. Each year the old quotas would be reduced by 20 per cent, and the numbers taken away from the old system would be redistributed.

— The maximum number of immigrants permitted each year would be between 150,000 and 200,000. No country would be permitted more than 10 per cent of the total. If one nation did not use its maximum, the unused places would be reassigned to another nation.

— The new system of allocations would be on a first-come, first-serve basis. First preference would continue to go to those with the most to offer this country. It would be opened to those whose immigration would be "especially advantageous" to the United States. Thus it would include those who could contribute to the culture as well as to U.S. economy.

— A major section of the current law, covering Asia-Pacific areas would be abolished. The law now requires persons of Oriental ancestry to apply under the quota of their ancestor's country no matter where they have lived.

— Also eliminated would be the requirement that immigrants seeking first preference must also already have lined up a job in this Country.

— Parents of U.S. citizens would not be restricted to their country's quota. Parents of aliens who have been admitted would be included in the present system for the first time.

—The ban against immigration of any aliens who are mentally retarded or have ever had mental health problem would be lifted.

— The president could reserve up to about 30 per cent of the authorized numbers.

Thus the president could permit one country more than the 10 per cent limitation of the total of thet nation.

The Justice Department and its Immigration and Naturalization Service estimate that three of every four immigrants are consumers — such as women and elderly persons — as opposed to workers.

Syria Prepares Itself for New Socialist Move

By FAROUK NASSAR

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Lt. Gen. Amin Hafez invoked martial law Friday to smooth Syria's path toward socialism Capitalist critics were called a clique of traitors in alliance with foreign imperialists.

The soldier-politician, 47, who is president, premier and military governor of this Arab naton, established a five-men tribunal empowered to pass death sentences in wiping out "reactionary attempts to hamper the socialization process."

"Internal reactionaries in collaboration with imperialist allies abroad," Hafez charged, have campaigned to cast doubts on recent measures of the ruling Baath Socialist party.

These measures include the nationalization last Sunday of 115 industrial companies, including cement and sugar plants. The companies were estimated to be worth about $100 million.

This operation has been attended by unconfirmed reports of a flight of capital. It is estimated as much as $180 million may have been smuggled out of the country.

Hafez mentioned no foreign nation by name, but said Syria's revolutionary regime "will mercilessly settle accounts with this clique of traitors. The regime will wipe out anyone who stands in the way of its liberationist policies."

Prompt support was expressed by Syrian papers and the general federation of trade unions.

The chairman of the new five-man tribunal is Col. Salah Dhilli, who has presided over all Syria's emergency courts since the Baath party came to power in March 1963.

Peking Still Has Its Eye On U.N. Seat

By ROBERT LIU

TOKYO (AP) — The sharpness of Communist China's denunciations of the United Nations in connection with Indonesia's withdrawal raises a question.

Is Peking hinting it will refuse to join the United Nations even if the invitation comes on Communist China's terms?

There are indications that Peking still has its eyes on U.N. membership but may raise new demands to boost its prestige among the African and Asian nations.

The Red Chinese may call for amendments to the 20-year-old U.N. Charter to benefit the African and Asian countries admitted to the world organization since 1945.

In a government statement Sunday, the Red Chinese declared the United Nations needs to be "thoroughly remolded." Peking claimed the organization had become a tool of the United States.

But Peking did not suggest how it should be changed.

In their attacks on the organization the Chinese Reds were careful not to offend the new African and Asian nations who are prime targets in Peking's communization drives.

The Chinese statement said that "it is fully understandable that newly independent Asian and African countries have placed hopes in the United Nations." But it added that "blind faith in the United Nations must be liquidated."

Communist China has repeatedly claimed the United Nations needs it more than it needs that body. It has said it will join only on its terms.

It wants Nationalist China ousted. Both Nationalist and Communist China have rejected a "two-Chinas' or "one China, one Formosa" compromise since both agree that Formosa is part of China.

Should Peking join the world body, the Red Chinese could be expected to demand that the U.S. 7th Fleet be withdrawn from the Formosa Strait, separating Formosa from the mainland, and that all U.S. forces be removed from the island.

Before withdrawing from the United Nations, Indonesia also claimed the organiation did not truly represent the world's nations. Indonesia announced it would try to establish a "new-styled" United Nations.

But it did not make clear whether it would initiate the founding of a new world organization or strive for the reorganization of the present body.

Peking's statement did not mention whether it was collaborating with Indonesia to establish a "new-styled" United Nations. But twice in the last five days Red China has issued statements wholeheartedly backing Indonesia's withdrawal from the world body.

Should the two nations attempt to establish a new world organization,, it is doubtful if they will win much support from the rest of the African-Asian bloc.

The new nations would be hard hit financially if they pulled out of the world organization since many of them get funds from U.N. agencies for their development programs.

Ford Indicates Some Republican Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new leader of the House Republicans, Michigan's Gerald R. Ford, indicates some organizational changes may be in the offing for his charges.

In an AP interview, Ford said his party should not assume there will be a congressional coalition with Southern Democrats.

Said Ford: "The Republican party can only build itself in the South if it does things that will elect Republicans down South. And I'm not sure, based on past history, that having a tightly knit coalition with the Southern Democrats is helpful. So therefore, I don't believe that we ought to handle it quite the way we did in the past."

Ford said some of the party's "so-called liberals" helped him oust Indiana's Charles A. Halleck from the leadership post, but that he made no commitments to them.

"As we go down the road in the next two years," Ford added, "I do want to broaden the base of Republican participation in all aspects of our operation, and that includes people who are liberal and people who are conservative."

Sweeping New Immigration Law Is Sought

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP — President Johnson will ask Congress for a sweeping new immogration law dropping race and nationality as factors in choosing foreigners for admission to the United States, qualified sources said Saturday.

And it would make it easier also to unify families torn apart by present immigration law with its quota system.

Johnson, in his State of the Union message, called for "an immigration law based on the work a man can do and not where he was born or how he spells his name."

In his State of the Union Address a year ago, Johnson asked passage of the bill proposed by Kennedy in July 1963.

Since 1924, immigration to the United States has been based on the national-origins quota system. Quotas are assigned to each nation on the basis of this country's 1920 population and are designed to preserve the ethnic ratios of the U.S. population as it was then.

If Johnson follows the lines of the Kennedy bill when he sends his immigration message to Congress next week, the new proposal will have several goals:

— The notional-orgin quota system would be gradually abolished. Each year the old quotas would be reduced by 20 per cent, and the numbers taken away from the old system would be redistributed.

— The maximum number of immigrants permitted each year would be between 150,000 and 200,000. No country would be permitted more than 10 per cent of the total. If one nation did not use its maximum, the unused places would be reassigned to another nation.

— The new system of allocations would be on a first-come, first-serve basis. First preference would continue to go to those with the most to offer this country. It would be opened to those whose immigration would be "especially advantageous" to the United States. Thus it would include those who could contribute to the culture as well as to U.S. economy.

— A major section of the current law, covering Asia-Pacific areas would be abolished. The law now requires persons of Oriental ancestry to apply under the quota of their ancestor's country no matter where they have lived.

— Also eliminated would be the requirement that immigrants seeking first preference must also already have lined up a job in this Country.

— Parents of U.S. citizens would not be restricted to their country's quota. Parents of aliens who have been admitted would be included in the present system for the first time.

—The ban against immigration of any aliens who are mentally retarded or have ever had mental health problem would be lifted.

— The president could reserve up to about 30 per cent of the authorized numbers.

Thus the president could permit one country more than the 10 per cent limitation of the total of thet nation.

The Justice Department and its Immigration and Naturalization Service estimate that three of every four immigrants are consumers — such as women and elderly persons — as opposed to workers.

Syria Prepares Itself for New Socialist Move

By FAROUK NASSAR

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Lt. Gen. Amin Hafez invoked martial law Friday to smooth Syria's path toward socialism Capitalist critics were called a clique of traitors in alliance with foreign imperialists.

The soldier-politician, 47, who is president, premier and military governor of this Arab naton, established a five-men tribunal empowered to pass death sentences in wiping out "reactionary attempts to hamper the socialization process."

"Internal reactionaries in collaboration with imperialist allies abroad," Hafez charged, have campaigned to cast doubts on recent measures of the ruling Baath Socialist party.

These measures include the nationalization last Sunday of 115 industrial companies, including cement and sugar plants. The companies were estimated to be worth about $100 million.

This operation has been attended by unconfirmed reports of a flight of capital. It is estimated as much as $180 million may have been smuggled out of the country.

Hafez mentioned no foreign nation by name, but said Syria's revolutionary regime "will mercilessly settle accounts with this clique of traitors. The regime will wipe out anyone who stands in the way of its liberationist policies."

Prompt support was expressed by Syrian papers and the general federation of trade unions.

The chairman of the new five-man tribunal is Col. Salah Dhilli, who has presided over all Syria's emergency courts since the Baath party came to power in March 1963.

Peking Still Has Its Eye On U.N. Seat

By ROBERT LIU

TOKYO (AP) — The sharpness of Communist China's denunciations of the United Nations in connection with Indonesia's withdrawal raises a question.

Is Peking hinting it will refuse to join the United Nations even if the invitation comes on Communist China's terms?

There are indications that Peking still has its eyes on U.N. membership but may raise new demands to boost its prestige among the African and Asian nations.

The Red Chinese may call for amendments to the 20-year-old U.N. Charter to benefit the African and Asian countries admitted to the world organization since 1945.

In a government statement Sunday, the Red Chinese declared the United Nations needs to be "thoroughly remolded." Peking claimed the organization had become a tool of the United States.

But Peking did not suggest how it should be changed.

In their attacks on the organization the Chinese Reds were careful not to offend the new African and Asian nations who are prime targets in Peking's communization drives.

The Chinese statement said that "it is fully understandable that newly independent Asian and African countries have placed hopes in the United Nations." But it added that "blind faith in the United Nations must be liquidated."

Communist China has repeatedly claimed the United Nations needs it more than it needs that body. It has said it will join only on its terms.

It wants Nationalist China ousted. Both Nationalist and Communist China have rejected a "two-Chinas' or "one China, one Formosa" compromise since both agree that Formosa is part of China.

Should Peking join the world body, the Red Chinese could be expected to demand that the U.S. 7th Fleet be withdrawn from the Formosa Strait, separating Formosa from the mainland, and that all U.S. forces be removed from the island.

Before withdrawing from the United Nations, Indonesia also claimed the organiation did not truly represent the world's nations. Indonesia announced it would try to establish a "new-styled" United Nations.

But it did not make clear whether it would initiate the founding of a new world organization or strive for the reorganization of the present body.

Peking's statement did not mention whether it was collaborating with Indonesia to establish a "new-styled" United Nations. But twice in the last five days Red China has issued statements wholeheartedly backing Indonesia's withdrawal from the world body.

Should the two nations attempt to establish a new world organization,, it is doubtful if they will win much support from the rest of the African-Asian bloc.

The new nations would be hard hit financially if they pulled out of the world organization since many of them get funds from U.N. agencies for their development programs.

Mercury,
year's most successful car,
awarded year's top honor

Receives Car Life's Annual Award for Engineering Excellence.

The car you see on this page is the proud recipient of the hardest won award in the automobile business.

Car Life Magazine is very particular about its Annual Award for Engineering Excellence. So much so, in fact, that last year they didn't give it at all.

In selecting Mercury for 1965, the magazine stated, "The 1965 Mercury shows a quality of concept, design and engineering far above the ordinary."

Car Life goes on to describe "the comfort and the quiet" of Mercury. Then the "briskness, the massive handsomeness, and the good road manner."

Car Life isn't the only authority in the automobile field that's been praiseful of the 1965 Mercury.

Wide press acclaim.

The New York Times called Mercury "the surprise hit of 1965 in the medium-price field." Automotive News says it's "probably the most changed car in years." Life Magazine, the Miami News, the Pittsburgh Post Gazette have echoed these sentiments.

But what counts most, really, is customers — people who come in and say, "I like" — and then buy. Right now, the 1965 Mercury is getting the greatest customer acceptance in history.

Production up 83%.

To assure meeting the increased demand, production schedules for Mercury have been increased 83%.

Credit for all this, of course, goes to the car itself. An entirely new kind of Mercury — built in the Lincoln Continental tradition. Beautifully proportioned, and with luxury features and options once reserved only for the most expensive cars. No medium-price car has ever come so close in luxury to the high-price class.

Come see what all the talk is about. Drive the new Mercury — in the Lincoln Continental tradition — today.

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
COLORADO SPRINGS—MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1965 SECTION B

Couple Finds Old Newspaper Collection

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ebersole, veterans of the newspaper business, have found a random collection of old newspapers left to them by Mrs. Ebersole's father, the late J. C. McCreary.

The collection includes the first copy of the Gazette Telegraph dated Jan. 4, 1873, a copy of the London Chronicle from Jan. 27, 1767, and several others in between.

The Ebersoles, who live at 2305 W. Platte Ave., came across the collection while going through some old papers McCreary had collected over the years.

"I grew up in the newspaper business," Mrs. Ebersole said. "Papa was publisher of the Colorado City Iris, the Colorado City Argus, the Colorado Springs Independent, the Colorado City Journal and the Manitou Journal.

"He was one of those men who collects nearly everything. He must have just saved a few papers he thought were interesting."

The front page of the old Gazette includes several advertisements. One reads, "J. E. Clutter, M. D., physician and surgeon—office at the drug store."

The slogan printed in the mast head of a copy of the Colorado City Journal Nov. 28, 1861 was "Faithful and Fearless."

The assortment of English papers yielded information on the progress in the war for American Independence plus a few unusual advertisements. One concerned a pill for "giddiness. pain in the head and liver complaints."

Another, from 1767 advertised "three large volumes on a complete system of midwifery in theory and practices."

The papers themselves appear to be in good shape, probably, Mrs. Ebersole guessed, from a lack of handling.

"I guess we will just keep them and pass them on to our son someday," she said. "I don't know what else to do with them."

Carson Again Has Best Mess In Division

For the 13th consecutive time, Headquarters and Service Battery, 6th Battalion, 20th Artillery, at Ft. Carson won the accolades for the best mess in 5th Division Artillery.

Division Artillery has invited Maj. Gen. Autrey J. Maroun, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) commander, to present the plaque to Capt. Harold J. Hayes, battery commander, and Staff Sgt. Robert D. Moore, mess sergeant.

Moore took over the battery mess a month ago when Sgt. 1.C. Murray R. Wilson left for Korea after winning the award 12 times.

CWO Donald G. Estridge, Division Artillery food supervisor, rated three Division Artillery units equally high in his December inspection and called on CWO Roy DeWesse of Division Food Service to reinspect the three units. DeWesse declared the 20th Artillery battery as his choice for the monthly award.

Carson Units Complete ATT Tests in December

Many units of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) rolled out at Ft. Carson to complete their annual Army Training Tests (ATT) with regularity during the month of December 1964.

Battalions of the 1st and 3rd Brigades completed the 60 hours of realistic combat action in order to test the individual soldier's ability for working as part of an all important combat team, reading for action any place in the world and at any time.

Reconnaissance Scouts led all combat formations, folowed by heavy casements of armor, such as the M-48 tank and M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier each with their basic load of troops. The scouts had to keep a watchful eye to spot enemy activity. At the same time, high on the slope at the mountain post, the 4th Squadron, 12th Cavalry, acting as the aggressor force, prepared for rapid action.

On locating an enemy tank or stronghold, the scouts swiftly radioed their various platoon leaders such positive data as map-grid-coordinates and number of vehices spotted. The platoon leader responded by concentrating his mythical fire power on that location.

Scout jeeps used a leap-frog system for penetrating deeper into the aggressor territory.

The big problem for the aggressors of the 12th Cavalry appeared to be getting close enough in the face of a fury of small-arms and tank fire. Solving it involved getting tanks onto ground from which they could pin the fighting infantry, yet avoid deadly fire from tanks of the 1st Battalion, 77th Armor.

Radio played a large part in this as in any combat "chess game." Direct communications, standard equipment in each vehicle, added to the ease of movement within combat formations. Interphones allowed tank commanders to pass information to crews over engine noise.

Also part of the training test was chemical, biological, radiological defense situations; fields of fire; proper use of sign and countersign; noise and light discipline; and use of metascopes and infrared sights by sentries.

Once again the Red Devils proved that they were ready for action any place in the world and at any time, which is their mission.

Flexibility and team effort within the battalions were two important characteristics that helped them complete their ATTs in the presently confined maneuver area at the mountain post.

The final chapter of the Army Training Test will never be written because the valuable training and experience received during the exercises will never be forgotten by the combat ready Red Diamond soldiers who participated.

Carson Soldier Helps Nab Three Thieves

A Ft. Carson soldier on leave was instrumental in the capture of three suspected robbers. The soldier's company, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 77th Armor, first heard of his good deed when he asked to be excused from duty to testify at the trial Jan. 4.

Radziej parked his car so it couldn't be seen and watched the three men as they broke into the store. When they left, he followed them and got the description of the car and its license plate number. He then called the sheriff's office and the three men were arrested.

The trial was held in Little Falls, and the soldier drew an administrative leave to testify, with his travel expenses paid by the sheriff's office.

Major Studies New Approach To Stuttering

A new approach to the problem of stuttering is the topic of the Ph. D. dissertation of an Air Force Academy instructor.

Maj. Blaine R. Butler, Jr., an instructor in the Department of Aeronautics, will receive his Ph. D. in Aeronautical Engineering from Purdue at the January commencement.

The marjor's thesis "Stuttering Considered From an Automatic Control Point of View" was a bio-engineering project involving construction of a simplified model of the human speech system.

Through the model, Maj. Butler was able to study unstable conditions of the speech systems.

He concluded that stuttering is caused by excessive gain in the feed back loops through the ear.

Validity of the model was tested with techniques used in speech clinics to correct stuttering.

Maj. Butler is a command pilot. During the Korean Conflict he flew 19 combat missions in B-29's.

Armed Forces News

WASHINGTON — (Special to the Gazette Telegraph) — A substantial pay raise for military personnel and more Congressional initiative in determining the Nation's defense requirements will be major objectives of the House Armed Services Committee in the new Congress, according to Representative Mendel Rivers (D-SC) new chairman of the committee.

He describes the 1964 "pay raise" as "little more than a gesture." Chairman Rivers has already drafted a 1965 pay raise measure which he will siders hospital care for military introduce in Congress. He con-retirees must be continued. He does not favor 20 year retirement under normal circumstances, and believes that Congress should look into the proposal to merge the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

More than 4,500 military families now in Wherry housing are to continue to receive quarters allowances until scheduled improvements in the housing units has been completed. This is expected to take 18 months.

In what appears to be a compromise move the General Accounting Office has suggested to Congress that commissary prices be pegged at the level of retail prices in off-base stores, to avoid inequities between personnel having use of commissaries and those who do not. Congress is not expected to accept the recommendation.

The Comptroller General has set March 1 as the cut-off date for submarine pay for personnel who do not spend a majority of time aboard an active submarine. If the Navy can get a new law from Congress prior to that date the pay will continue.

The Comptroller General, in a new and more stringent directive, says retired Regular officers cannot draw their retired pay nor contact Defense officials in behalf of companies that make a profit from anything they sell to the Department.

This is to be applicable regardless of whether the retiree is involved in the selling. The rule does not apply to retired Reserve officers even if the Reservists retired under the same law and for the same number of years of active duty.

Lt. Col. Ronald J. Reynolds of the Army is the new Director of the Army and Air Force Postal Service. The change is rotated between the two services.

Effective July 1 of this year the Armed Services will lose 40,000 "stripes." The reduction will hit both noncommissioned officers and petty officer ratings, but there will be no loss in the total number of pay grades.

Word is that the top six pay grades of Marine Corps enlisted strength will be increased. The other services will adjust the several pay grades within allotted spaces.

Col. William Driver's vacated position with the VA is expected to be filled by a career VA Negro employe.

The Reserve Officers Association is sending out literature to its membership calling for an organized public relations drive to develop a "grass root opposition" to the pending Reserve merger. Although the National Guard units have always responded to a "call up" in a most efficient manner (1916-1917, 1942, etc.) the memo of the ROA says that placing Reserve units with the Guard would result in "deterioration of combat readiness."

Top level Pentagon Reserve leaders say that the Reesrve leaders are bringing more supporters to the Guard than to the Reserve, with such statements as "the National Guard is predominantly manned with superficially trained enlisted personnel, with no previous active duty military experience, who cannot possibly be effective without extensive post-mobilization training."

In the main, the effort of the ROA to "downgrade" the Guard in its press release has turned away many Reserve-minded members of Congress, according to Pentagon sources.

Since the earlier statement that the Department of Defense would study the possibility of doing away with the draft, volunteer enlistments in the Armed Forces have fallen off to an alarming degree. This may turn out to be the best argument that can be used for extending the law.

The Pentagon is studying a proposal to place Reservists under the Code of Military Jurisdiction during periods that they are in paid drill and annual training tour status. This woulinclude time spent in traveling to and from home, in uniform, to attend the weekly drills. The proposal would require Congressional approval.

At long last Col. Maurice F. Casey, Deputy Chief of Air Force Information, has made Brig. General, effective January 1. Casey has made many friends among the Pentagon press corps which is reflected in good reporting on Air Force activities.

The current issue of the Journal of the Armed Forces says editorially that the merger of the Army Reserve and National Guard is "logocal" and should provide the country with a more efficient and more easily administered force of Reserve units. COLORADO SPRINGS
COLORADO SPRINGS—MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1965 SECTION B

Couple Finds Old Newspaper Collection

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ebersole, veterans of the newspaper business, have found a random collection of old newspapers left to them by Mrs. Ebersole's father, the late J. C. McCreary.

The collection includes the first copy of the Gazette Telegraph dated Jan. 4, 1873, a copy of the London Chronicle from Jan. 27, 1767, and several others in between.

The Ebersoles, who live at 2305 W. Platte Ave., came across the collection while going through some old papers McCreary had collected over the years.

"I grew up in the newspaper business," Mrs. Ebersole said. "Papa was publisher of the Colorado City Iris, the Colorado City Argus, the Colorado Springs Independent, the Colorado City Journal and the Manitou Journal.

"He was one of those men who collects nearly everything. He must have just saved a few papers he thought were interesting."

The front page of the old Gazette includes several advertisements. One reads, "J. E. Clutter, M. D., physician and surgeon—office at the drug store."

The slogan printed in the mast head of a copy of the Colorado City Journal Nov. 28, 1861 was "Faithful and Fearless."

The assortment of English papers yielded information on the progress in the war for American Independence plus a few unusual advertisements. One concerned a pill for "giddiness. pain in the head and liver complaints."

Another, from 1767 advertised "three large volumes on a complete system of midwifery in theory and practices."

The papers themselves appear to be in good shape, probably, Mrs. Ebersole guessed, from a lack of handling.

"I guess we will just keep them and pass them on to our son someday," she said. "I don't know what else to do with them."

Carson Again Has Best Mess In Division

For the 13th consecutive time, Headquarters and Service Battery, 6th Battalion, 20th Artillery, at Ft. Carson won the accolades for the best mess in 5th Division Artillery.

Division Artillery has invited Maj. Gen. Autrey J. Maroun, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) commander, to present the plaque to Capt. Harold J. Hayes, battery commander, and Staff Sgt. Robert D. Moore, mess sergeant.

Moore took over the battery mess a month ago when Sgt. 1.C. Murray R. Wilson left for Korea after winning the award 12 times.

CWO Donald G. Estridge, Division Artillery food supervisor, rated three Division Artillery units equally high in his December inspection and called on CWO Roy DeWesse of Division Food Service to reinspect the three units. DeWesse declared the 20th Artillery battery as his choice for the monthly award.

Carson Units Complete ATT Tests in December

Many units of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) rolled out at Ft. Carson to complete their annual Army Training Tests (ATT) with regularity during the month of December 1964.

Battalions of the 1st and 3rd Brigades completed the 60 hours of realistic combat action in order to test the individual soldier's ability for working as part of an all important combat team, reading for action any place in the world and at any time.

Reconnaissance Scouts led all combat formations, folowed by heavy casements of armor, such as the M-48 tank and M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier each with their basic load of troops. The scouts had to keep a watchful eye to spot enemy activity. At the same time, high on the slope at the mountain post, the 4th Squadron, 12th Cavalry, acting as the aggressor force, prepared for rapid action.

On locating an enemy tank or stronghold, the scouts swiftly radioed their various platoon leaders such positive data as map-grid-coordinates and number of vehices spotted. The platoon leader responded by concentrating his mythical fire power on that location.

Scout jeeps used a leap-frog system for penetrating deeper into the aggressor territory.

The big problem for the aggressors of the 12th Cavalry appeared to be getting close enough in the face of a fury of small-arms and tank fire. Solving it involved getting tanks onto ground from which they could pin the fighting infantry, yet avoid deadly fire from tanks of the 1st Battalion, 77th Armor.

Radio played a large part in this as in any combat "chess game." Direct communications, standard equipment in each vehicle, added to the ease of movement within combat formations. Interphones allowed tank commanders to pass information to crews over engine noise.

Also part of the training test was chemical, biological, radiological defense situations; fields of fire; proper use of sign and countersign; noise and light discipline; and use of metascopes and infrared sights by sentries.

Once again the Red Devils proved that they were ready for action any place in the world and at any time, which is their mission.

Flexibility and team effort within the battalions were two important characteristics that helped them complete their ATTs in the presently confined maneuver area at the mountain post.

The final chapter of the Army Training Test will never be written because the valuable training and experience received during the exercises will never be forgotten by the combat ready Red Diamond soldiers who participated.

Major Studies New Approach To Stuttering

A new approach to the problem of stuttering is the topic of the Ph. D. dissertation of an Air Force Academy instructor.

Maj. Blaine R. Butler, Jr., an instructor in the Department of Aeronautics, will receive his Ph. D. in Aeronautical Engineering from Purdue at the January commencement.

The major's thesis "Stuttering Considered From an Automatic Control Point of View" was a bio-engineering project involving construction of a simplified model of the human speech system.

Through the model, Maj. Butler was able to study unstable conditions of the speech systems.

He concluded that stuttering is caused by excessive gain in the feed back loops through the ear.

Validity of the model was tested with techniques used in speech clinics to correct stuttering.

Maj. Butler is a command pilot. During the Korean Conflict he flew 19 combat missions in B-29's.

Armed Forces News

WASHINGTON — (Special to the Gazette Telegraph) — A substantial pay raise for military personnel and more Congressional initiative in determining the Nation's defense requirements will be major objectives of the House Armed Services Committee in the new Congress, according to Representative Mendel Rivers (D-SC) new chairman of the committee.

He describes the 1964 "pay raise" as "little more than a gesture." Chairman Rivers has already drafted a 1965 pay raise measure which he will siders hospital care for military introduce in Congress. He conretirees must be continued. He does not favor 20 year retirement under normal circumstances, and believes that Congress should look into the proposal to merge the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

More than 4,500 military families now in Wherry housing are to continue to receive quarters allowances until scheduled improvements in the housing units has been completed. This is expected to take 18 months.

In what appears to be a compromise move the General Accounting Office has suggested to Congress that commissary prices be pegged at the level of retail prices in off-base stores, to avoid inequities between personnel having use of commissaries and those who do not. Congress is not expected to accept the recommendation.

The Comptroller General has set March 1 as the cut-off date for submarine pay for personnel who do not spend a majority of time aboard an active submarine. If the Navy can get a new law from Congress prior to that date the pay will continue.

The Comptroller General, in a new and more stringent directive, says retired Regular officers cannot draw their retired pay nor contact Defense officials in behalf of companies that make a profit from anything they sell to the Department.

This is to be applicable regardless of whether the retiree is involved in the selling. The rule does not apply to retired Reserve officers even if the Reservists retired under the same-law and for the same number of years of active duty.

Lt. Col. Ronald J. Reynolds of the Army is the new Director of the Army and Air Force Postal Service. The change is rotated between the two services.

Effective July 1 of this year the Armed Services will lose 40,000 "stripes." The reduction will hit both noncommissioned officers and petty officer ratings, but there will be no loss in the total number of pay grades.

Word is that the top six pay grades of Marine Corps enlisted strength will be increased. The other services will adjust the several pay grades within allotted spaces.

Col. William Driver's vacated position with the VA is expected to be filled by a career VA Negro employe.

The Reserve Officers Association is sending out literature to its membership calling for an organized public relations drive to develop a "grass root opposition" to the pending Reserve merger. Although the National Guard units have always responded to a "call up" in a most efficient manner (1916-1917, 1942, etc.) the memo of the ROA says that placing Reserve units with the Guard would result in "deterioration of combat readiness."

Top level Pentagon Reserve leaders say that the Reesrve leaders are bringing more supporters to the Guard than to the Reserve, with such statements as "the National Guard is predominantly manned with superficially trained enlisted personnel, with no previous active duty military experience, who cannot possibly be effective without extensive post-mobilization training."

In the main, the effort of the ROA to "downgrade" the Guard in its press release has turned away many Reserve-minded members of Congress, according to Pentagon sources.

Since the earlier statement that the Department of Defense would study the possibility of doing away with the draft, volunteer enlistments in the Armed Forces have fallen off to an alarming degree. This may turn out to be the best argument that can be used for extending the law.

The Pentagon is studying a proposal to place Reservists under the Code of Military Jurisdiction during periods that they are in paid drill and annual training tour status. This woul- include time spent in traveling to and from home, in uniform, to attend the weekly drills. The proposal would require Congressional approval.

At long last Col. Maurice F. Casey, Deputy Chief of Air Force Information, has made Brig. General, effective January 1. Casey has made many friends among the Pentagon press corps which is reflected in good reporting on Air Force activities.

The current issue of the Journal of the Armed Forces says editorially that the merger of the Army Reserve and National Guard is "logocal" and should provide the country with a more efficient and more easily administered force of Reserve units. The editorial adds that despite the protests there is every indication that the program will be carried to completion.

NCAA Still Battling AAU, Pro Football War Easing

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association moved into its 59th convention today with some minor skirmishing completed and the big guns primed in the long-standing war with the Amateur Athletic Union.

Some problems with the professional football leagues, meanwhile, appeared headed for amiable, co-operative solution.

Jim Corbett, representing the 600-member NCAA, met with Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League Sunday night, but declined immediate comment until after meeting with his committee today.

Corbett also met with National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle Friday night on the same problem — the premature signing of college players by the professional leagues — and termed the meeting "most co-operative, in a progressive spirit."

The NCAA's Extra Events Committee, meanwhile, recommended to the council — the group's policy-making organization — that legislation be enacted requiring the same television restrictions for bowl games as for regular season games.

The recommendation was aimed, chairman Bud Jack of Utah said, at restricting professional representatives from the field. Jack said the action came as a result of the video broadcasting of several college players signing pro contracts during or immediately after participating in bowl games.

"This was not in good taste and was detrimental to the college game," Jack said. "We don't think it should be allowed."

The legislation, however, probably will not be enacted until the 1966 convention.

The first general session of the convention was scheduled today, with the long-standing, bitter and extremely complex power struggle with AAU the prime topic.

Simply, the fight is this: The AAU holds the franchise to represent this country in international competition. The NCAA, protesting that college athletes make up a bulk of the competitors in such competition — including the Olympics — wants a larger voice in the selection and administraton of the athletes. The AAU objects.

A cease-fire, ending with the Tokyo Olympics, was forged by the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and this is the first NCAA conclave since the truce ended.

One of the prime weapons is a proposed by-law, which comes up for action Wednedsay. Under the by-law any member institution which allows its athletes to compete in indoor track competition not sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Federation would be subject to punishment, such as being barred from championship competition or from post-season bowl games.

This, of course, bars collegians from the major indoor track meets.

At present, the NCAA has a policy restricting such competition, but has no punishment attached.

This policy has been defied by several Eastern schools, particularly Yale. Yale, along with five other Ivy League members and Manhattan, have teams entered in the first major Eastern meet in Boston Saturday. There are reports that Holy Cross also may enter.

In other major pre-convention action Sunday:

1. The Football Coaches Rules Committee recmomended a return to free and unlimited substitution and chairman Jack Curtice of Santa Barbara, Calif., said it has a "reasonably decent chance" of passing. The recommendation goes before the NCAA Football Rules Committee in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Friday.

2. The Extra Events Committee received petitions of three December, 1966 bowl games: the Santa Claus Bowl at Atlanta, Ga.; an unnamed bowl in Phoenix, Ariz., and the Aluminum Bowl in Little Rock, Ark.

3. The Baseball Coaches Association named Jack Butterfield of Maine Major College Coach of the Year and A. B. (Bud) Metheny of Old Dominion College Small College Coach of the Year.

CBS Looking to Place Bowl in Atlanta Stadium

ATLANTA (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System has initiated negotiations with the Atlanta Stadium Authority to place a major football bowl game in the city's new multi-million-dollar stadium, says an authority spokesman.

CBS approached the Extra Events Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Sunday, forwarding a petition asking for permission to play the Santa Claus Bowl in Atlanta on Dec. 25.

The NCAA, holding its annual convention in Chicago, said action on the petition would be taken in 1965 and, if approved, submitted to the 1966 convention. However, the game could not be played before December, 1966.

"We have discussed the situation with CBS," said Arthur Montgomery, chairman of the Stadium Authority, Sunday night. "They have taken the initiative in the proposal after we announced that we wanted a major bowl game here.

"However, no definite action has been finalized with their bid for a bowl game here," Montgomery emphasized. "We are still receptive to all offers about backing the game.

"We would like to have a Southeastern Conference team or a top Southeastern independent as a first host," he said. "National television, which of course is CBS' aim, would give us a great start in the bowl field."

Montgomery said CBS suggested the name Santa Claus Bowl. "We would always try to play the game on Dec. 25," he said.

The Atlanta Stadium, to seat 57,000 for football and 52,000 for baseball, is slated to be ready for occupancy April 14. The Milwaukee Braves baseball team has announced intentions to move here in 1966.

Mills Overcomes Stellar Field to Win Mile Race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Now that Billy Mills is an acknowledged winner, it seems to make little difference what distance he travels to finish first.

The Marine lieutenant from Kansas came from the back of the pack and relative obscurity in Tokyo last October to become the first American to win the Olympic 10,000-meter race.

Saturday night against a stellar field, Mills went from wire to wire and captured the mile in 4:08.1 at the San Francisco Invitational indoor track meet at the Cow Palace.

Mills had to kick to stay in front of Great Britain's Alan Simpson. Third and fourth were sub-four minute milers Cary Weisiger of North Carolina and Archie San Romani of Oregon. Mills' first indoor mile was almost as fast as his outdoor best of 4:05.5.

His upset victory was typical of the performances at the invitational.

Ralph Boston, owner of the best broad jump of all time, was beaten by Gayle Hopkins, an Arizonian who owns the third best broad jump mark in history. Hopkins jumped 25-6 and Boston 25-4¼.

Boston finished second to Blaine Lindgren of the Utah Track Club in the 60-yard hurdles. Lindgren was timed in 7.2, Boston in 7.3. Boston also was beaten in the triple jump, with Darrell Horn going 50-10 to Boston's 48-2¾.

Only double winner was Pasadena's Bill Tommey. He won the 440 in 50.2 ahead of Tokyo's 400-meter champ, Mike Larrabee of Los Angeles and Mike Yerman, a 1600-meter relay gold medalist in 1960. Toomey also won the unusual 160-yard dash in 16.8. The runners raced against the stopwatch. Paul Drayton, the 200-meter silver medalist at Tokyo, and Larrabee finished in a tie for second at 17.0 although the race supposedly was just the right distance for the former Villanova sprinter.

Drayton won the 60-yard dash in 6.2.

AFL Calls Off Game for Discrimination

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Football League called off its All-Star game — scheduled this Saturday — when Negro players complained of discrimination and walked out Sunday.

The league also canceled its owners' meeting, slated to begin here Wednesday.

AFL Commissioner Joe Foss said in Chicago he would have a statement today about the future of the All-Star game — when, where and if it would be played in another city.

Even before the game was officially canceled, the 21 Negroes here for the All-Star game packed their bags and left.

"We're not wanted here so we are leaving," said halfback Clem Daniels of the Oakland Raiders.

"We all encountered similar problems Saturday night. We were refused cab service and admittance to French Quarter clubs," Daniel continued.

"We came here to relax and enjoy ourselves and put on a great game You can't do those things under the existing circumstances."

Foss, in a statement issued here, said "Since all players are members of the official league family, the league must abide by their (the Negro players') decision not to play."

David Dixon, head of the group sponsoring the All-Star game, worked frantically to get the Negroes to change their mind. He arranged for the players to have access to all of the better class establishments — restaurants and night clubs — in the French Quarter.

The players also charged they were refused service by taxicabs. Some said they even had trouble getting to their hotels from the airport because cabs refused to take them.

Before the Negroes made their final decision to pull out, Dixon told a newsman:

"If they walk out, this blows pro football for New Orleans."

Dixon has been striving for four years to gain a franchise for New Orleans — either in the AFL or the rival National Football League.

Only the West squad turned up for the first practice session Sunday.

At first, there was a report that all the uniforms hadn't arrived and the practice had been delayed for a day.

But Sid Gillman, coach of the San Diego Chargers and head of the West All-Stars, said it wasn't true.

"We're having trouble," Gillman said. "The Negro players have threatened to quit. They had some trouble with the cab drivers and in the French Quarter."

There were 20 Negroes on the All-Star squad.

The 21st Negro, Dick Westmoreland, a defensive halfback for the San Diego Chargers, was here as an alternate member of the West team. He would have played only if one of the regular squad members was hurt before the game. Another Negro, Matt Snell of the New York Jets, had been scheduled to come here as an alternate but had to go into the Army.

"Several people shouted insults at us in the French Quarter," Westmoreland said. "Doors were shut in our faces when we tried to enter several establishments."

He said he was accompanied by teammates Ernie Ladd and Earl Faison from the Chargers.

'Here I was with big men . . . Ladd's 320 pounds and little guys were hurling insults, but we didn't want any trouble," Westmoreland continued.

"I was worried because Ladd and Faison have tempers. I suggested we return to the hotel and they agreed. But we couldn't get a cab to stop for us. Finally, we got directions and walked back to our hotel."

Westmoreland and the other West team players were staying at the Roosevelt Hotel, about six blocks from the heart of the French Quarter.

Ernie Warlick, end for the Buffalo Bills, acted as spokesman for the Negro players.

He said they met Sunday to compare notes on their treatment in New Orleans and then voted the walkout.

"The vote wasn't unanimouse," he said. "Some of the boys wanted to stay and play. But the majority ruled. We felt we couldn't perform 100 per cent under the circumstances."

He said Dixon and his group "made a big point of the fact that arrangements had been made for us to be accepted at the better restaurants and nightspots and by one of the major cab companies.

"If they had told us this before, we'd have looked specifically for those cabs and sought our entertainment in those places. But they led us to believe everything was okay. And it wasn't."

On New Year's Day, the Sugar Bowl had its first completely integrated football game. Syracuse, which lost to Louisiana State 13-10, had eight Negroes on its team. They said they did not run into any discrimination here.

Mayor Victor Schiro couldn't be reached for comment. His telephone answering service said he was ill.

Proceeds from the All-Star game, first scheduled for a non-league city, were to be distributed to the New Orleans Police Foundation, the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Police Association and the Police Benevolent Association.

The other Negroes on the All-Star teams included Cookie Gilchrist, Elbert Dubenion and George Byrd of Buffalo; Larry Garron and Houston Antwine of Boston; Sherman Plunkett and Winston Hill of New York; Sid Blanks of Houston; Art Powell of Oakland; Abner Haynes, Mack Lee Hill, Julius Buchanan, Bob Bell and Dave Grayson of Kansas City; Frank Buncom of San Diego and Willie Brown of Denver.

Pirates Fall to Mullen

PIRATE GOAL—John Van Horn (40) of St. Mary's releases a shot on a drive-in during the Pirates' crucial battle with Denver Mullen at the St. Mary's Gymnasium Sunday. Attempting a block is Mullen's Duane Wells (43) while Tom Socha (24) of St. Mary's, Steve Johns (13) of Mullen, and Sam Zavatti of St. Mary's wait to see if there will be a rebound. Fine St. Mary's Effort Thwarted by Mustangs

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

The 1965 Denver Parochial League basketball race has actually just gotten underway—but Mullen's Mustangs are threatening to make it one of the shortest in years!

The slick Denver quintet, which is being advertised as one of the best to come out of the league in some time, took a giant stride toward the crown Sunday afternoon at the expense of the most ambitious of its challengers. St. Mary's put together an outstanding effort before surrendering a 66-62 decision but the verdict came on the Pirates' home floor and there can be little argument as to its significance.

The defeat gave Dan Wright's club a split in its crucial two-game home stand over the weekend. St. Mary's added importance to Sunday's clash by nailing the usual strongarm club of the DPL, Denver Regis, in a Friday night battle — but the Bucs also needed a home-floor victory over Mullen to take a commanding position in the race.

For a good part of Sunday's hectic struggle, it appeared as though victory was exactly what the local club was going to get. The well-coached Pirates, running their patterns to precision, nearly unsaddled the Mustangs in the first few minutes of action and held the lead throughout the majority of the first half.

Then, after Mullen had appeared to be moving away in the third period, a Pirate rally closed the gap early in the final stanza and when the Mustangs' backboard policeman, Terry Pierzina, was banished from the floor with five fouls it appeared as though a spectacular triumph was in St. Mary's grasp.

It was at that point that Mullen unveiled the final ingredient of a champion. With their star reduced to spectator status, the Mustangs seemed to pick up steam instead of lose it. Four straight jump shots from the side by Duane Wells sprang the visitors back into a seven point lead and the desperate Pirates simply could not overcome that bulge in the time remaining.

This is not to suggest that Pierzina had not made his presence felt, however. Had it not been for the 6-5, 225 pound giant the Mustangs would have seen nothing but the Pirates' heels all afternoon. In the early part of the contest, it was Pierzina who triggered the comeback that prevented the Bucs from getting too far away. And until he fouled out with 7:33 remaining in the final quarter the Mustang strongman was planted in front of the goal like a giant oak. He hauled in 20 rebounds and, showing a deft touch on follow shots, deposited 24 points.

St. Mary's top scorer was senior Tom McCarthy, but despite his 17 points it was not one of the Pirate star's better floor games. He was also the victim of a hustling defensive effort by the Mustangs' fine floor general, Steve Johns. Sam Zavatti, who turned in an outstanding game, added 16 points for St. Mary's and Tom Socha added nine plus a gallant struggle in the backboard wars with the overpowering Pierzina.

The Pirates had the jammed gymnasium jumping at the start. With Jerry Knauf hitting a goal and Sam Zavatti two, the Bucs leaped to a 6-0 advantage and quickly extended it to 9-2 as their cool pass work riddled the Mullen press. Then with the score 11-5, Jim Wedow contributed five straight points, incuding a three-point play, and the gap was closed. A tip by Pierzina with four seconds left in the period moved Mullen into its first tie at 13-13.

The Pirates went back on top immediately, however, as Socha and Knauf hit in the first minute of the second quarter and they were still ahead by 23-21 with 2:07 left in the half. Wayne Wells brought the Mustangs even seconds later, though, and Pierzina fired in five straight points as Mullen galloped to a 30-25 halftime advantage.

The Mustangs kept that lead for half of the third quarter until a sudden flurry by the Pirates pulled them even at 36-36. Late in the period they were on top at 40-39 for a brief stretch but Mullen canned six straight points in the closing seconds to carry a 45-40 advantage into the final eight minutes.

A drive by McCarthy off the last quarter tip sliced it to 45-42 and 20 seconds later Socha followed a shot and was fouled by Pierzina. With the Mustang star seated, Socha added the free toss to tie the count at 45-45. Then, just when prospects seemed the brightest, Duane Wells, who had not scored a point, rammed in his four consecutive goals and the Bucs hopes dropped with them.

Palmer, Wasson Rematch In City Hockey League

Palmer and Wasson rematch tonight in a battle for second League.

The Thunderbirds beat Palmer, 4-3, on Mike Metcalf's third period goal to break the Terrors' 20-game win streak earlier this season. The teams currently are tied for second in the league with 3-2 records. Wasson has lost twice to undefeated Cheyenne Mountain. Palmer's second loss came by the hands of the Indians.

Palmer has been winning big this year, averaging 5.2 goals a game to 2.4 for its opponents. Wasson has generally played tighter games, averaging 3.0 goals a game to 2.6 for its opponents.

The top scorer on the ice will be Palmer wing Greg Good. The former center was moved up in a revamping job. He has scored six goals and four assists thus far.

Wasson's leading scorer is wing Bruce Manhanke with five goals and two assists. Hugh Wallnutt of the T-Birds is right behind at five goals and one assist.

Injuries to Greg Nelson and John Laxson could slow the Terrors considerably. Nelson suffered a broken nose, and playing with a facemask, has been shifted from defense to wing, where he performed well against Widefield last week.

The reason for the shift was a hip injury to wing John Laxson. Laxson, who scored four goals against Widefield in their first meeting, started his last game against Cheyenne and then was forced to sit out the rest of the schedule with the injury. Coach Tommy Brennan says it is unlikely the senior skater will be able to play again this year.

Don Heyliger of Cheyenne surged ahead in the individual scoring race against Wasson last week and now has a total of 15 points. Heyliger leads the league in assists with nine. In second place is Cheyenne center Jeff Thatcher with 13 points and a runner-up eight assists.

Doug Heyliger, the other Cheyenne wing, is tied for third with 12 points and leads the league with seven goals. Fountain Valley's Newell Weed is tied for third with Heyliger with four goals and eight assists.

Sandy Dee of Cheyenne leads the full-time goalies with 53 saves and six goals through five games. Wasson's John Wendt has 14 saves and one goal in 1 2-3 games. The other T-Bird tender, Rick Spencer, has 46 saves and 12 goals in 3 1-3 games. Palmer's Don Astley has 71 saves and 11 goals in four starts.

In games the rest of the week, Cheyenne meets Widefield on Wednesday and Wasson returns Thursday to face Fountain Valley.

Services for CSU's Davis Scheduled for Tuesday

FORT COLLINS (AP) — Funeral services for Robert L. "Bob" Davis, director of athletics at Colorado State University, will be held Tuesday morning in Fort Collins.

The death of the popular and widely known Davis Sunday left this northern Colorado college town with a sharp sense of loss.

"It was my privilege to know Bob intimately as a personal friend," said Colorado State president Dr. William E. Morgan. "I feel keenly the loss of a great man of sturdy character."

Dr. Morgan said that no steps had been taken toward the selection of Davis' replacement.

As a coach, Davis was noted for the array of talent he had sent to the professional football leagues, including Thurman McGraw, Jim David, Jack Christiansen, Dale Dodrill, Gary Glick, and Don Burroughs.

In nine seasons, his Colorado State teams won 54 games, and he was twice named Skyline Conference "Coach of the Year."

His death Sunday followed a long illness. Cremation will follow the 10 o'clock services at St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Nine Schools To Defy NCAA

BOSTON (AP) — Nine NCAA member colleges of the 39 invited still intend to participate in the AAU-sponsored Boston K. of C. Games Saturday at Boston Garden.

Ding Dussault, meet director and Tufts coach, will not be able to bring his own squad members to the competition because of the struggle between the two athletic bodies for control of American amateur track and field.

The nine Dussault says are going to defy NCAA warnings include four Ivy League members Yale, pioneer in the ranks-breaking; Harvard, Columbia and Penn — plus Manhattan, New York University, MIT, Brandeis and Bowdoin.

NCAA Still Battling AAU, Pro Football War Easing

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association moved into its 59th convention today with some minor skirmishing completed and the big guns primed in the long-standing war with the Amateur Athletic Union.

Some problems with the professional football leagues, meanwhile, appeared headed for amiable, co-operative solution.

Jim Corbett, representing the 600-member NCAA, met with Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League Sunday night, but declined immediate comment until after meeting with his committee today.

Corbett also met with National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle Friday night on the same problem — the premature signing of college players by the professional leagues — and termed the meeting "most co-operative, in a progressive spirit."

The NCAA's Extra Events Committee, meanwhile, recommended to the council — the group's policy-making organization — that legislation be enacted requiring the same television restrictions for bowl games as for regular season games.

The recommendation was aimed, chairman Bud Jack of Utah said, at restricting professional representatives from the field. Jack said the action came as a result of the video broadcasting of several college players signing pro contracts during or immediately after participating in bowl games.

"This was not in good taste and was detrimental to the college game," Jack said. "We don't think it should be allowed."

The legislation, however, probably will not be enacted until the 1966 convention.

The first general session of the convention was scheduled today, with the long-standing, bitter and extremely complex power struggle with AAU the prime topic.

Simply, the fight is this: The AAU holds the franchise to represent this country in international competition. The NCAA, protesting that college athletes make up a bulk of the competitors in such competition — including the Olympics — wants a larger voice in the selection and administraton of the athletes. The AAU objects.

A cease-fire, ending with the Tokyo Olympics, was forged by the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and this is the first NCAA conclave since the truce ended.

One of the prime weapons is a proposed by-law, which comes up for action Wednesday. Under the by-law any member institution which allows its athletes to compete in indoor track competition not sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Federation would be subject to punishment, such as being barred from championship competition or from post-season bowl games.

This, of course, bars collegians from the major indoor track meets.

At present, the NCAA has a policy restricting such competition, but has no punishment attached.

This policy has been defied by several Eastern schools, particularly Yale. Yale, along with five other Ivy League members and Manhattan, have teams entered in the first major Eastern meet in Boston Saturday. There are reports that Holy Cross also may enter.

In other major pre-convention action Sunday:

1. The Football Coaches Rules Committee recmomended a return to free and unlimited substitution and chairman Jack Curtice of Santa Barbara, Calif., said it has a "reasonably decent chance" of passing. The recommendation goes before the NCAA Football Rules Committee in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Friday.

2. The Extra Events Committee received petitions of three December, 1966 bowl games: the Santa Claus Bowl at Atlanta, Ga.; an unnamed bowl in Phoenix, Ariz., and the Aluminum Bowl in Little Rock, Ark.

3. The Baseball Coaches Association named Jack Butterfield of Maine Major College Coach of the Year and A. B. (Bud) Metheny of Old Dominion College Small College Coach of the Year.

CBS Looking to Place Bowl in Atlanta Stadium

ATLANTA (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System has initiated negotiations with the Atlanta Stadium Authority to place a major football bowl game in the city's new multi-million-dollar stadium, says an authority spokesman.

CBS approached the Extra Events Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Sunday, forwarding a petition asking for permission to play the Santa Claus Bowl in Atlanta on Dec. 25.

The NCAA, holding its annual convention in Chicago, said action on the petition would be taken in 1965 and, if approved, submitted to the 1966 convention. However, the game could not be played before December, 1966.

"We have discussed the situation with CBS," said Arthur Montgomery, chairman of the Stadium Authority, Sunday night. "They have taken the initiative in the proposal after we announced that we wanted a major bowl game here.

"However, no definite action has been finalized with their bid for a bowl game here," Montgomery emphasized. "We are still receptive to all offers about backing the game.

"We would like to have a Southeastern Conference team or a top Southeastern independent as a first host," he said. "National television, which of course is CBS' aim, would give us a great start in the bowl field."

Montgomery said CBS suggested the name Santa Claus Bowl. "We would always try to play the game on Dec. 25," he said.

The Atlanta Stadium, to seat 57,000 for football and 52,000 for baseball, is slated to be ready for occupancy April 14. The Milwaukee Braves baseball team has announced intentions to move here in 1966.

Mills Overcomes Stellar Field to Win Mile Race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Now that Billy Mills is an acknowledged winner, it seems to make little difference what distance he travels to finish first.

The Marine lieutenant from Kansas came from the back of the pack and relative obscurity in Tokyo last October to become the first American to win the Olympic 10,000-meter race.

Saturday night against a stellar field, Mills went from wire to wire and captured the mile in 4:08.1 at the San Francisco Invitational indoor track meet at the Cow Palace.

Mills had to kick to stay in front of Great Britain's Alan Simpson. Third and fourth were sub-four minute milers Cary Weisiger of North Carolina and Archie San Romani of Oregon. Mills' first indoor mile was almost as fast as his outdoor best of 4:05.5.

His upset victory was typical of the performances at the invitational.

Ralph Boston, owner of the best broad jump of all time, was beaten by Gayle Hopkins, an Arizonian who owns the third best broad jump mark in history. Hopkins jumped 25-6 and Boston 25-4¼.

Boston finished second to Blaine Lindgren of the Utah Track Club in the 60-yard hurdles. Lindgren was timed in 7.2, Boston in 7.3. Boston also was beaten in the triple jump, with Darrell Horn going 50-10 to Boston's 48-2¼.

Only double winner was Pasadena's Bill Tommey. He won the 440 in 50.2 ahead of Tokyo's 400-meter champ, Mike Larrabee of Los Angeles and Mike Yerman, a 1600-meter relay gold medalist in 1960. Toomey also won the unusual 160-yard dash in 16.8. The runners raced against the stopwatch. Paul Drayton, the 200-meter silver medalist at Tokyo, and Larrabee finished in a tie for second at 17.0 although the race supposedly was just the right distance for the former Villanova sprinter.

Drayton won the 60-yard dash in 6.2.

AFL Calls Off Game for Discrimination

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Football League called off its All-Star game — scheduled this Saturday — when Negro players complained of discrimination and walked out Sunday.

The league also canceled its owners' meeting, slated to begin here Wednesday.

AFL Commissioner Joe Foss said in Chicago he would have a statement today about the future of the All-Star game — when, where and if it would be played in another city.

Even before the game was officially canceled, the 21 Negroes here for the All-Star game packed their bags and left.

"We're not wanted here so we are leaving," said halfback Clem Daniels of the Oakland Raiders.

"We all encountered similar problems Saturday night. We were refused cab service and admittance to French Quarter clubs," Daniel continued.

"We came here to relax and enjoy ourselves and put on a great game You can't do those things under the existing circumstances."

Foss, in a statement issued here, said "Since all players are members of the official league family, the league must abide by their (the Negro players') decision not to play."

David Dixon, head of the group sponsoring the All-Star game, worked frantically to get the Negroes to change their mind. He arranged for the players to have access to all of the better class establishments — restaurants and night clubs — in the French Quarter.

The players also charged they were refused service by taxicabs. Some said they even had trouble getting to their hotels from the airport because cabs refused to take them.

Before the Negroes made their final decision to pull out, Dixon told a newsman:

"If they walk out, this blows pro football for New Orleans."

Dixon has been striving for four years to gain a franchise for New Orleans — either in the AFL or the rival National Football League.

Only the West squad turned up for the first practice session Sunday.

At first, there was a report that all the uniforms hadn't arrived and the practice had been delayed for a day.

But Sid Gillman, coach of the San Diego Chargers and head of the West All-Stars, said it wasn't true.

"We're having trouble," Gillman said. "The Negro players have threatened to quit. They had some trouble with the cab drivers and in the French Quarter."

There were 20 Negroes on the All-Star squad.

The 21st Negro, Dick Westmoreland, a defensive halfback for the San Diego Chargers, was here as an alternate member of the West team. He would have played only if one of the regular squad members was hurt before the game. Another Negro, Matt Snell of the New York Jets, had been scheduled to come here as an alternate but had to go into the Army.

"Several people shouted insults at us in the French Quarter," Westmoreland said. "Doors were shut in our faces when we tried to enter several establishments."

He said he was accompanied by teammates Ernie Ladd and Earl Faison from the Chargers.

'Here I was with big men . . . Ladd's 320 pounds and little guys were hurling insults, but we didn't want any trouble," Westmoreland continued.

"I was worried because Ladd and Faison have tempers. I suggested we return to the hotel and they agreed. But we couldn't get a cab to stop for us. Finally, we got directions and walked back to our hotel."

Westmoreland and the other West team players were staying at the Roosevelt Hotel, about six blocks from the heart of the French Quarter.

Ernie Warlick, end for the Buffalo Bills, acted as spokesman for the Negro players.

He said they met Sunday to compare notes on their treatment in New Orleans and then voted the walkout.

"The vote wasn't unanimouse," he said. "Some of the boys wanted to stay and play. But the majority ruled. We felt we couldn't perform 100 per cent under the circumstances."

He said Dixon and his group "made a big point of the fact that arrangements had been made for us to be accepted at the better restaurants and nightspots and by one of the major cab companies.

"If they had told us this before, we'd have looked specifically for those cabs and sought our entertainment in those places. But they led us to believe everything was okay. And it wasn't."

On New Year's Day, the Sugar Bowl had its first completely integrated football game. Syracuse, which lost to Louisiana State 13-10, had eight Negroes on its team. They said they did not run into any discrimination here.

Mayor Victor Schiro couldn't be reached for comment. His telephone answering service said he was ill.

Proceeds from the All-Star game, first scheduled for a non-league city, were to be distributed to the New Orleans Police Foundation, the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Police Association and the Police Benevolent Association.

The other Negroes on the All-Star teams included Cookie Gilchrist, Elbert Dubenion and George Byrd of Buffalo; Larry Garron and Houston Antwine of Boston; Sherman Plunkett and Winston Hill of New York; Sid Blanks of Houston; Art Powell of Oakland; Abner Haynes, Mack Lee Hill, Julius Buchanan, Bob Bell and Dave Grayson of Kansas City; Frank Buncom of San Diego and Willie Brown of Denver.

Bret Hanover, harness horse of the year, won all 24 pacing events in 1964. The non of Adios —Brenna Hanover cost $50,000 at the Harrisburg, Pa., yearling sale in 1963. The 2-year-old pacer earned $173,298.

Pirates Fall to Mullen

PIRATE GOAL—John Van Horn (40) of St. Mary's releases a shot on a drive-in during the Pirates' crucial battle with Denver Mullen at the St. Mary's Gymnasium Sunday. Attempting a block is Mullen's Duane Wells (43) while Tom Socha (24) of St. Mary's, Steve Johns (13) of Mullen, and Sam Zavatti of St. Mary's wait to see if there will be a rebound. Fine St. Mary's Effort Thwarted by Mustangs

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

The 1965 Denver Parochial League basketball race has actually just gotten underway—but Mullen's Mustangs are threatening to make it one of the shortest in years!

The slick Denver quintet, which is being advertised as one of the best to come out of the league in some time, took a giant stride toward the crown Sunday afternoon at the expense of the most ambitious of its challengers. St. Mary's put together an outstanding effort before surrendering a 66-62 decision but the verdict came on the Pirates' home floor and there can be little argument as to its significance.

The defeat gave Dan Wright's club a split in its crucial two-game home stand over the weekend. St. Mary's added importance to Sunday's clash by nailing the usual strongarm club of the DPL, Denver Regis, in a Friday night battle — but the Bucs also needed a home-floor victory over Mullen to take a commanding position in the race.

For a good part of Sunday's hectic struggle, it appeared as though victory was exactly what the local club was going to get. The well-coached Pirates, running their patterns to precision, nearly unsaddled the Mustangs in the first few minutes of action and held the lead throughout the majority of the first half.

Then, after Mullen had appeared to be moving away in the third period, a Pirate rally closed the gap early in the final stanza and when the Mustangs' backboard policeman, Terry Pierzina, was banished from the floor with five fouls it appeared as though a spectacular triumph was in St. Mary's grasp.

It was at that point that Mullen unveiled the final ingredient of a champion. With their star reduced to spectator status, the Mustangs seemed to pick up steam instead of lose it. Four straight jump shots from the side by Duane Wells sprang the visitors back into a seven point lead and the desperate Pirates simply could not overcome that bulge in the time remaining.

This is not to suggest that Pierzina had not made his presence felt, however. Had it not been for the 6-5, 225 pound giant the Mustangs would have seen nothing but the Pirates' heels all afternoon. In the early part of the contest, it was Pierzina who triggered the comeback that prevented the Bucs from getting too far away. And until he fouled out with 7:33 remaining in the final quarter the Mustang strongman was planted in front of the goal like a giant oak. He hauled in 20 rebounds and, showing a deft touch on follow shots, deposited 24 points.

St. Mary's top scorer was senior Tom McCarthy, but despite his 17 points it was not one of the Pirate star's better floor games. He was also the victim of a hustling defensive effort by the Mustangs' fine floor general, Steve Johns. Sam Zavatti, who turned in an outstanding game, added 16 points for St. Mary's and Tom Socha added nine plus a gallant struggle in the backboard wars with the overpowering Pierzina.

The Pirates had the jammed gymnasium jumping at the start. With Jerry Knauf hitting a goal and Sam Zavatti two, the Bucs leaped to a 6-0 advantage and quickly extended it to 9-2 as their cool pass work riddled the Mullen press. Then with the score 11-5, Jim Wedow contributed five straight points, incuding a three - point play, and the gap was closed. A tip by Pierzina with four seconds left in the period moved Mullen into its first tie at 13-13.

The Pirates went back on top immediately, however, as Socha and Knauf hit in the first minute of the second quarter and they were still ahead by 23-21 with 2:07 left in the half. Wayne Wells brought the Mustangs even seconds later, though, and Pierzina fired in five straight points as Mullen galloped to a 30-25 halftime advantage.

The Mustangs kept that lead for half of the third quarter until a sudden flurry by the Pirates pulled them even at 36-36. Late in the period they were on top at 40-39 for a brief stretch but Mullen canned six straight points in the closing seconds to carry a 45-40 advantage into the final eight minutes.

With the Mustang star seated, Socha added the free toss to tie the count at 45-45. Then, just when prospects seemed the brightest, Duane Wells, who had not scored a point, rammed in his four consecutive goals and the Bucs hopes dropped with them.

Palmer, Wasson Rematch In City Hockey League

Palmer and Wasson rematch tonight in a battle for second League.

The Thunderbirds beat Palmer, 4-3, on Mike Metcalf's third period goal to break the Terrors' 20-game win streak earlier this season. The teams currently are tied for second in the league with 3-2 records. Wasson has lost twice to undefeated Cheyenne Mountain. Palmer's second loss came by the hands of the Indians.

Palmer has been winning big this year, averaging 5.2 goals a game to 2.4 for its opponents. Wasson has generally played tighter games, averaging 3.0 goals a game to 2.6 for its opponents.

The top scorer on the ice will be Palmer wing Greg Good. The former center was moved up in a revamping job. He has scored six goals and four assists thus far.

Wasson's leading scorer is wing Bruce Manhanke with five goals and two assists. Hugh Wallnutt of the T-Birds is right behind at five goals and one assist.

Injuries to Greg Nelson and John Laxson could slow the Terrors considerably. Nelson suffered a broken nose, and playing with a facemask, has been shifted from defense to wing, where he performed well against Widefield last week.

The reason for the shift was a hip injury to wing John Laxson. Laxson, who scored four goals against Widefield in their first meeting, started his last game against Cheyenne and then was forced to sit out the rest of the schedule with the injury. Coach Tommy Brennan says it is unlikely the senior skater will be able to play again this year.

Don Heyliger of Cheyenne surged ahead in the individual scoring race against Wasson last week and now has a total of 15 points. Heyliger leads the league in assists with nine. In second place is Cheyenne center Jeff Thatcher with 13 points and a runner-up eight assists.

Doug Heyliger, the other Cheyenne wing, is tied for third with 12 points and leads the league with seven goals. Fountain Valley's Newell Weed is tied for third with Heyliger with four goals and eight assists.

Sandy Dee of Cheyenne leads the full-time goalies with 53 saves and six goals through five games. Wasson's John Wendt has 14 saves and one goal in 1 2-3 games. The other T-Bird tender, Rick Spencer, has 46 saves and 12 goals in 3 1-3 games. Palmer's Don Astley has 71 saves and 11 goals in four starts.

In games the rest of the week, Cheyenne meets Widefield on Wednesday and Wasson returns Thursday to face Fountain Valley.

Services for CSU's Davis Scheduled for Tuesday

FORT COLLINS (AP) — Funeral services for Robert L. "Bob" Davis, director of athletics at Colorado State University, will be held Tuesday morning in Fort Collins.

The death of the popular and widely known Davis Sunday left this northern Colorado college town with a sharp sense of loss.

"It was my privilege to know Bob intimately as a personal friend," said Colorado State president Dr. William E. Morgan. "I feel keenly the loss of a great man of sturdy character."

Dr. Morgan said that no steps had been taken toward the selection of Davis' replacement.

As a coach, Davis was noted for the array of talent he had sent to the professional football leagues, including Thurman McGraw, Jim David, Jack Christiansen, Dale Dodrill, Gary Glick, and Don Burroughs.

In nine seasons, his Colorado State teams won 54 games, and he was twice named Skyline Conference "Coach of the Year."

His death Sunday followed a long illness. Cremation will follow the 10 o'clock services at St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Nine Schools To Defy NCAA

BOSTON (AP) — Nine NCAA member colleges of the 39 invited still intend to participate in the AAU-sponsored Boston K. of C. Games Saturday at Boston Garden.

Ding Dussault, meet director and Tufts coach, will not be able to bring his own squad members to the competition because of the struggle between the two athletic bodies for control of American amateur track and field.

The nine Dussault says are going to defy NCAA warnings include four Ivy League members Yale, pioneer in the ranks-breaking; Harvard, Columbia and Penn — plus Manhattan, New York University, MIT, Brandeis and Bowdoin.

Venturi's Comeback Tops 1964

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Three years is a long time to be kicking dust. I don't believe any athlete has ever been as low as I was."

So reflected golfer Ken Venturi today as he commented on the latest of many honors bestowed upon him in recent weeks — he was named in the annual Associated Press poll as the Outstanding Comeback in Sports in 1964.

Venturi, 34, a serious-minded, dedicated young man, suntanned and handsome, captured the U.S. Open Championship at Washington, D.C.

At younger age the San Francisco lad was a brilliant amateur, turned pro as one of the game's brightest prospects, and then rather abruptly went into a slump.

The open victory obviously intrigued the fancy of the AP voters. They voted Venturi 91 first place votes.

In order behind were baseball's St. Louis Cardinals, 52; Lenny Moore of Baltimore's football Colts, 39, and in order down the line, Phils' pitcher Jim Bunning, the Colts' football team, Angels outfielder Jimmy Piersall, the Notre Dame football team, Cubs' pitcher Larry Jackson, the Arkansas football team, Manager Johnny Keane of baseball and the Colts' Johnny Unitas.

"This is certainly an honor for me. Each of the others deserved the award. I am most appreciative, most sincerely," said Ken as he sat in the locker room of the Rancho Golf Club after a round in the Los Angeles Open — a disappointing round it had been.

Ken related some of his thoughts during those dark hours and, yes, years when he couldn't win.

He compared his fate to pitcher Roger Craig, the former Dodger, New York Met and Cardinal pitcher, now with the Reds.

"Roger Craig knew he was a good pitcher but he had a heck of a time proving it. I was like Craig, I couldn't win for losing. I knew I wasn't that bad, just as Craig knew."

Venturi, who has become deeply philosophical since his new found fame, said he had received letters from all over the country.

"Most of them were from people who had no connection at all with golf and were complete strangers to me. They wrote my success had given them encouragement in whatever they were doing. This has meant a lot to me."

Venturi admitted that since the Open triumph he has been in great demand for award functions, appearances and the like. In December alone he traveled over 40,000 miles in the United States and a trip to England.

"I'm not complaining, far from it, after all the months of picking garbage," he said with a grin.

But these pleasant distractions have hampered his concentration and in a sense, for the time being dulled the sharpness of his mind and his game.

No, said Ken, he is not the least bit concerned. He feels he will regain all the skill he showed in the U.S. Open.

Venturi also discounted any alarm over a circulatory ailment of the little finger of his right hand. He said it was the same ailment that plagued Dodger pitching star Sandy Kouffax. In fact, Dr. Robert Wood, who treated Sandy, is handling his case.

Ken noted that since he is the National Open champion, the finger trouble is newsworthy. Then, without a trace of bitterness, he said:

"A year ago no one would have given a darn."

The league is named in honor of Dr. James Naismith who founded the game at Springfield College in 1890.

Westerners' Offense, Defense Shine As NFL's East All-Stars Suffer Injuries

By PATRICK MCNULTY
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League's top players scattered today after a rousing 34-14 victory for the West over the East in the annual Pro Bowl.

The Western All-Stars, spearheaded by Fran Tarkenton, Johnny Unitas, Terry Barr and Gino Marchetti, turned the game into a rout before 60,698 fans in sunny Memorial Coliseum. They scored in every quarter while holding fast against the Eastern offense's big guns — Frank Ryan, Sonny Jurgensen, Jim Brown and Paul Warfield.

Tarkenton, the little scrambler from the Minnesota Vikings, and Barr, Detroit Lions' fleet flanker, were voted the game's outstanding players.

Barr set up two of the West's touchdowns with acrobatic catches of Tarkenton passes.

Marchetti, appearing in his 10th Pro Bowl — a record he shares with retired Leo Nomellini — says he's definitely quitting the game. He came back last season on the pleas of Baltimore Colt Coach Don Shula, but Shula said he won't ask any more.

"How long can you keep asking a guy to play? He's given everything he has," Shula said.

The East attack was hard hit by quarterback injuries. Ryan, blitzed by Merlin Olsen and Marchetti, left the action with a shoulder separation early in the third quarter. Jurgensen, with a sore throwing shoulder, took over but couldn't generate any offensive fire except for a scoring toss to Jim Brown late in the game.

East Coach Blanton Collier said he had planned to use Jurgensen only sparingly, but changed strategy when Ryan was hurt.

"My shoulder really bothered me in there," Jurgensen said. "I couldn't throw long at all."

The victory was revenge — but not sweet enough — for West Coach Shula, whose Baltimore Colts were humiliated 27-0 by the Collier-coached Cleveland Browns in the AFL title game.

"It's a satisfying victory but I'd trade it for a National Football League title," Shula said.

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas takes a seven-game winning streak to Boulder tonight to face improving Colorado, the club that upset Kansas State Saturday and leaving Kansas and Oklahoma State the only unbeaten teams in the Big Eight basketball race.

The Colorado court carries no particular hex for the Jayhawks, although they've had trouble winning there. Kansas stunned the Buffaloes 73-55 at Boulder last season, then beat them in overtime at Lawrence, although finishing one game behind them in the title race.

Ted Owens, Kansas' new coach, won his first meeting with Coach Sox Walseth of Colorado 53-51 in the championship Tournament. This gives Kansas a four-game winning streak in the series dating back to Colorado's late-1963 victory at Boulder.

Kansas has won only six of 17 games at Boulder since Colorado joined the conference, while beating the Buffs 12 of 17 in Lawrence and eight out of nine in the tournament.

Colorado used deadly foul shooting down the stretch to edge Kansas State 80-77. Chuck Gardner, Colorado's 6-foot-7 pivot, scored 21 points and Pat Frink had 25.

Kansas ran its record to 10-3, best in the Big Eight, and 2-0 in league play, by beating Missouri 73-66 before 12,000 at Lawrence with 6-foot-11 Walt Wesley scoring 33 points. Oklahoma State kept pace by smashing Nebraska 93-54 for an OSU school scoring record in the first of nine afternoon television games. The series will include all league teams.

Iowa State nicked Oklahoma 73-72 at Norman.

Iowa State plays at Oklahoma State and Nebraska at Oklahoma in other games tonight.

Goose Tatum Breaks Leg During Game

OUSTON (AP) — Goose Tatum was recovering from a broken leg today, his first major injury in 25 years of professional basketball.

He was injured Saturday night in the closing minutes of a game with the New York Olympians. He had scored 50 points and led the Road Kings to an 87-59 victory.

"It was kind of a freak accident," he said. "I went up for a shot and a guy on the other team came by me and his knee hit me on the right leg and the bone snapped in two places."

The breaks were between the knee and the ankle.

Dr. Nathan Cotlar, Houston physician who serves as team doctor each year the Goose plays here, said the zany basketball whiz should be out of action for six to eight weeks.

More than 560 fans visited Tatum at St. Joseph's Hospital and caused the posting of a "no visitors" sign.

Most of the 8,000 spectators thought it was another of his zany antics when he fell to the floor.

"They just laughed," he said. "When they carried me off they thought I would come back on the floor for another entrance with another gimmick.

"But after the game was over, all the fans came back to where I was waiting for an ambulance.

"And I got the biggest hand I ever got when they found out I was hurt."

In 1937, Texas Tech flew to Detroit in one of the first plane trips for a football team.

Killebrew Set For Award As Top Slugger

BALTIMORE (AP) — Harmon Killebrew, who has hit 188 home runs during the past four American League seasons, will be honored tonight as baseball's top slugger.

Killebrew will receive the $2,000 jeweled Sultan of Swat crown from the Maryland Professional Baseball Players Association at the organization's 12th annual Tops in Sports banquet.

Sharing the slugging spotlight with Killebrew will be Hank Greenberg, who will be presented a retroactive award for 1938 — when he smacked 58 homers and drove in 183 runs.

Other awards include: Manager of the Year, Hank Bauer, Baltimore Orioles; pitcher of the Year, Dean Chance, Los Angeles Angels; Most Valuable Player, Brooks Robinson, Orioles; Star of the Future, Dave Boswell, Minnesota Twins; and Scout of the Year, John Ogden, Philadelphia Phillies.

John Unitas of the Baltimore Colts will receive the Football Most Valuable Player Award and teammate Lennie Moore the Comeback of the Year Award.

Knicks End Four Game Streak

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the Baltimore Bullets go no higher than third in the National Basketball Association's Western Division this year, the culprit may be the New York Knicks, who most likely won't go any higher than last in the Eastern Division.

The Knicks ended a four-game losing streak under new Coach Harry Gallatin Sunday by edging the third-place Bullets 122-120. The victory was the fourth for the Knicks in five meetings with Baltimore this season. It also pushed the Bullets 1½ games behind second-place St. Louis.

Cincinnati drubbed Detroit 140-114 in the only other game scheduled.

A jump shot by rookie Emmett Bryant with 46 seconds left in overtime brought the Knicks the decision, only their 13th against 30 losses. New York sent the game into overtime on Johnny Egan's basket with 14 seconds remaining in regulation time. That tied the game 112-112.

After Bryant sank his jumper in the final minute of the overtime period, New York rookie Jim Barnes blocked a shot by Bailey Howell with four seconds to go.

Friars Coach Says He's Surprised With 11-0 Mark

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Before the college basketball season started, Providence Coach Joe Mullaney surveyed his squad but he couldn't have been enthused about what he saw.

The Friars had lost 6-foot-10 John Thompson and versatile Jim Stone by graduation and 6-8 Bob Kovalski was an academic casualty. All were key men on last year's 20-6 outfit.

What was left was a topheavy roster of sophomores and juniors with only four seniors on the 15 man squad. "We didn't figure much in pre-season," Mullaney admits.

He can afford to be candid. Providence takes the only unblemished record among major college teams into a two-week exam respite today. The Friars are 11-0 and don't play again until Jan. 23 when they take on Seton Hall.

"We kind of sneaked up on the pollsters," said Mullaney after his ninth-ranked team had walloped Canisius 86-69 in Buffalo Saturday night. That put the Friars halfway through their schedule and completed a stretch of eight games, only two of which were played at home.

"I can imagine the fellows out west still don't figure we're too strong," Mullaney adds. "We're not bothered by that." Two of the Frier victories came on a swing through the midwest against Creighton University and Iowa.

Jim Walker, one of the sophs who has come through in a big way for Providence, led Saturday's victory with 27 points.

And while the Friars continued undefeated, sixth-ranked Duke ran into a snag in, of all places, the Atlantic Coast Conference where the Blue Devils were considered shoo-ins.

North Carolina pulled into Duke's lair at Durham, N.C., with a four-game losing streak and the Blue Devils were on a seven-game victory skein. But the Tar Heels got 22 points from Billy Cunningham and 21 from Bob Lewis to spring their upset, 65-62.

Duke fell 10-points back, spurted to take the ead but then dropped behind again as North Carolina Coach Dean Smith got his first victory over the Blue Devils in eight tries.

While Duke and North Carolina were ending streaks, top-ranked UCLA and New Mexico and Dartmouth extended strings, the first two happily, the third sadly.

The Uclans and the Lobos each won their 11th straight. UCLA whacked Oregon State 83-53 and New Mexico slugged Arizona 64-42. Keith Erickson led UCLA with 22 while New Mexico's defense made the difference against the Wildcats.

Dartmouth, meanwhile, had its futility streak in the Ivy League extended to 23 games as Columbia scored an 85-77 victory.

But the Indians shouldn't lose heart. Just look at Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs hadn't won a Southwest Conference game in 21 starts until they ran into Texas and came up with a 77-64 victory.

Tonight's top games include No. 2 Indiana at Iowa, high-scoring Notre Dame at St. Louis, Creighton at seventh-ranked St. John's of New York and No. 10 Davidson at The Citadel.

Indiana-Iowa Game Seen As Key to Big Ten Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers, although ranked second nationally, can ill-afford defeat tonight when they invade Iowa to take on the surprising Big Ten basketball leaders.

Bouncing back from their only defeat of the season by Illinois, the Hoosiers easily disposed of Northwestern Saturday 86-73.

The Hoosiers must knock Iowa out of the conference lead if they hope to remain in early contention.

Despite a 10-1 record for the season, Indiana is faced with the task of winning on the road against an opponent which begins applying pressure when a team enters the fieldhouse.

Before the season started, Iowa Coach Ralph Miller promised it would take him a little time to get the Hawkeyes to play his brand of ball, but he hoped to be ready by the time the conference race started.

Iowa barely remained in front during pre-conference competition in putting together a 5-4 record. But once the race began, the Hawkeyes disposed of Wisconsin and were the only visiting team to emerge triumphant in Saturday's first full Big Ten card by toppling Michigan State 85-78.

This placed Iowa ahead of Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue — all of whom opened conference play with victories. Michigan knocked Illinois out of the league lead 89-83, Minnesota kayoed Wisconsin 81-57 and Purdue bested Ohio State 71-64.

Only one other game is scheduled tonight. Purdue is at Wisconsin, a team which has lost its first three conference games.

IT'S THE ASTRODOME

HOUSTON (AP) — The new domed stadium here where the Houston Astros will play their 1965 National League baseball games will be called the Astrodome.

The official name remains as the Harris County Domed Stadium.

It opens April 9 when Houston faces the New York Yankees in the first of five preseason exhibition games.

Lobos Pad WAC Lead; Utah, BYU Coming Up

By BOB EGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Utah and Brigham Young take road junkets to Arizona this weekend to see what they can do about catching up with New Mexico in the Western Athletic Conference basketball race.

The Lobos took a firm hold on first place Saturday with a 64-42 victory over Arizona at Albuquerque.

New Mexico, now 12-1 overall and 2-0 in the league, appears a good bet to stay on top for some time to come because its next three conference games are at home.

But Utah and Brigham Young, who haven't seen any league action yet, don't want to let the Lobos get out of sight.

Both scored impressive victories Saturday as they tuned up for conference play. The Redskins topped Idaho 80-63 at home and the Cougars outscored Utah State 99-90 on the road.

In the only other game Saturday, Wyoming handed last year's co-champ, Arizona State University, a 105-82 whipping at Laramie.

Utah, now 11-2, grabbed the lead early against Idaho and never lost it. George Fisher was the Redskins' chief pointmaker with 16.

Brigham Young got balanced scoring, and plenty of it, in its triumph over Utah State. Dick Nemelka had 25 points, John Fairchild 22 and Steve Kramer 20 for the Cougars.

The fact that the Cougars beat a respected opponent on the road should be cause for concern among the other league members. All six conference teams have staggering home - court winning percentages, and the league's champion will have to put a dent in some of them.

Utah visits Arizona State and Brigham Young is at Arizona Friday night. The Utah teams trade opponents Saturday. Both Arizona schools are tough enough at home to play a big part in the outcome of the title race, even if they don't figure in it themselves.

Arizona still has some title aspirations, although these were dimmed by New Mexico Saturday.

New Mexico clamped the nation's top defense around the Wildcats and out - bounded them 58-36 to run up its 11th straight victory.

The Lobos didn't score much themselves, but they spread the points around. Mel Daniels had 14, Skip Kruzich and Dick Ellis 13 and Bill Morgan 12. Albert Johnson led Arizona with 11.

Wyoming virtually destroyed Arizona State's already slim hopes of a third straight conference title. The Cowboys got 29 points from Leon Clark and 28 from Flynn Robinson as they handed the Sun Devils their second conference loss in as many games.

Wyoming now is 6-5 overall and 1-1 in league play. The Cowboys face a major task Saturday night when they meet New Mexico on the Lobos' home floor.

Two non-conference games are scheduled this week. Arizona hosts Arizona State College tonight and Wyoming visits Denver on Thursday.

Playoff Set if Needed

L.A. Golf Tourney In Final Round Today

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sudden death playoff will be in order in the event of a tie after Monday's final round of the $70,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

But among the disbelievers in such suicidal procedures are, in order, Paul Harney, Dan Sikes, Bill Casper, Jr., professional golfers all, to list a few.

Each thinks he can win the $12,000 top pot without benefit $12,000 top pot without benefit of extra holes.

As play began on the par 36-36-71 Rancho Municipal course, the front-runners with their 54-hole totals were:

Harney, 207; Sikes, 209; Casper and Howie Johnson, 210; Bobby Nichols, 211, and to skip a few brackets, Tony Lema, 213; Arnold Palmer, 215, and Ken Venturi, 217.

Obviously Palmer and Venturi would be in favor of sudden death, but it would have to be a mass affair.

The 35-year-old Harney, from Sacramento, Calif., scored a repeat performance, only better. A year ago lanky Paul came from behind to take the lead in the third round by one stroke and went on to win.

This time he has two shots on the crowd.

Casper and Sikes, 34, from Ponte Vedra, Fla., started Sunday's round at 138, with Harney at 139.

Harney shot 33-35—68; Sikes 38-33—71, Casper 37-35—72, and Johnson 36-33—69 to pose an additional threat.

"I must putt better today than I did yesterday," said Harney.

In view of his history here, is he fond of this course?

"I've made up my mind you can't fight this course. You're bound to make a few bogeys. You've just got to make enough birdies to make up for them."

Someone asked Casper, rather aimlessly it appeared, if he thinks he has a chance to win.

"Certainly," said the affable William. "Three shots on this golf course don't mean a thing. All you have to do is hole a couple of putts, have the other guys miss a few and you're in like a burglar.

Casper said he had three putts which stopped ½ an inch from dropping in. "I'm due for a couple of them," Casper observed.

Sikes, with a double bogey six on the fourth hole where he hit out of bounds, shot 38-33—71, called his a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde round.

He confided to Doc Giffin, PGA field press boss, that after the 38 he was determined not to "quit" — but admitted he thought about it several times during the trip around the first nine.

Defensemen Like Scoring in NHL

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago's Pierre Pilote and Toronto's Tim Horton, the National Hockey League's All-Star defensive combination in 1963-64, are becoming disturbingly offensive to rival goaltenders this season.

Pilote affronted Detroit goalie Roger Crozier with two tallies Sunday night as the Black Hawks edged the Red Wings 3-2 and climbed past idle Montreal into first place.

Horton, making the most of his temporary conversion to right wing, also scored twice, keying the Maple Leafs' 6-0 rout of the Rangers.

Pilote, whose playmaking — 28 assists — has kept him among the individual point leaders despite his failure to score a goal in the Hawks' first 30 games, has fired five in the last eight games. He finished the 63-64 campaign with seven goals.

The Hawks took a 3-0 lead in the first period, rookie Dennis Hull connecting after Pilote's second goal, and withstood Detroit's third-period rally to complete a weekend sweep of the Wings and move one point ahead of the Canadiens. Chicago beat Detroit 7-4 Saturday, Bobby Hull caging his 34th and 35th goals.

Horton, moved up to the forward line after a series of injuries wrecked the Maple Leafs' offense, beat New York goalie Jacques Plante twice in 50 seconds early in the second period. The back-to-back goals gave Toronto a 3-0 lead and boosted Horton's season total to seven, two short of his 63-64 total.

Bob Pulford also scored a pair for the Leafs. Ron Stewart and Frank Mahovlick completed the deluge while goalie Johnny Bower stopped 27 shots enroute to his first shutout of the season. The victory lifted Toronto into third place, a point up on Detroit.

The Rangers surprised Montreal 6-5 on ex-Canadien Billy Hicke's hat trick and the Leafs nipped Boston 2-1 in Saturday's other games.

Venturi's Comeback Tops 1964

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Three years is a long time to be kicking dust. I don't believe any athlete has ever been as low as I was."

So reflected golfer Ken Venturi today as he commented on the latest of many honors bestowed upon him in recent weeks — he was named in the annual Associated Press poll as the Outstanding Comeback in Sports in 1964.

Venturi, 34, a serious-minded, dedicated young man, suntanned and handsome, captured the U.S. Open Championship at Washington, D.C.

At younger age the San Francisco lad was a brilliant amateur, turned pro as one of the game's brightest prospects, and then rather abruptly went into a slump.

The open victory obviously intrigued the fancy of the AP voters. They voted Venturi 91 first place votes.

In order behind were baseball's St. Louis Cardinals, 52; Lenny Moore of Baltimore's football Colts, 39, and in order down the line, Phils' pitcher Jim Bunning, the Colts' football team, Angels outfielder Jimmy Piersall, the Notre Dame football team, Cubs' pitcher Larry Jackson, the Arkansas football team, Manager Johnny Keane of baseball and the Colts' Johnny Unitas.

"This is certainly an honor for me. Each of the others deserved the award. I am most appreciative, most sincerely," said Ken as he sat in the locker room of the Rancho Golf Club after a round in the Los Angeles Open — a disappointing round it had been.

Ken related some of his thoughts during those dark hours and, yes, years when he couldn't win.

He compared his fate to pitcher Roger Craig, the former Dodger, New York Met and Cardinal pitcher, now with the Reds.

"Roger Craig knew he was a good pitcher but he had a heck of a time proving it. I was like Craig, I couldn't win for losing. I knew I wasn't that bad, just as Craig knew."

Venturi, who has become deeply philosophical since his new found fame, said he had received letters from all over the country.

"Most of them were from people who had no connection at all with golf and were complete strangers to me. They wrote my success had given them encouragement in whatever they were doing. This has meant a lot to me."

Venturi admitted that since the Open triumph he has been in great demand for award functions, appearances and the like. In December alone he traveled over 40,000 miles in the United States and a trip to England.

"I'm not complaining, far from it, after all the months of picking garbage," he said with a grin.

But these pleasant distractions have hampered his concentration and in a sense, for the time being dulled the sharpness of his mind and his game.

No, said Ken, he is not the least bit concerned. He feels he will regain all the skill he showed in the U.S. Open.

Venturi also discounted any alarm over a circulatory ailment of the little finger of his right hand. He said it was the same ailment that plagued Dodger pitching star Sandy Kouffax. In fact, Dr. Robert Wood, who treated Sandy, is handling his case.

Ken noted that since he is the National Open champion, the finger trouble is newsworthy. Then, without a trace of bitterness, he said:

"A year ago no one would have given a darn."

Big Six Loop Is Established

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — The James A. Naismith Intercollegiate Basketball Conference, which will be nicknamed the Big Six, was formally established Sunday by teams from Maine, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Members of the circuit which will begin competition in the 1965-66 season are Nasson College of Springvale, Maine; St. Francis of Biddeford, Maine; Gordon of Wenham, Mass.; Barrington, R.I., College; Bryant College of Providence, R.I. and Babson of Wellesley, Mass.

The league is named in honor of Dr. James Naismith who founded the game at Springfield College in 1891.

Westerners' Offense, Defense Shine As NFL's East All-Stars Suffer Injuries

By PATRICK MCNULTY
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League's top players scattered today after a rousing 34-14 victory for the West over the East in the annual Pro Bowl.

The Western All-Stars, spearheaded by Fran Tarkenton, Johnny Unitas, Terry Barr and Gino Marchetti, turned the game into a rout before 60,698 fans in sunny Memorial Coliseum. They scored in every quarter while holding fast against the Eastern offense's big guns — Frank Ryan, Sonny Jurgensen, Jim Brown and Paul Warfield.

Tarkenton, the little scrambler from the Minnesota Vikings, and Barr, Detroit Lions' fleet flanker, were voted the game's outstanding players.

Barr set up two of the West's touchdowns with acrobatic catches of Tarkenton passes.

Marchetti, appearing in his 10th Pro Bowl — a record he shares with retired Leo Nomellini — says he's definitely quitting the game. He came back last season on the pleas of Baltimore Colt Coach Don Shula, but Shula said he won't ask anymore.

"How long can you keep asking a guy to play? He's given everything he has," Shula said.

The East attack was hard hit by quarterback injuries. Ryan, blitzed by Merlin Olsen and Marchetti, left the action with a shoulder separation early in the third quarter. Jurgensen, with a sore throwing shoulder, took over but couldn't generate any offensive fire except for a scoring toss to Jim Brown late in the game.

East Coach Blanton Collier said he had planned to use Jurgensen only sparingly, but changed strategy when Ryan was hurt.

"My shoulder really bothered me in there," Jurgensen said. "I couldn't throw long at all."

The victory was revenge — but not sweet enough — for West Coach Shula, whose Baltimore Colts were humiliated 27-0 by the Collier-coached Cleveland Browns in the AFL title game.

"It's a satisfying victory but I'd trade it for a National Football League title," Shula said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Statistics of the National Football League Pro Bowl Game:

	East	West
First downs	13	25
Rushing yardage	105	145
Passing yardage	62	266
Passes	30-13	25-13
Passes intercepted by	1	4
Punts	4	2
Fumbles lost	0	3
Yards penalized	59	55

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas takes a seven-game winning streak to Boulder tonight to face improving Colorado, the club that upset Kansas State Saturday and leaving Kansas and Oklahoma State the only unbeaten teams in the Big Eight basketball race.

The Colorado court carries no particular hex for the Jayhawks, although they've had trouble winning there. Kansas stunned the Buffaloes 73-55 at Boulder last season, then beat them in overtime at Lawrence, although finishing one game behind them in the title race.

Ted Owens, Kansas' new coach, won his first meeting with Coach Sox Walseth of Colorado 53-51 in the championship Tournament. This gives Kansas a four-game winning streak in the series dating back to Colorado's late-1963 victory at Boulder.

Kansas has won only six of 17 games at Boulder since Colorado joined the conference, while beating the Buffs 12 of 17 in Lawrence and eight out of nine in the tournament.

Colorado used deadly foul shooting down the stretch to edge Kansas State 80-77. Chuck Gardner, Colorado's 6-foot-7 pivot, scored 21 points and Pat Frink had 25.

Kansas ran its record to 10-3, best in the Big Eight, and 2-0 in league play, by beating Missouri 73-66 before 12,000 at Lawrence with 6-foot-11 Walt Wesley scoring 33 points. Oklahoma State kept pace by smashing Nebraska 93-54 for an OSU school scoring record in the first of nine afternoon television games. The series will include all league teams.

Iowa State nicked Oklahoma 73-72 at Norman.

Goose Tatum Breaks Leg During Game

OUSTON (AP) — Goose Tatum was recovering from a broken leg today, his first major injury in 25 years of professional basketball.

He was injured Saturday night in the closing minutes of a game with the New York Olympians. He had scored 50 points and led the Road Kings to an 87-59 victory.

"It was kind of a freak accident," he said. "I went up for a shot and a guy on the other team came by me and his knee hit me on the right leg and the bone snapped in two places."

The breaks were between the knee and the ankle.

Dr. Nathan Cotlar, Houston physician who serves as team doctor each year the Goose plays here, said the zany basketball whiz should be out of action for six to eight weeks.

More than 500 fans visited Tatum at St. Joseph's Hospital and caused the posting of a "no visitors" sign.

Most of the 8,000 spectators thought it was another of his zany antics when he fell to the floor.

"They just laughed," he said. "When they carried me off they thought I would come back on the floor for another entrance with another gimmick.

"But after the game was over, all the fans came back to where I was waiting for an ambulance.

"And I got the biggest hand I ever got when they found out I was hurt."

In 1937, Texas Tech flew to Detroit in one of the first plane trips for a football team.

Killebrew Set For Award As Top Slugger

BALTIMORE (AP) — Harmon Killebrew, who has hit 188 home runs during the past four American League seasons, will be honored tonight as baseball's top slugger.

Killebrew will receive the $2,000 jeweled Sultan of Swat crown from the Maryland Professional Baseball Players Association at the organization's 12th annual Tops in Sports banquet.

Sharing the slugging spotlight with Killebrew will be Hank Greenberg, who will be presented a retroactive award for 1938 — when he smacked 58 homers and drove in 183 runs.

Other awards include: Manager of the Year, Hank Bauer, Baltimore Orioles; pitcher of the Year, Dean Chance, Los Angeles Angels; Most Valuable Player, Brooks Robinson, Orioles; Star of the Future, Dave Boswell, Minnesota Twins; and Scout of the Year, John Ogden, Philadelphia Phillies.

John Unitas of the Baltimore Colts will receive the Football Most Valuable Player Award and teammate Lennie Moore the Comeback of the Year Award.

Knicks End Four Game Streak

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the Baltimore Bullets go no higher than third in the National Basketball Association's Western Division this year, the culprit may be the New York Knicks, who most likely won't go any higher than last in the Eastern Division.

The Knicks ended a four-game losing streak under new Coach Harry Gallatin Sunday by edging the third-place Bullets 122-120. The victory was the fourth for the Knicks in five meetings with Baltimore this season. It also pushed the Bullets 1½ games behind second-place St. Louis.

Cincinnati drubbed Detroit 140-114 in the only other game scheduled.

A jump shot by rookie Emmett Bryant with 46 seconds left in overtime brought the Knicks the decision, only their 13th against 30 losses. New York sent the game into overtime on Johnny Egan's basket with 14 seconds remaining in regulation time. That tied the game 112-112.

After Bryant sank his jumper in the final minute of the overtime period, New York rookie Jim Barnes blocked a shot by Bailey Howell with four seconds to go.

Friars Coach Says He's Surprised With 11-0 Mark

By HAL BOCK

Before the college basketball season started, Providence Coach Joe Mullaney surveyed his squad but he couldn't have been enthused about what he saw.

The Friars had lost 6-foot-10 John Thompson and versatile Jim Stone by graduation and 6-8 Bob Kovalski was an academic casualty. All were key men on last year's 20-6 outfit.

What was left was a topheavy roster of sophomores and juniors with only four seniors on the 15 man squad. "We didn't figure much in pre-season," Mullaney admits.

He can afford to be candid. Providence takes the only unblemished record among major college teams into a two-week exam respite today. The Friars are 11-0 and don't play again until Jan. 23 when they take on Seton Hall.

"We kind of sneaked up on the pollsters," said Mullaney after his ninth-ranked team had walloped Canisius 86-69 in Buffalo Saturday night. That put the Friars halfway through their schedule and completed a stretch of eight games, only two of which were played at home.

"I can imagine the fellows out west still don't figure we're too strong," Mullaney adds. "We're not bothered by that." Two of the Frier victories came on a swing through the midwest against Creighton University and Iowa.

Jim Walker, one of the sophs who has come through in a big way for Providence, led Saturday's victory with 27 points.

And while the Friars continued undefeated, sixth-ranked Duke ran into a snag in, of all places, the Atlantic Coast Conference where the Blue Devils were considered shoo-ins.

North Carolina pulled into Duke's lair at Durham, N.C., with a four-game losing streak and the Blue Devils were on a seven-game victory skein. But the Tar Heels got 22 points from Billy Cunningham and 21 from Bob Lewis to spring their upset, 65-62.

Duke fell 10-points back, spurted to take the ead but then dropped behind again as North Carolina Coach Dean Smith got his first victory over the Blue Devils in eight tries.

While Duke and North Carolina were ending streaks, top-ranked UCLA and New Mexico and Dartmouth extended strings, the first two happily, the third sadly.

The Uclans and the Lobos each won their 11th straight. UCLA whacked Oregon State 83-53 and New Mexico slugged Arizona 64-42. Keith Erickson led UCLA with 22 while New Mexico's defense made the difference against the Wildcats.

Dartmouth, meanwhile, had its futility streak in the Ivy League extended to 23 games as Columbia scored an 85-77 victory.

But the Indians shouldn't lose heart. Just look at Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs hadn't won a Southwest Conference game in 21 starts until they ran into Texas and came up with a 77-64 victory.

Tonight's top games include No. 2 Indiana at Iowa, high-scoring Notre Dame at St. Louis, Creighton at seventh-ranked St. John's of New York and No. 10 Davidson at The Citadel.

Indiana-Iowa Game Seen As Key to Big Ten Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers, although ranked second nationally, can ill-afford defeat tonight when they invade Iowa to take on the surprising Big Ten basketball leaders.

Bouncing back from their only defeat of the season by Illinois, the Hoosiers easily disposed of Northwestern Saturday 86-73.

The Hoosiers must knock Iowa out of the conference lead if they hope to remain in early contention.

Despite a 10-1 record for the season, Indiana is faced with the task of winning on the road against an opponent which begins applying pressure when a team enters the fieldhouse.

Before the season started, Iowa Coach Ralph Miller promised it would take him a little time to get the Hawkeyes to play his brand of ball, but he hoped to be ready by the time the conference race started.

Iowa barely remained in front during pre-conference competition in putting together a 5-4 record. But once the race began, the Hawkeyes disposed of Wisconsin and were the only visiting team to emerge triumphant in Saturday's first full Big Ten card by toppling Michigan State 85-78.

This placed Iowa ahead of Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue — all of whom opened conference play with victories. Michigan knocked Illinois out of the league lead 89-83, Minnesota kayoed Wisconsin 81-57 and Purdue bested Ohio State 71-64.

Only one other game is scheduled tonight. Purdue is at Wisconsin, a team which has lost its first three conference games.

IT'S THE ASTRODOME

HOUSTON (AP) — The new domed stadium here where the Houston Astros will play their 1965 National League baseball games will be called the Astrodome.

The official name remains as the Harris County Domed Stadium.

It opens April 9 when Houston faces the New York Yankees in the first of five preseason exhibition games.

Lobos Pad WAC Lead; Utah, BYU Coming Up

By BOB EGER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Utah and Brigham Young take road junkets to Arizona this weekend to see what they can do about catching up with New Mexico in the Western Athletic Conference basketball race.

The Lobos took a firm hold on first place Saturday with a 64-42 victory over Arizona at Albuquerque.

New Mexico, now 12-1 overall and 2-0 in the league, appears a good bet to stay on top for some time to come because its next three conference games are at home.

But Utah and Brigham Young, who haven't seen any league action yet, don't want to let the Lobos get out of sight.

Both scored impressive victories Saturday as they tuned up for conference play. The Redskins topped Idaho 80-63 at home and the Cougars outscored Utah State 99-90 on the road.

In the only other game Saturday, Wyoming handed last year's co-champ, Arizona State University, a 105-82 whipping at Laramie.

Utah, now 11-2, grabbed the lead early against Idaho and never lost it. George Fisher was the Redskins' chief pointmaker with 16.

Brigham Young got balanced scoring, and plenty of it, in its triumph over Utah State. Dick Nemelka had 25 points, John Fairchild 22 and Steve Kramer 20 for the Cougars.

The fact that the Cougars beat a respected opponent on the road should be cause for concern among the other league members. All six conference teams have staggering home-court winning percentages, and the league's champion will have to put a dent in some of them.

Utah visits Arizona State and Brigham Young is at Arizona Friday night. The Utah teams trade opponents Saturday. Both Arizona schools are tough enough at home to play a big part in the outcome of the title race, even if they don't figure in it themselves.

Arizona still has some title aspirations, although these were dimmed by New Mexico Saturday.

New Mexico clamped the nation's top defense around the Wildcats and out-bounded them 50-34 to run up its 11th straight victory.

The Lobos didn't score much themselves, but they spread the points around. Mel Daniels had 14, Skip Kruzich and Dick Ellis 13 and Bill Morgan 12. Albert Johnson led Arizona with 11.

Wyoming virtually destroyed Arizona State's already slim hopes of a third straight conference title. The Cowboys got 29 points from Leon Clark and 28 from Flynn Robinson as they handed the Sun Devils their second conference loss in as many games.

Wyoming now is 6-5 overall and 1-1 in league play. The Cowboys face a major task Saturday night when they meet New Mexico on the Lobos' home floor.

Two non-conference games are scheduled this week. Arizona hosts Arizona State College tonight and Wyoming visits Denver on Thursday.

Playoff Set if Needed

L.A. Golf Tourney In Final Round Today

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sudden death playoff will be in order in the event of a tie after Monday's final round of the $70,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

But among the disbelievers in such suicidal procedures are, in order, Paul Harney, Dan Sikes, Bill Casper, Jr., professional golfers all, to list a few.

Each thinks he can win the $12,000 top pot without benefit $12,000 top pot without benefit of extra holes.

As play began on the par 36-36-71 Rancho Municipal course, the front-runners with their 54-hole totals were:

Harney, 207; Sikes, 209; Casper and Howie Johnson, 210; Bobby Nichols, 211, and to skip a few brackets, Tony Lema, 213; Arnold Palmer, 215, and Ken Venturi, 217.

Obviously Palmer and Venturi would be in favor of sudden death, but it would have to be a mass affair.

The 35-year-old Harney, from Sacramento, Calif., scored a repeat performance, only better. A year ago lanky Paul came from behind to take the lead in the third round by one stroke and went on to win.

This time he has two shots on the crowd.

Casper and Sikes, 34, from Ponte Vedra, Fla., started Sunday's round at 138, with Harney at 139.

Harney shot 33-35—68; Sikes 38-33—71, Casper 37-35—72, and Johnson 36-33—69 to pose an additional threat.

"I must putt better today than I did yesterday," said Harney.

In view of his history here, is he fond of this course?

"I've made up my mind you can't fight this course. You're bound to make a few bogeys. You've just got to make enough birdies to make up for them."

Someone asked Casper, rather aimlessly it appeared, if he thinks he has a chance to win.

"Certainly," said the affable William. "Three shots on this golf course don't mean a thing. All you have to do is hole a couple of putts, have the other guys miss a few and you're in like a burglar.

Casper said he had three putts which stopped ½ an inch from dropping in. "I'm due for a couple of them," Casper observed.

Sikes, with a double bogey six on the fourth hole where he hit out of bounds, shot 38-33—71, called his a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde round.

He confided to Doc Giffin, PGA field press boss, that after the 38 he was determined not to "quit" — but admitted he thought about it several times during the trip around the first nine.

Defensemen Like Scoring in NHL

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago's Pierre Pilote and Toronto's Tim Horton, the National Hockey League's All-Star defensive combination in 1963-64, are becoming disturbingly offensive to rival goaltenders this season.

Pilote affronted Detroit goalie Roger Crozier with two tallies Sunday night as the Black Hawks edged the Red Wings 3-2 and climbed past idle Montreal into first place.

Horton, making the most of his temporary conversion to right wing, also scored twice, keying the Maple Leafs' 6-0 rout of the Rangers.

Pilote, whose playmaking — 28 assists — has kept him among the individual point leaders despite his failure to score a goal in the Hawks' first 30 games, has fired five in the last eight games. He finished the 63-64 campaign with seven goals.

The Hawks took a 3-0 lead in the first period, rookie Dennis Hull connecting after Pilote's second goal, and withstood Detroit's third-period rally to complete a weekend sweep of the Wings and move one point ahead of the Canadiens. Chicago beat Detroit 7-4 Saturday, Bobby Hull caging his 34th and 35th goals.

Horton, moved up to the forward line after a series of injuries wrecked the Maple Leafs' offense, beat New York goalie Jacques Plante twice in 50 seconds early in the second period. The back-to-back goals gave Toronto a 3-0 lead and boosted Horton's season total to seven, two short of his 63-64 total.

Bob Pulford also scored a pair for the Leafs. Ron Stewart and Frank Mahovlick completed the deluge while goalie Johnny Bower stopped 27 shots enroute to his first shutout of the season. The victory lifted Toronto into third place, a point up on Detroit.

The Rangers surprised Montreal 6-5 on ex-Canadien Billy Hicke's hat trick and the Leafs nipped Boston 2-1 in Saturday's other games.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Prof. Ostrander is a bachelor school teacher who spends all of his surplus money each year going that "second Mile" that the Bible advocates. Scrapbook this case and send for the "Test for Good Teachers" so you can rate your local faculties. Grammar and high school teachers are better trained than college profs!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

CASE U-479: Jay Ostrander, aged 60, is a unique high school teacher at Goodrich, Michigan.

"Dr. Crane," one of his former pupils informed me, "he is the kind of teacher you'd endorse.

"For he likes students and enjoys increasing their enthusiasm for education. He is as dedicated as a church missionary!

"He is also a perfect example of the Bible's statement about 'going the second mile.'

"For he not only goes out of his way to help his pupils inside the classroom, but he enriches their lives by outside cultural projects, too.

"For example, last year he took about 40 of his students, plus three of their mothers, in a chartered bus to Chicago.

"At his own expense he then gave them a 5-day tour of the city with special stress on the Art Institute, the Museum of Science and Industry, etc.

"Including the total hotel accommodations and other bills, this trip cost him $2,000.

"And he has done this same thing every year for about 25 years!

"Over 1,000 students (600 girls and 400 boys) have thus had an exciting and educational trip to Chicago at Professor Ostrander's expense. Most of them had never visited a big city before.

"Dr. Crane, wouldn't you rate him as a Very Superior teacher on your 'Test for Good Teachers?' "

Would that more teachers had this missionary fervor to transform the lives of youngsters in a constructive manner.

All such dedicated teachers are storing up a great deal of credit in the eyes of the Almighty.

But some teachers simply go into that field because of inertia or laziness.

"It's a good racket," one college graduate recently confessed.

"Despite the yelling about poor pay, you get over three months' vacation every year, and draw $500 per month for a nice white collar job."

Such motivation indicates a poor teacher, even before he ever sets foot inside the classroom!

For the cardinal asset of every superb teacher is a missionary fervor to transform children's lives and cultivate a liking for cultural subjects.

A woman with only two years of college, but with such missionary motivation, is much superior to a teacher with an M. A. or Ph.D. degree who simply picks teaching as the line of least resistance.

And many college professor never had any professional preparation for pedagogy.

Thus, they aren't allowed to teach in grammar or high school for lack of such technical courses.

They have had no "practice teaching" and often can't even make a 10-minute talk that would keep any audience awake.

Yet they are accepted for college jobs just because they have a Ph. D. in some technical field.

But superb teaching requires far more than a college degree!

School boards, please take note, and send for my "Test for Good Teachers," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

Don't be stampeded merely by an applicant's fancy degrees!

Our Average Student Reads
7.8 Times Faster
Than His Starting Speed
WITH EQUAL OR BETTER COMPREHENSION

The internationally famous EVELYN WOOD Reading Dynamics Institute
INVITES YOU TO ATTEND A FREE
DEMONSTRATION OF THIS UNIQUE METHOD
Where you will:
- See an amazing documented film about Reading Dynamics.
- Learn how Reading Dynamics can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater retention.

HOW DID IT START?

Eighteen years ago Mrs. Wood made a startling discovery that led to the founding of Reading Dynamics. While working toward her masters degree, she handed a term paper to a professor and watched him read the 80 pages at 6,000 words per minute—with outstanding recall and comprehension.

Determined to find the secret behind such rapid reading, she spent the next two years tracking down 50 people who could read from 1,500 to 6,000 words per minute. She studied their techniques, taught herself to read at these faster rates. Now, after years of testing, you can benefit from this great discovery.

DOES IT HAVE PROVEN RESULTS?

Results have been reported in Time, Newsweek, Business Week, and Esquire. Demonstrators have appeared on television with Jack Paar, Garry Moore, and Art Linkletter.

Senator Proxmire, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experiences I've had at Yale and Harvard."

Senator Symington, Missouri: "I can read most material at speeds above 3000 W.P.M. and technical material in the 2000 W.P.M. range."

Our most recent Reading Dynamics class in Denver had an average beginning speed of 333 words per minute, an ending speed of 2,610 words per minute, with equal comprehension.

HOW IS IT DIFFERENT FROM OTHER COURSES?

No machines are used. You learn, instead, to use your hand as a pacer—a tool you always have with you.

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,500 and 3,000 words per minute, and many go even higher.

GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student by at least three times with equal or better comprehension. We will refund the entire tuition of any student who does not triple his reading efficiency as measured by the beginning and subsequent tests, or the student may retake the course free of charge. A refund is conditional upon the student attending all classes or having made up missed sessions with the teacher. The student must also have practiced the required number of hours, following the assignments as outlined by the teacher. The average student may expect a five-time increase in reading speed, and an improvement in comprehension and recall. Any student who must withdraw from the course for any reason may re-enter any subsequent courses at any future time, at no additional cost.

Neutralizing Not Congo Solution Demands Change

By RUSSELL KIRK

Though he has won victory after victory by force of arms, and has thrust the rebels almost wholly beyond the Congo's borders, Premier Moise Tshombe is suggesting to Washington and Brussels that the Congo cannot be governed successfully as a unitary state. He would settle for a loose Congo federation, apparently, trusting that his own Katanga could remain prosperous and reasonably secure under such an arrangement.

The American State Department still declines, however, to discard its old passion for a centralized Congo Republic. Some State Department people inisist that Tshombe ought to come to terms with the Communist - aided rebels, even admitting "rebel" leaders to his cabinet — and so, by some diplomatic miracle, preserve the Congo's alleged unity.

But the notion of a "neutral" compromise, engineeered by some benign "third force," dies hard in Washington. Ex-premier Cyrille Adoula, the State Department suggests, might be employed to effect a conciliation between the government of Kasavubu and Tshombe, and the fugitive rebel leaders now planning renewed assaults from the Sudan, Uganda, and Ruanda. But since Adoula, when in office, was wholly unable to restrain or placate the Communist - influenced rebels, it seems impossible for him to succeed as a mere ambassador.

Yet Tshombe, given time and increased economic and military assistance, may reach a "political" settlement of the Congo's woes, though scarcely through embracing the Marxist terrorists who massacred (according to President Kasavubu) about 80,000 Congolese, including all the literate people they could catch. His principal hope is to give up the vain attempt to treat the Congo as a unitary state, and instead to arrange a confederate league of provinces or little states founded, for the most part, on tribal allegiances and boundaries. Just that was what Tshombe, a realist, sought for Katanga when he resisted the United Nations and the United States.

For most of the "rebels," far from being doctrinaire Communists, are merely dissatisfied tribal folk who object to being ruled by men from distant tribes or cities quite as much as they resented being ruled by Belgians. Only a large measure of self - government will induce them to lay down their arms. True, their self - government has small prospect of being efficient or intelligent; yet it is the only alternative, probably, to a "hundred years' civil war" in the Congo In such a confederation, such more advanced centers as Leopoldville and Elisabethville might gradually restore order and relative prosperity through example, rather than undisciplined troops.

Even if Nigeria, Tunisia, and some other moderate African states may be persuaded to assist Tshombe with military units and advisers, the vast area of the Congo cannot be pacified permanently by compulsion. Knowing this, Tshombe may prevail upon Washington and Brussels to let him effect his own settlement. His ace in this game is that Washington and Brussels have but three choices: Tshombe, communism, or anarchy.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Prof. Ostrander is a bachelor school teacher who spends all of his surplus money each year going that "second Mile" that the Bible advocates. Scrapbook this case and send for the "Test for Good Teachers" so you can rate your local faculties. Grammar and high school teachers are better trained than college profs!

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

CASE U-479: Jay Ostrander, aged 60, is a unique high school teacher at Goodrich, Michigan.

"Dr. Crane," one of his former pupils informed me, "he is the kind of teacher you'd endorse.

"For he likes students and enjoys increasing their enthusiasm for education. He is as dedicated as a church missionary!

"He is also a perfect example of the Bible's statement about 'going the second mile.'

"For he not only goes out of his way to help his pupils inside the classroom, but he enriches their lives by outside cultural projects, too.

"For example, last year he took about 40 of his students, plus three of their mothers, in a chartered bus to Chicago.

"At his own expense he then gave them a 5-day tour of the city with special stress on the Art Institute, the Museum of Science and Industry, etc.

"Including the total hotel accommodations and other bills, this trip cost him $2,000.

"And he has done this same thing every year for about 25 years!

"Over 1,000 students (600 girls and 400 boys) have thus had an exciting and educational trip to Chicago at Professor Ostrander's expense. Most of them had never visited a big city before.

"Dr. Crane, wouldn't you rate him as a Very Superior teacher on your 'Test for Good Teachers?' "

Would that more teachers had this missionary fervor to transform the lives of youngsters in a constructive manner.

All such dedicated teachers are storing up a great deal of credit in the eyes of the Almighty.

But some teachers simply go into that field because of inertia or laziness.

"It's a good racket," one college graduate recently confessed.

"Despite the yelling about poor pay, you get over three months' vacation every year, and draw $500 per month for a nice white collar job."

Such motivation indicates a poor teacher, even before he ever sets foot inside the classroom!

For the cardinal asset of every superb teacher is a missionary fervor to transform children's lives and cultivate a liking for cultural subjects.

A woman with only two years of college, but with such missionary motivation, is much superior to a teacher with an M. A. or Ph.D. degree who simply picks teaching as the line of least resistance.

And many college professor never had any professional preparation for pedagogy.

Thus, they aren't allowed to teach in grammar or high school for lack of such technical courses.

They have had no "practice teaching" and often can't even make a 10-minute talk that would keep any audience awake.

Yet they are accepted for college jobs just because they have a Ph. D. in some technical field.

But superb teaching requires far more than a college degree!

School boards, please take note, and send for my "Test for Good Teachers," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

Don't be stampeded merely by an applicant's fancy degrees!

Our Average Student Reads 7.8 Times Faster Than His Starting Speed

WITH EQUAL OR BETTER COMPREHENSION

The internationally famous EVELYN WOOD Reading Dynamics Institute
INVITES YOU TO ATTEND A FREE DEMONSTRATION OF THIS UNIQUE METHOD

Where you will:
- See an amazing documented film about Reading Dynamics.
- Learn how Reading Dynamics can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater retention.

HOW DID IT START?

Eighteen years ago Mrs. Wood made a startling discovery that led to the founding of Reading Dynamics. While working toward her masters degree, she handed a term paper to a professor and watched him read the 80 pages at 6,000 words per minute—with outstanding recall and comprehension.

Determined to find the secret behind such rapid reading, she spent the next two years tracking down 50 people who could read from 1,500 to 6,000 words per minute. She studied their techniques, taught herself to read at these faster rates. Now, after years of testing, you can benefit from this great discovery.

DOES IT HAVE PROVEN RESULTS?

Results have been reported in Time, Newsweek, Business Week, and Esquire. Demonstrators have appeared on television with Jack Paar, Garry Moore, and Art Linkletter.

Senator Proxmire, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experiences I've had at Yale and Harvard."

Senator Symington, Missouri: "I can read most material at speeds above 3000 W.P.M. and technical material in the 2000 W.P.M. range."

Our most recent Reading Dynamics class in Denver had an average beginning speed of 333 words per minute, an ending speed of 2,610 words per minute, with equal comprehension.

HOW IS IT DIFFERENT FROM OTHER COURSES?

No machines are used. You learn, instead, to use your hand as a pacer—a tool you always have with you.

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,500 and 3,000 words per minute, and many go even higher.

GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student by at least three times with equal or better comprehension. We will refund the entire tuition of any student who does not triple his reading efficiency as measured by the beginning and subsequent tests, or the student may retake the course free of charge. A refund is conditional upon the student attending all classes or having made up missed sessions with the teacher. The student must also have practiced the required number of hours, following the assignments as outlined by the teacher. The average student may expect a five-time increase in reading speed, and an improvement in comprehension and recall. Any student who must withdraw from the course for any reason may re-enter any subsequent courses at any future time, at no additional cost.

Neutralizing Not Congo Solution Demands Change

By RUSSELL KIRK

Though he has won victory after victory by force of arms, and has thrust the rebels almost wholly beyond the Congo's borders, Premier Moise Tshombe is suggesting to Washington and Brussels that the Congo cannot be governed successfully as a unitary state. He would settle for a loose Congo federation, apparently, trusting that his own Katanga could remain prosperous and reasonably secure under such an arrangement.

The American State Department still declines, however, to discard its old passion for a centralized Congo Republic. Some State Department people inisist that Tshombe ought to come to terms with the Communist - aided rebels, even admitting "rebel" leaders to his cabinet — and so, by some diplomatic miracle, preserve the Congo's alleged unity.

But the notion of a "neutral" compromise, engineeered by some benign "third force," dies hard in Washington. Ex-premier Cyrille Adoula, the State Department suggests, might be employed to effect a conciliation between the government of Kasavubu and Tshombe, and the fugitive rebel leaders now planning renewed assaults from the Sudan, Uganda, and Ruanda. But since Adoula, when in office, was wholly unable to restrain or placate the Communist - influenced rebels, it seems impossible for him to succeed as a mere ambassador.

Yet Tshombe, given time and increased economic and military assistance, may reach a "political" settlement of the Congo's woes, though scarcely through embracing the Marxist terrorists who massacred (according to President Kasavubu) about 80,000 Congolese, including all the literate people they could catch. His principal hope is to give up the vain attempt to treat the Congo as a unitary state, and instead to arrange a confederate league of provinces or little states founded, for the most part, on tribal allegiances and boundaries. Just that was what Tshombe, a realist, sought for Katanga when he resisted the United Nations and the United States.

For most of the "rebels," far from being doctrinaire Communists, are merely dissatisfied tribal folk who object to being ruled by men from distant tribes or cities quite as much as they resented being ruled by Belgians. Only a large measure of self - government will induce them to lay down their arms. True, their self - government has small prospect of being efficient or intelligent; yet it is the only alternative, probably, to a "hundred years' civil war" in the Congo In such a confederation, such more advanced centers as Leopoldville and Elisabethville might gradually restore order and relative prosperity through example, rather than undisciplined troops.

Even if Nigeria, Tunisia, and some other moderate African states may be persuaded to assist Tshombe with military units and advisers, the vast area of the Congo cannot be pacified permanently by compulsion. Knowing this, Tshombe may prevail upon Washington and Brussels to let him effect his own settlement. His ace in this game is that Washington and Brussels have but three choices: Tshombe, communism, or anarchy.

INCOME PROPERTY

A very exceptional opportuniy for an employed or retired person to secure a large income from property which has enjoyed full occupancy for past 21 years, because it is ideally located and contains a large number of small highly improved units, each complete with kitchen and bath. These units are of the popular demand type and are moderately priced which is possible because of the large number of units in the property. Our experience proves that there is a constant, unsatisfied demand for this type of apartment. Will yield a high percentage on investment. 634-2706.

INCOME PROPERTY

A very exceptional opportuniy for an employed or retired person to secure a large income from property which has enjoyed full occupancy for past 21 years, because it is ideally located and contains a large number of small highly improved units, each complete with kitchen and bath. These units are of the popular demand type and are moderately priced which is possible because of the large number of units in the property. Our experience proves that there is a constant, unsatisfied demand for this type of apartment. Will yield a high percentage on investment. 634-2706.

European Movie Fad Slated for Fadeout

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —The dirty shirt, pseudo-intellectual European movie fad known as the Nouvelle Vague will be missing from the scene in 1965.

Authority for this prediction is French director Serge Bourguignon who says: "The Nouvelle Vague is a very old vague now, I'm afraid. And it never was worthwhile.

"It was a fashion, like women's dresses, that quickly died out. Actually, Nouvelle Vague could be applied to any movie maker in France who could make a picture for $100,000 or less and find some art house to play it in."

Bourguignon is a fiery 34-year-old Parisian who came to Hollywood to direct "The Reward" at 20th Century-Fox, his first major commercial movie.

Date Palm Pollination Spells Trouble

By ROBERT COOKE

COACHELLA, Calif. (AP) — Sex, high in the sky, is big business here, and it faces disaster soon if new male agricultural midwives aren't located in a hurry.

Trouble is, the pollination of a date palm takes place at the top of a 50-fot ladder.

Growers say most men trained for this rugged work have returned to Mexico, unable to work here because the controversial bracero act expired last Dec. 31. New workers, they say, don't like the work at that altitude.

Braceros, Mexican laborers admitted for agricultural work, were trained over many years to pollinate and otherwise care for the date crop. They also picked the annual $8-million crop.

An esitmated 750 date pickers are needed now to work on the 4,000-acre Coachella Valley crop with about 25 per cent of last year's fruit remaining to be picked.

Growers will also need about 350 men for the pollination chore, which usually gets under way in March or April.

Leland Yost, manager of the Coachella Vally Farmers Association, said the growers are willing to train new workers "if we can get men willing to work. They have to be motivated."

Yost said that "if the pollination is not done, there ill be no crop next year."

Pollination once was done by the wind. Since then, man has streamlined things to produce more, bigger and better dates.

Under natural conditions, when date groves grow from seeds, male and female trees grow in about equal numbers. Today, in modern groves, growers depend on the harem principle.

Horticulturist Roy Nixon of the U.S. date and citrus station, Indio, Calif., said the groves are planted with only one male tree for each 100 female trees.

Some growers send a man up the male tree to pick branches of flowers containing pollen, then send him up the female trees, where the male branches are tied among the female flowers and covered.

Other farmers send the man up the female tree with the male branches just to sprinkle the dust on the female flowers. Still others saturate a cotton ball with pollen and set it among the female blossoms. One grower developed a gun type tool to spray the pollen on the female flowers.

Anyway, each method does the job so well that workers are needed later to climb back up the trees to take off some of the unripe dates. Though some dates are lost this way, the remaining dates grow bigger.

That's the problem. If they want dates, someone has to scuttle up that ladder in March or April, pick up a little pollen, climb down the ladder, then run up another ladder and sprinkle the pollen, one way or another, on the female flowers.

Actually, it is done with more efficiency than that, but it takes a man who can work 50 feet in the air without holding on. Date pickers face many of the same problems.

"Date pickers are a special breed," a growers' spokesman said. "They have to be able to work 40 or 50 feet above ground on ladders or in bosun's chairs without being so scared they hang on with the hands they have to pick the dates with."

Growers' hopes for a return of the braceros, however, appear dim.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said in Washington that there is "no present prospect" of bringing in any foreign workers to meet growers' demands.

Air Guard Merger Seen by Air Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Merger of the Air Force Reserves into the Air National Guard has been recommended by the Air Force staff.

The Associated Press has learned that the recommendation has been made, and is expected to win approval from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The proposal was made without reservation, although it is against the stand of Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, outgoing Air Force chief of staff. LeMay retires at the end of this month.

There are about 54,000 Air Force ready reservists drawing pay for training. Sources said about 39,000 would be shifted to the National Guard. The remaining 15,000 are individual trainees and members of recovery squadrons already scheduled for disbanding. They probably will join 127,000 other air reservists in a non-pay status.

The Air Guard now totals about 73,000 men, and will be increased to 112,000.

Demo Leaders Study Love's Tax Proposals

By GORDON G. GAUSS
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Democratic leaders in the Colorado Legislature are studying intensively the tax proposals of Republican Gov. John A. Love.

The Democratic leaders even are calling in Prof. Reuben Zubrow of the University of Colorado, one of the principal architects of the 1959 tax program sponsored by then-Gov. Steve McNichols, a Democrat, Zubrow wrote the controversial income tax section of the McNichols program and late rhelped sell it to the legislature.

Zubrow appeared at a meeting of Democratic legislative leaders Friday afternoon when the study was launched. A second meeting will be held next Friday.

House Speaker Allen Dines, D-Denver, said the leaders "did not take a position for or against any particular thing" during the initial session and will come to a decision only when it can be backed solidly with facts and "the best professional advice we can get."

However, the Democrats did not change the position they took in comments made individually after Love's speech Friday — that his recommendations amount to a $38 million a year tax increase.

The governor placed a differnt interpretation on his program. He promised that all of the $31.6 million which he expects to raise by increasing the state sales tax from 2 per cent to 3 per cent will be used to replace local school taxes on property and said all the cigarette tax money will be allocated for construction at colleges and institutions. He called for a raise in the cigarette tax from 3 cents a package to 5 cents and estimated it would boost revenue from the levy by $5 million a year to between $12 and $13 million.

Republican leaders generally supported Love's tax plan, although some asked time to study it before taking a definite position. Those who want further study include Sen. Paul Wenke, R-Fort Collins, majority leader of the Senate, and Sen. Harry Locke, R-Hartsel, chairman of the Joint Budget Committee.

Rep. John G. Vanderhoof of Glenwood Springs, Republican leader in the House, said legislation will be introduced to assure that the money received by school boards will actually be used to reduce property taxes.

He expressed gratification at the plan, as did his assistant, Rep. John G. Mackie, R-Longmont.

Both Mackie and Rep. Palmer Burch of Denver, long an acknowledge GOP financial expressed belief that the program will be difficult to get passed, however. Burch also is chairman of the Denver Board of Education.

One lawmaker, who asked that he not be quoted by name, contended taxpayers are likely to feel the effect of the sales tax replacment for only two years at the most. After that, he predicted, property taxes for support of local school districts will return to their present level and then will resume their upward spiral.

WALT

Recently we spent an evening chatting about social etiquette with a group of seventh and eighth graders. Our young pals handed in questions for discussion. Perhaps you'll have fun recalling when your worries were identical with theirs.

Dear Ele and Walt: Would it be akward if a tall girl asked a shorter boy to a dance or social?—"13"

Dear "13": If the boy and girl have been pals for some time, and they're able to joke about their height difference, we'd say "yes," they could probably enjoy an evening together.

But if they're just casual acquaintances, the difference in inches might make them ill-at-ease.—Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele: Is is really necessary to escort the girl back to her seat after a dance? If so, why?—Clark

Dear Clark: No girl likes to be abandoned in the middle of the dance floor, and so the thoughtful fellow always returns his dance partner to the spot where he first found her—Ele

Dear Walt: If you want to ask a girl to a dance with you, how do you do it? And what do you do if she refuses?—Toby

Dear Toby: No need for fancy dialogue. Just go up to the girl and say, "May I have this dance?" (This is a bit nicer than grunting, "You wanna' dance?")

If she refuses, you stifle your impulse to slug her, and say instead, "Thank you, anyhow."

Even if she's not a lady (and certainly any lady would dance at least once with a guy who crossed "no man's land" to ask her), you can still be a gentleman.—Walt

Dear Ele and Walt: What other subjects can you talk about when you're dancing besides talking about the record that's being played? Do you have to look at each other as you dance? — R.B.

Dear R.B.: If it's a slow dance and you're not "walking the dog," yards apart, some conversation is indicated. Topics? Take your pick: sports, movies, TV shows, teachers, friends, clubs, jokes, et cetera.

The real point of conversation is to end your comment with a question that the other person can reply to, like so: "I think Herman Munster is w-i-l-d! What's your favorite TV show?" Then your partner doesn't have to dig deep to think of something to say.

You don't have to stare at each other constantly like a pair of dueling hypnotists, but you should glance at each other every now and then and smile. It's reasurring.—Ele and Walt.

Dear Walt: Why does a guy feel all funny when he's getting ready for a dance? Once I had to throw up. Is this normal?—Charlie

Dear Charlie: It's very normal to sweat whenever you tackle a new experience. You get nervous trying to gather courage to dive off the high board at the pool, and you sweat just as much when you're preparing to leap into social seas.

The only cure for your nerves is experience. Keep practicing and one day you'll discover the butterflies have abandoned your stomach.—Walt

Portsmouth Blasts Naval Yard Report

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — Did the death of the nuclear attack submarine Thresher lead to the impending death of her builder — the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard?

The Thresher broke up during a deep dive test in the Atlantic Ocean on April 10, 1963, some 220 miles off Cape Cod, with the loss of 129 lives.

Last November, the Defense Department included the Portsmouth yard among those getting an economy ax. The yard, oldest in the nation, is scheduled to be phased out over the next decade.

Last Saturday night, it was disclosed that a congressional investigating committee attributed the blame for the Thresher's loss to the yard, saying some of the standards and practices used in building the submarine were "short of those required" for safe operation.

Today, the Navy scheduled a news conference, presumably to deny that haste and poor workmanship led to the tragedy.

Capt. William Hushing, shipyard commander, said a special press briefing would "clarify and amplify" the congressional report.

The report by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy touched off a storm of protest.

An aide to New Hampshire Gov. John King termed the report "a black eye for Portsmouth."

A labor official at the shipyard said the Portsmouth yard is "still the best in the country." He flatly denied faulty workmanship.

Sen. Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., said he thinks the committee was looking for "a fall guy."

"And I don't buy the idea," McIntyre said.

Thomas Power, executive secretary to King, said: "This is past history. An investigation was made and the report says things were bad. But now there's a new commandant at Portsmouth and there are new and dramatic changes in the working methods."

The joint committee based its findings on previously secret testimony which included that of Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, called the "father of the atomic submarine."

Rickover said if a spot check of pipe joints in the non-nuclear part of the Thresher was "representative of all the Thresher's silver-brazed joints, this means the ship had several hundred substandard joints when she last went to sea."

Rickover also said several submarines, both nuclear and conventional, "came close to being lost" in recent years because of design and workmanship defects and faulty inspection procedures.

Reporter Gives Explanation of Health Program

EDITOR'S NOTE: Congress apparently will pass this year the program of health care for the elderly asked by President Johnson. Here is an explanation of just how the administration plan would work.

By GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anyone 65 or over — rich, poor or in between — would be eligible for government - paid hospital care under the administration's proposed program of health care for the elderly.

The only requirement would be that the patient pay the bill for the first day. After that, the government would pick up the tab for a maximum of 60 days per year, although it would not pay medical or surgical bills.

There would be no means test, and the patient would not have to be retired or even be under the Social Security system.

The administration proposal contains a deductible factor before the insurance begins to pay off. This deductible would be set at one day's national average cost of hospitalization.

There are these three frying benefits in addition to hospitalization:

—The government will pay for 30 days of outpatient service, beginning after the deductible factor. On outpatient service, the deductible would be half the amount of the cost of hospitalization — at current cost levels, about $20.

—The program would pay for home health service, such as a visiting nurse or other health worker, but not a doctor. This would include 240 such home visits a year.

—If, after hospitalization, a patient required treatment at a medical facility which has an arrangements with a hospital to continue the care, that also would be paid for up to 60 days. This is called post-hospital extended care. It would not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1967, however.

The administration's program would be under Social Security, though maintained in a separate fund. A special Social Security hospitalization tax would be imposed, starting at three-tenths of 1 per cent of earnings and increased to 45 hundredths of 1 per cent in 1960 and thereafter. The tax would be imposed on earnings up to $5,600 a year and would be matched by employers.

P30 1st add xx employers.

In dollar amounts, the hospitalization tax would work out this way:

When the plan reaches its peak in 1969, a person under Social Security earning $5,600 a year would pay $25.10 a year into the hospital insurance fund. Even if more were earned the same amount would be paid in; if less, there would be less paid in.

For those not under Social Security but eligible for the hospital insurance benefits, the federal government would pick up the tab. The bookkeeping arrangement would work this way:

The Social Security hospitalization fund would pay the costs of those over 65 collecting from the program but not covered by the Social Security retirement system. Then, each year Congress would appropriate money from the general treasury to repay the fund.

Thus, all taxpayers would subsidize the 2 million oldsters who would come under the plan but would not be under Social Security. In 1966, the cost of that subsidy from the general treasury is expected to be $10 million. In 1967 it would be $45 million. It would be expected to level off and decrease as more people come under Social Security.

The subsidy is only a small fraction of the program. The remainder of it is pay-as-you-go on the basis of the new Social Security taxes.

In the first year of operation, the new hospitalization fund would be expected to take in $1.3 billion but pay out only about $800 million. In the second year, 1967, it would take in almost $2 billion and pay out $1.75 billion.

Planners say the fund would not go broke or get shaky regardless of how high hospital costs go.

They say the fund is set up to handle higher hospital costs for as far into the future as it is possible to plan. Administration planners have based the fund on these assumptions: That for the next 10 years, hospital costs will rise faster than earnings, and that if hospital prices rise 710 per cent over the next 75 years, the fund still will be financially sound.

The way it now is planned, the wage-earners' weekly paycheck would not show the amount of the new tax—at the peak level it would be a maximum of 48 cents a week. But at the end of the year, the Internal Revenue Services, W-2 form (statement of the year's earnings) would show the amount set aside from Social Security.

Nuclear Sub Collides With Freighter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. nuclear-powered submarine Ethan Allen collided early Sunday with a Norwegian freighter in the Mediterranean Sea but damage was negligible, the Defense Department reported.

Both ships continued on their way after exchanging identifications. No casualties were reported.

The Ethan Allen, which cost $105 million, is one of three submarines carrying Polaris missiles on duty in the Mediterranean.

The Norwegian freighter was the Octavian. No information was available here on its home port.

It was learned that the Ethan Allen was at periscope depth when the collision occurred — reportedly in the western end of the Mediterranean.

The official announcement said:

"While on a routine transit of the Mediterranean Sea and the U.S. Navy submarine Ethan Allen had a minor collision with a Norwegian freighter SS Octavian. Damage was negligible and both proceeded with their normal missions after exchanging identifications."

The use of the term "transit" indicated the Ethan Allen might have been returning to its base Holy Loch, Scotland.

European Movie Fad Slated for Fadeout

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —The dirty shirt, pseudo-intellectual European movie fad known as the Nouvelle Vague will be missing from the scene in 1965.

Authority for this prediction is French director Serge Bourguignon who says: "The Nouvelle Vague is a very old vague now, I'm afraid. And it never was worthwhile.

"It was a fashion, like women's dresses, that quickly died out. Actually, Nouvelle Vague could be applied to any movie maker in France who could make a picture for $100,000 or less and find some art house to play it in."

Bourguignon is a fiery 34-year-old Parisian who came to Hollywood to direct "The Reward" at 20th Century-Fox, his first major commercial movie.

Date Palm Pollination Spells Trouble

By ROBERT COOKE

COACHELLA, Calif. (AP) — Sex, high in the sky, is big business here, and it faces disaster soon if new male agricultural midwives aren't located in a hurry.

Trouble is, the pollination of a date palm takes place at the top of a 50-fot ladder.

Growers say most men trained for this rugged work have returned to Mexico, unable to work here because the controversial bracero act expired last Dec. 31. New workers, they say, don't like the work at that altitude.

Braceros, Mexican laborers admitted for agricultural work, were trained over many years to pollinate and otherwise care for the date crop. They also picked the annual $8-million crop.

An esitmated 750 date pickers are needed now to work on the 4,000-acre Coachella Valley crop with about 25 per cent of last year's fruit remaining to be picked.

Growers will also need about 350 men for the pollination chore, which usually gets under way in March or April.

Leland Yost, manager of the Coachella Vally Farmers Association, said the growers are willing to train new workers "if we can get men willing to work. They have to be motivated."

Yost said that "if the pollination is not done, there ill be no crop next year."

Pollination once was done by the wind. Since then, man has streamlined things to produce more, bigger and better dates.

Under natural conditions, when date groves grow from seeds, male and female trees grow in about equal numbers. Today, in modern groves, growers depend on the harem principle.

Horticulturist Roy Nixon of the U.S. date and citrus station, Indio, Calif., said the groves are planted with only one male tree for each 100 female trees.

Some growers send a man up the male tree to pick branches of flowers containing pollen, then send him up the female trees, where the male branches are tied among the female flowers and covered.

Other farmers send the man up the female tree with the male branches just to sprinkle the dust on the female flowers. Still others saturate a cotton ball with pollen and set it among the female blossoms. One grower developed a gun type tool to spray the pollen on the female flowers.

Anyway, each method does the job so well that workers are needed later to climb back up the trees to take off some of the unripe dates. Though some dates are lost this way, the remaining dates grow bigger.

That's the problem. If they want dates, someone has to scuttle up that ladder in March or April, pick up a little pollen, climb down the ladder, then run up another ladder and sprinkle the pollen, one way or another, on the female flowers.

Actually, it is done with more efficiency than that, but it takes a man who can work 50 feet in the air without holding on. Date pickers face many of the same problems.

"Date pickers are a special breed," a growers' spokesman said. "They have to be able to work 40 or 50 feet above ground on ladders or in bosun's chairs without being so scared they hang on with the hands they have to pick the dates with."

Growers' hopes for a return of the braceros, however, appear dim.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said in Washington that there is "no present prospect" of bringing in any foreign workers to meet growers' demands.

Administration planners have based the fund on these assumptions: That for the next 10 years, hospital costs will rise faster than earnings, and that if hospital prices rise 710 per cent over the next 75 years, the fund still will be financially sound.

The way it now is planned, the wage-earners' weekly paycheck would not show the amount of the new tax—at the peak level it would be a maximum of 48 cents a week. But at the end of the year, the Internal Revenue Services, W-2 form (statement of the year's earnings) would show the amount set aside from Social Security.

Nuclear Sub Collides With Freighter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. nuclear-powered submarine Ethan Allen collided early Sunday with a Norwegian freighter in the Mediterranean Sea but damage was negligible, the Defense Department reported.

Both ships continued on their way after exchanging identifications. No casualties were reported.

The Ethan Allen, which cost $105 million, is one of three submarines carrying Polaris missiles on duty in the Mediterranean.

The Norwegian freighter was the Octavian. No information was available here on its home port.

It was learned that the Ethan Allen was at periscope depth when the collision occurred — reportedly in the western end of the Mediterranean.

The official announcement said:

"While on a routine transit of the Mediterranean Sea and the U.S. Navy submarine Ethan Allen had a minor collision with a Norwegian freighter SS Octavian. Damage was negligible and both proceeded with their normal missions after exchanging identifications."

The use of the term "transit" indicated the Ethan Allen might have been returning to its base Holy Loch, Scotland.
